Lockout By Major Owners

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—Trucking industry negotiators announced today a United States-wide shutdown of 1,500 major firms will begin at midnight tonight in retaliation for continuing Teamsters Union strikes.

M. M. Gordon, president of Trucking Employers, Inc., announced the lockout action that would affect some 250,000 of the 450,000 Teamsters Union members involved in national contract negotiations with the industry.

The scheduled shutdown would affect the biggest U.S. trucking firms — they carry about 65 per cent of all truck freight—and bring the worst trucking shutdown in U.S. history.

Earlier in the week, when the threat of a lockout arose during contract negotiations between the union and Trucking Employers Inc., acting Teamsters' president Frank E. Fitzsimmons said: "If we strike and they lock us out, you'll have the damndest strike this country has ever seen."

Gordon said he had no indication from federal officials as to whether an 80-day federal injunction might be issued to halt the strikes and lockout.

Gordon said the industry meanwhile will continue negotiating with the teamsters at the request of federal mediators.

Gordon said at least a dozen teamsters strikes are still going on.

CONTRACT EXPIRED

He said these were among 38 hit-and-run teamsters strikes that had occurred since the old national contract expired eight days ago.

Gordon said the only conditions under which the U.S.-wide shutdown would be called off—would be a halt to all strikes and a promise by teamsters' officials that there would be no more walkouts while negotiations continue.

TEI, which said more than 30 strikes had occurred in major cities, stuck with its wage offer of 44 cents an hour over a three-year contract, including an 11-cent cost-of-living adjustment, plus what it said was another 12 cents in fringe benefits and six cents in additional cost-of-living payments.

An industry spokesman said this 62-cent package offer compared with teamsters' demands totalling 90 cents an hour.

WRECKAGE of South Korean Air Force plane is inspected by police in Seoul. Plane crashed into a slum, killing all 14 persons aboard and 41 others on the ground. Explosion spread flames to wooden buildings and to nearby school, burning and injuring many youngsters.

Korean Plane Crash Kills 55, Hurts 30

SEOUL (AP) — A twin-engine South Korean Air Force transport plane smashed into a Seoul slum area today. Officials said 55 persons died—including all 14 aboard the plane and 41 on the ground.

They added that six persons were missing and 30 were injured.

The crash set off a huge fire that trapped many victims inside their wooden houses. The injured included 13 high school students who jumped from second-floor classrooms after the plane exploded 50 yards from their school.

Among the dead were the pilot, Capt. Suh Keun-joo, two crew members and 11 passengers on the plane. Besides the students, 17 persons were severely burned or injured.

Authorities said the C-46 transport belonging to the 5th Air Transport Squadron fell shortly before noon, five minutes after taking off in a drizzle from Yoido air base on a flight to Taegu, 130 miles to the southeast.

Eyewitnesses reported that the plane appeared to have engine trouble. They said it circled at low altitude three times, struck the dome of a Christian church on a hill and crashed in flames.

A series of explosions followed as gasoline spilled from the plane and spread the fire over an area 225 yards wide. About 30 wooden buildings housing about 70 families were burned.

Narrow alleys kept fire engines from reaching the area but the blaze was brought under control in 1½ hours.

Rescue workers recovered 15 bodies, including those of crew members and children, within two hours of the crash. More than 10 persons were in hospital with serious burns.

CANADIAN OPTIONS OUTLINED ON DEFENCE

Simmering beneath the surface of Canada's defence policy—and far more vital than the current uproar over armed forces unification—is the question of Canada's future in the North American Air Defence Alliance with the United States.

If the Canadian decision is to renew the alliance which expires next spring, we could find ourselves involved in a multi-billion-dollar anti-ballistics missile defence system which would transform this country into an atomic fortress. Discussions are now being carried on between Canada and the U.S. about the future of NORAD, but this future hinges directly on other talks between Washington and Moscow over the possibility of a moratorium on the building of anti-ballistics missile defences.

In a four-part series starting today on Page 5, Ottawa commentator Peter C. Newman outlines Canada's involvement in NORAD and the options for the future.

HANGOVERS HIKE HIGHWAY SLAUGHTER

That Morning After Is Murder

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—A sober man with a hangover may be a bigger menace behind the wheel of a car than a man who has just had a few cracks at the bottle, says Dr. C. B. Gibbs of the National Research Council.

Moreover, other forms of stress such as lack of sleep and, in particular, frustration, are major causes of car accidents.

In a paper prepared for the Commons justice committee after four years of research, Dr. Gibbs says the driving problem seems to stem from a small minority of drivers with marginal driving ability and low tolerance to stress.

Even if liquor were prohibited entirely "these drivers would probably still cause accidents because of the effects of the many other forms of stress."

He found that some drivers with low readings in breath-analysis tests performed a set of skill tests worse than others with higher readings.

Consequently, when it comes to alcoholic impairment, "the use of the breathalyzer alone could condemn the relatively innocent and exonerate the more guilty."

He has developed an instrument which he calls a "stress-alyzer." It detects individual differences in speed, precision and accuracy and in the preference for speed or accuracy.

Reactions of teen-aged drivers are usually more rapid and precise than those of adults. But youths had less experience of improbable events and thus often reacted too quickly on the mistaken assumption that the more familiar event would occur.

Moderate intoxication did not appreciably impair the ability to deal with familiar driving situations. But it increased markedly the time needed to reach a proper decision in unfamiliar ones.

BURNING U.S. FLAG near Place d'Lena in Paris during visit by Vice-President Hubert Humphrey are young demonstrators who protested U.S. involvement in Vietnam war. Humphrey later faced demonstrators in Belgium but they were less violent than in France. (AP Wirephoto.)

New Protests In Belgium Face Humphrey

BRUSSELS (AP)—U.S. Vice-President Hubert Humphrey flew from Paris to Belgium today on the final visit of his European tour and what was expected to be a relaxed week-end of conferences and ceremony.

But as he lunched with King Baudouin and later conferred with Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel, anti-war demonstrations erupted downtown. They were less violent than the egg-throwing, flag-burning demonstrations in Paris.

Pro-Chinese Communists paraded briefly but were dispersed by police. In another part of the city, the Union for the Defence of Peace paraded with posters assailing U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.

Six persons were seized by police.

HAD PAINT CANS

Earlier, three men with cans of powdered paint were taken into custody and ordered held until Humphrey's departure.

Premier Paul van den Boeynants greeted Humphrey and his wife at Melsbroeck air force base near Brussels.

"We welcome and value the efforts which you and your country and the people of Europe are making to build a new and vital community within Europe," Humphrey said.

As Humphrey left Orly airfield in Paris, about 250 youths waved banners, scattered leaflets and shouted for peace in Vietnam in a renewal of anti-American demonstrations called by the French Communist party.

Police cleared traffic from the highway from Paris for Humphrey's ride to Orly and kept pedestrians from standing along the road. Overpasses were guarded. Two policemen with machine-guns had stayed in Humphrey's plane during the night.

OCEAN LANDING PADS DESIGNED FOR 'COPTERS

LONDON (AP)—A project that calls for establishment of a chain of floating islands across the Atlantic to provide aircraft radar control and landing areas for helicopters has been developed by the British Vickers group.

Vickers, which has been working on the project in association with Standard Telephones, announced details of the project Friday.

Prime purpose of the islands would be to extend the control of civil aircraft movements by radar over the sea.

Leonard Redshaw, managing director of the Vickers shipbuilding group, said the key to the design of the islands is an anchoring system capable of holding them in a precise position in 2,000 fathoms.

The platforms, which would resemble oil rigs, would be about 100 feet in diameter.

UN Mission Considers British Talk Offer

ROME (AP)—The three-man UN mission on Aden flew toward Geneva today despite the British government's invitation to go to London to talk over the mission's charge that the British had not co-operated with it. (See also page 33.)

The mission's chairman, Manuel Perezguerrero of Venezuela, said 'We have not yet decided whether to accept the invitation to go to London.''

With Perez were the other two mission members, Abdussattar Shalizi of Afghanistan and Moussa Leo Keita of Mali.

The three flew out of the British South Arabian protectorate of Aden Friday, cutting short their fact-finding trip after five days. Their visit was marked by violence by Arab nationalists trying to discredit the South Arabian federal government.

Perez and his aides consulted briefly at the Rome airport with UN Secretary-General U Thant, who arrived a few minutes later for talks with Pope Paul and Italian officials as he headed for the Far East.

QUEBEC MINISTER BLASTS SEPARATISM

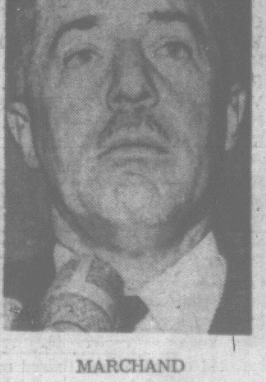
'Simple Demagogery'

QUEBEC (CP) — Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, clenching his fists during a 35-minute defence of Confederation, Friday night slapped aside separatism for Quebec as "pure and simple demagogery."

Mr. Marchand spoke before a Liberal audience of more than 1,000 at a $10-a-plate banquet honoring him as new leader of the Quebec Liberals in the federal government at Ottawa.

He was flanked by at least eight federal cabinet ministers, including External Affairs Minister Martin. Also attending was former prime minister Louis St. Laurent, who applauded the Marchand remarks vigorously.

"I am celebrating the centennial of Confederation," said Mr. Marchand, a former leader of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, to prolonged applause.



MARCHAND
. . . 'enormous influence'

Mr. Marchand said that with the British North America Act of 1867 "for the first time in our history we had an act which accords formal rights to French-Canadians in Canada."

French-Canadians were given rights to education, resources in Quebec and the right to use their language. They in fact had "all the fundamental liberties."

He said there are "injustices, false tensions and false differences."

Among these was the tendency of some to oversimplify the problems of Quebec and blame Confederation as the source of everything that went

Transferring Mess Isn't the Answer

By JIM HUME

That was quite a campaign Ald. Percy Frampton mounted for getting the Crystal Garden reconverted to a salt-water swimming pool.

We hope he made provision in his budget for a few thousand dollars for filter beds.

After all he did say, in his letter to the editor, that salt water was only a block away. And that could only mean the Inner Harbor.

Hume

Beautiful though that little stretch of water is, piping the murky effluents into the clear Crystal pool would hardly encourage parents to send their young for swimming lessons.

The old swimmin' 'ole on the river is one thing. The same muddy mess in the Crystal another.

While on the subject of the waterfront: The suggestion that the proposed convention centre be built on the site of the Ocean Cement plant (to be vacated within the next four or five years) is the best yet.

Even Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, up until now a staunch supporter of the arena-curling rink site, is convinced.

Sipping coffee with Victoria's best-known elected horseman Friday morning, he admitted quite freely that if the centre could be built where the planners recommended as far back as 1960, it would be ideal.

"I was all in favor of the arena site because I could see it saving money, but the idea of being able to build it overlooking the harbor is far better," he said staunchly. "I'm all for it."

He paid for the coffee, too, so he must have been serious.

Not so Ald. Hugh Ramsay.

He's still in favor of the arena spot, even though the planning department says to build the centre there would be to give Saanich its biggest development boost in years.

The planners claim, and with some justification, that with the majority of hotels across town from the arena, it would be easier to commute from Saanich to the arena than it would to travel from, say, the Empress to the same spot.

Ald. Ramsay gets a little grumpy when you tell him what the planners think and sums up his comments in one terse: "I'm from Missouri."

Guess he'll have to be shown.

One of the rumbles running fairly free around city hall corridors these days is that one of the solutions to the "what can we do with our young people" question will be, to say the least, dramatic.

It has only been suggested behind closed doors to date, but it could blossom forth some time soon—and it has nothing to do with banning beards, guitars or happenings.

Here it is, to digest over the weekend and comment on next week with letters to the mayor, city council and editors.

Someone has had the temerity to suggest that the city make available a plot of land, that local businessmen make available the materials, that local architects make available the supervisory staff, that local youth make available the manpower—and that the young people build their own community centre.

Hammers—missing nails—may ruin many a guitar finger, and the sweat of the brow may leave little time for pot or LSD, but it would be quite an achievement, wouldn't it?

And a Friday night happening on the building site would leave Bastion Square free for casual, quiet wanderers for at least a few summer nights.

Three Drivers Grounded During Major Car Check

City police grounded three drivers on the spot Friday night using a new law which empowers them to impose 24-hour driving suspensions on tippling motorists.

None of the drivers asked for the voluntary breath test which would have shown whether or not they had enough alcohol to be considered "under the influence."

The three were among 1,374 drivers checked by three squads operating road safety checks from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m.

One driver was arrested for being impaired and another for driving while his licence was under suspension.

Twenty-seven others received court summonses for offences ranging from having faulty emergency brakes to being minors without car insurance.

A total of 296 drivers were handed warning tickets requiring them to effect repairs to their vehicles and then bring them to the Fisgard Street station to be checked.

Of these, 112 tickets were issued for not having a licence plate illumination light. In 37 cases brake lights were faulty, and on 32 vehicles, headlights were burned out.

Eleven drivers were nabbed for not having horns working. Two had a licence plate missing.

The lane checks were set up on Douglas, Government, Hillside and Esquimalt Road.

You Can 'Choose' Own Family Tree

Have you a family tree?

If not, you can get one at Thomas Francis Park for five dollars.

Sixty Victorians, young and old have bought trees planted there recently by the junior branch, Victoria Natural History Society.

Their names will be inscribed on aluminum plaques and placed at the foot of the tree of their choice.

The money—$300 so far—will be used to build a lecture room adjacent to the Nature Sanctuary operated by the junior naturalists at Thomas Francis Park.

"This is one good way of giving your family something they can be proud of," says Freeman (Skipper) King, president of the junior branch.

"Last week a man with a burned-out pension donated five dollars for this purpose. Parents have also bought them for their children."

Mr. King said his junior naturalists have planted seedlings over a five-acre site which was razed by fire about three years ago.

Tree-buyers have the choice of Douglas fir, Jack Pine, Garry Oak and Arbutus.

"If a tree dies we will replace it," Mr. King said. "In a year's time the trees will be about three feet high. In 100 years they will be giants."

Tree-buyers can contact Mr. King at 479-2966 or Dick Moyer, secretary of the Thomas Francis parks board, at 479-2647.

Driver Pays Fine of $300

John Richardson, 26, of 349 Walter Street, was fined $300 in traffic court Friday for impaired driving.

The charge arose after he was involved in an accident early Feb. 28 in the 1500 block Beach Drive. Richardson was also barred from driving for four months except for business purposes.

Fined for careless driving:

Armour Garland of Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, $35; Mrs. Patricia Olson, 645 Island Highway, $35; Brian Rogers, 613 Sturdee St., Esquimalt, $35; and Hazel Sherratt, 1725 Beach Drive, $35.

Mini-Warning

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Pan-American Life Insurance Co., personnel department sent this directive Friday to female employees of its executive offices: "With the coming of warm weather, we find it necessary to remind all employees of proper office attire. To be quite honest, mini-style dresses and skirts are hardly the proper attire for maintaining a proper business atmosphere."

Ex-Plumbing Contractor Dies at 58

The former owner of Oak Bay Plumbing and Heating, Joseph McAllister, died Friday. He was 58.

He leaves his wife, Jean, at the family home, 280 King George Terrace; daughter Mrs. James (Valerie) Trimble, two grandchildren, and his mother, Mrs. Sarah McAllister, all of Victoria.

Services under the auspices of Elks Lodge No. 2 will be held in Sands Mortuary Memorial Chapel of Chimes Tuesday at 1 p.m. Cremation will follow.

awry for the province in the last 100 years.

Those who portrayed Confederation as the source of "injustice" were indulging in "pure and simple demagogery." Waving clenched fists, Mr. Marchand said: "It's just not true."

Mr. Marchand, who replaced former justice minister Guy Favreau as head of the Quebec caucus in Ottawa, said many Quebec problems "have nothing at all to do with Confederation."

He singled out as the "fundamental problem" the proximity of the United States, whose huge English-speaking population exerted "an enormous influence."

The incursions of U.S. culture through communications and technology would not stop if Quebec left Confederation. Quebecers had to look upon themselves as North Americans.

The best protection against this influence was Confederation, but this did not mean Quebec politicians should stop their fight for rights which belonged to their province.

"What had to be resisted was "pure and simple demagogery."

"The greatest revolution in Quebec," he said, was when the provincial government of former Liberal premier Jean Lesage decided to set up a Quebec department of education. History would prove this to be an event of utmost significance for French-Canadians.

Youth Jailed For Car Theft

One of two teenagers who stole a car last month was jailed for eight months Friday.

A probation officer's report showed Robert Devine, 17, of 414 Hillside, had already been in a correctional institution several times, Magistrate Byers told the youth.

He sentenced him to an eight-month definite and four-month indeterminate term at the Haney Young Offender's Unit.

Devine and James Rumney, 18, of 534 Hillside, were earlier convicted of stealing a car from Morrison Chevrolet Oldsmobile Ltd., 3050 Douglas, on March 24.

The magistrate noted Rumney had no previous criminal history. For his part in the theft the youth was given a one-year suspended sentence.

TRACTOR INCIDENT ESCALATED

Aggression Charged on Border

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel and Syria charged each other with aggression after fighting Friday the sharpest Middle East air battle since the Arab-Israeli war of 1948 in a dispute over border farmland.

Israel took its charges to the United Nations, but asked for no specific action by the Security Council.

Israel claimed it shot down six Syrian MiG-21s in three dogfights. It said no Israeli Mirage fighters were lost, but one man was killed and one wounded in fighting with tanks and artillery.

Syria claimed it downed five Israeli planes and killed at least 70 Israelis, and acknowledged losing four of its own planes. It reported five dead and an unspecified number injured.

Israeli Ambassador Michael Comay sent a letter to Canadian Ambassador George Ignatieff, Security Council president this month, to inform him of what Comay called "continuing acts of aggression and provocation by Syrian armed forces."

BACK SYRIA

Verbal backing for Syria came quickly from its Arab neighbors, Jordan, Lebanon and Iraq. The Iraqis said they were prepared "to extend the fullest support to Syria against the Israeli aggression."

But, despite a unified Arab military command designed to combat Israel, none sent military aid. Syria said the battle broke out when an Israeli tractor crossed into the demilitarized zone and began plowing.

"We asked repeatedly that the tractor be removed, but the enemy refused, so we were forced to open fire," said a communique from Damascus.

Israel's army chief of staff, Gen. Izhak Rabin, said that after one Israeli tractor was damaged, armored tractors were brought in.

"The action quickly escalated when the Syrians brought in heavy mortars and artillery and also started direct shelling of Israeli settlements," Rabin said.

The clash was the most serious Israeli-Arab battle since Israel invaded the Egyptian Peninsula in 1956. In that battle, French-built Israeli planes destroyed the Egyptian MiG air-strike power on the ground,

Judgment Reserved In CP Money Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge Alfred Swencisky reserved decision Friday until April 28 on the $1,200,000 mutilated money robbery from the Canadian Pacific Railway.

David Harrison, a former Vancouver policeman, is charged with robbery and possession of stolen money. He has pleaded not guilty.

The money, with three large holes punched through each bill, was taken from a CPR warehouse Feb. 11, 1965, by four men. The money was to be shipped to Ottawa for destruction.

During Harrison's trial, tapes were played of conversations between the accused and two RCMP undercover operatives posing as gangsters.

Harrison testified he told the two operatives, whom he believed to be toughs, a faked story to impress them during a drinking and bragging session in hotel rooms at Kamloops and Vernon.

EVEN THE SUPERMARKET . . .
NEEDS JOURNEYMEN MECHANICS

It's a safe bet that the average housewife doing her household shopping in the neighborhood super-market never gives a thought to the Journeymen Mechanics of the plumbing and heating industry.

Why should she? Simply because without the trade skills of those men the super-market wouldn't exist.

Those gleaming white refrigerated displays of meat, those long, open deepfreezes full of frozen foods just wouldn't be there unless the mechanical contractors of Victoria had the skilled men to do the behind-the-scenes work.

The skilled technicians of the industry don't confine their work to super-markets.

They are available to everyone in the community whether it be to provide the hook-up for the latest in dish washers or to advise you on how to heat the basement rumpus room.

They are highly skilled men, proud of their craft.

B.C. JOINING EQUIPMENT SALE BOYCOTT

VANCOUVER (CP)—Farmers in British Columbia say they are ready to join a national boycott against buying high-priced farm machinery.

John Mertler, vice-president of the National Farmers' Union in B.C., said Friday ballots collected so far show overwhelming support for such a boycott.

Mr. Mertler said, "It's time that farmers did something. The price of machinery has been going up every year and is continuing to go up . . . but our products have remained the same."

Farmers Plan New Pressures

OTTAWA (CP) — Farm organizations moved Friday to use pressure on the federal government to giving farmers a better financial break.

The National Farmers' Union decided to ask its 80,000 members to halt indefinitely the purchase of automobiles, trucks and farm equipment.

The aim is to dramatize the farmers' case for higher income through a sharply increased role in the farm industry by both federal and provincial governments.

The NFU's powerful Ontario branch decided to organize a mass demonstration at the Parliament Buildings to protest what president John Dolmer called the inadequate federal dairy policy.

The new policy, in effect since April 1, gives the farmer $4.75 a hundredweight for manufacturing milk, 25 cents short of the price sought by many farm organizations.

Both the boycott and demonstration plans were launched at Ottawa meetings of the organizations' top officials.

CFA MEETS GREENE

The NFU's national rival, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, sent 20 officials to a meeting with Agriculture Minister Greene to seek a review of the dairy policy, but said later there was no hope for much improvement in funds allotted to the industry.

The CFA says cream shippers suffer discrimination because they lack the federal support for skim milk powder.

The CFA also told Mr. Greene the promised $4.75 to dairy producers will not materialize under the new policy, but will fall 10 cents or more short.

On the bright side, the government did not rule out a second look at the problems of farmers who produce both milk for industrial use and the table. These farmers lost their industrial milk subsidy under the new policy.

On the buying boycott, Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, NFU president, told a press conference that pledge cards are being circulated among farmers to allow them to sign up for the boycott. It starts now and will continue until the government changes its approach.

WANTS OUTSIDERS TOO

Mr. Atkinson said the CFA had not been asked to cooperate in the boycott, but he hoped farmers outside the NFU would do so.

Boycotters would continue to buy "soft" goods such as fertilizer, seed and so on to keep the farm going but they would make do with old equipment by pooling resources.

NFU membership accounts for about one-quarter of the farm force in the four western provinces and Ontario.

Mr. Dolmer said the date for the OFU demonstration in Ottawa would be set at an April 12 meeting of the organization's board. Tractors might be used, he said.

The CFA's Ontario branch may also be planning independent protest action. It will decide what steps to take at a meeting in Toronto next Thursday of the representatives of its 80 member bodies.

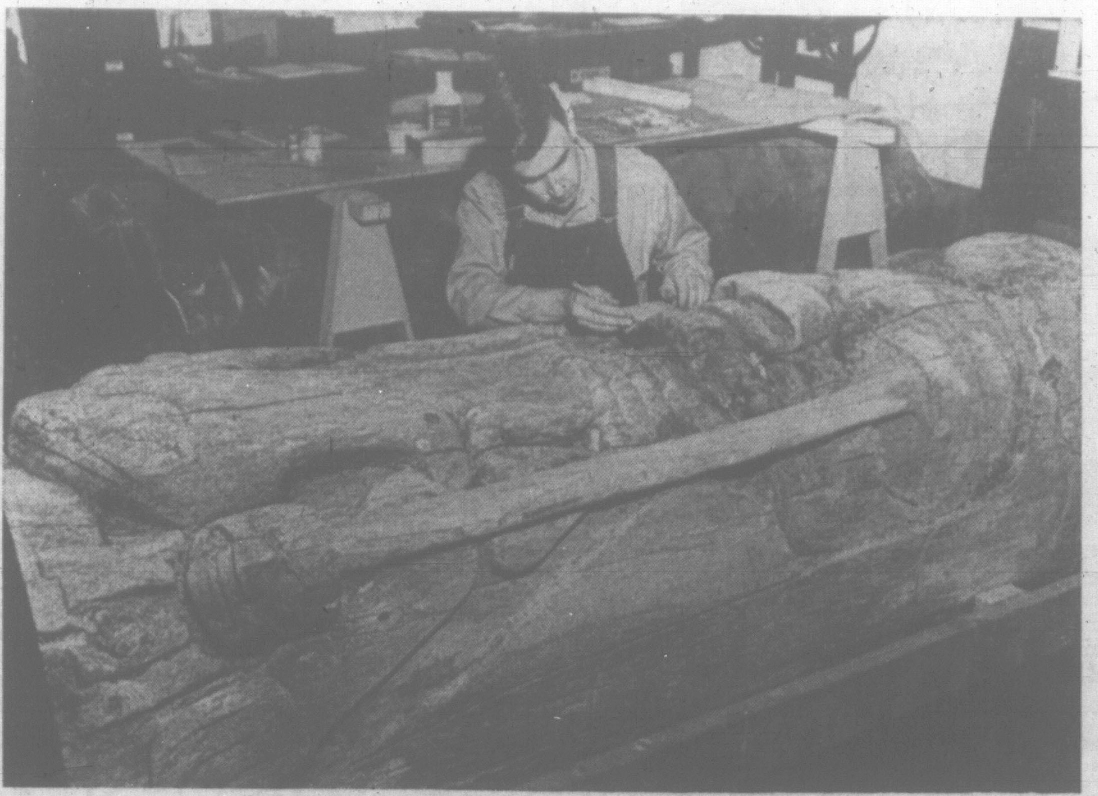
No Share, No Bridge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday he was told by Premier Bennett that provincial participation in a new First Narrows crossing for Vancouver is dead if the municipalities refuse to contribute to the cost.

Mr. Campbell said the premier told him in a telephone conversation the issue is dead unless the municipalities put up a $13,000,000 share.

Mr. Campbell said the conversation was about a combination tunnel-bridge traffic crossing for Burrard Inlet. The premier has proposed a twin-span for the existing Lions Gate suspension bridge.

Vancouver city council voted 10-1 last Tuesday against contributing any money to a new traffic crossing.



RESTORING "WEEPING POLE" — one of only two in existence—is John Smyly of the Provincial Museum staff. The pole section is from original that was 40 feet high and collected by Wilson Duff in 1954 from Queen Charlotte Islands. The long pole-like arm is a tear running from the eye to form a human face. It will be one of the exhibits in the new museum. The other such pole is in the Smithsonian Institute.

IT'S AN ILL WIND THAT CLEARS PLANT

KING'S LYNN, England (UPI) — Five hundred men at a ball-bearing factory here went on strike Friday because a draft blew on two fellow workers.

The two complained repeatedly that the draft was blowing on them through a crack in a workshop wall. The management did nothing about it—so they walked out.

When they came back they were suspended—and 500 colleagues struck in protest. "Conditions are bad when a cold draft is blowing down your ear," said one.

Perjury Charge Hinted at Hearing

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of a royal commission into invasion of privacy Friday suggested that the commission counsel consider laying a charge of perjury against a Vancouver car salesman.

Commissioner R. A. Sargent said this after William John Hennekan gave statements under oath that were different from those given to commission investigator Lawrence Kelly.

Earlier, Mr. Sargent had stopped Mr. Hennekan's testimony to ask him if he knew the meaning of perjury.

The reprimand came after commission counsel George Murray asked Mr. Hennekan if he was instructed at Eagle Motors Ltd. to go into the office to handle sales deals.

Mr. Hennekan said he could sell anywhere on the lot. Mr. Murray pointed out that in his statement to Mr. Kelly on Jan. 24, he had said all deals and financing had to be discussed in the selling cubicle.

Previous testimony disclosed that these cubicles often contain listening devices.

French Cabinet Shuffled After Losses

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle has approved a new French government headed by Premier Georges Pompidou and retaining Maurice Couve de Murville as foreign minister.

An official announcement Friday night said Pierre Messmer also kept his post as defence minister.

Eight new men were introduced to the government and seven dropped, including two former cabinet members—Alexandre Sanguinetti and Jean Charbonnel who both lost their seats in a general election last month.

Pompidou and his cabinet resigned Saturday to allow ministers elected to the National Assembly in the election to take part in important votes in the House.

Committee to Probe Nurses' Pay Demands

The provincial cabinet Friday proposed establishment of a fact-finding committee to inquire into wage demands of psychiatric nurses at B.C. mental institutions.

The nurses have announced they plan a mass resignation if necesssary to back demands.

Premier Bennett, in an announcement following a special cabinet meeting Friday, said establishment of a three-man fact-finding group will be recommended to the civil service commission.

The inquiry board would be composed of representatives of the commission and the psychiatric nurses association, the premier said. A third member would be selected by the other two to act as chairman.

Earlier in Vancouver, a spokesman for the registered nurses said attempts are being made to intimidate the protesting nurses.

Richmond McClymont, president of the Registered Nurses Association at Riverview Mental Hospital, said two non-Canadian nurses were told by a hospital official they would lose their right to become citizens if they joined the resignation which is scheduled to start June 1.

REVIEW PAY

About 800 of the 1,500 registered and psychiatric nurses in the province have voted to resign unless the provincial government agrees to establish an arbitration board to review their wage demands.

The nurses are seeking a 25 per cent increase for psychiatric nurses and 22 per cent for registered nurses.

Municipalities for Indians

HOPE IS AGAIN RAISED THAT at least one of the more advanced Indian communities in this province can be encouraged to set itself up as a municipality with its own local government accepting responsibility for certain local services.

The possibility of success for the proposal seems greater today than on previous occasions. The general outline of the provincial plan now under consideration would provide the mechanism for municipal government but would not, it appears, deprive Indians of their special status as Indians, and it would prevent the alienation of parcels of Indian land by non-Indians.

As the scheme has been described by the minister of municipal affairs, the creation of an Indian municipality on a pilot plan basis would avoid the chief difficulties that prevented the Metlakatlas from taking that step in 1956. At that time problems of land ownership were not solved, and the issue of enfranchisement, by which Indians would sacrifice their special status in order to become conventional Canadian citizens, blocked transition. Further, there were doubts about the economic viability of Metlakatla if it did assume municipal status.

The provincial authorities, continuing the pioneering work done by pre-Social Credit administrations to help the Indian to cope with social organization in the modern age, appreciate the fact that jurisdiction over the bands rests largely with the federal government. To proceed along lines suggested here would require amendment of the Indian Act and a high degree of co-operation between the governments in Victoria and at Ottawa.

There is no assurance that even with a will to co-operate the two governments could untangle the various responsibilities imposed on each in regard to Indians. The British Columbia announcement nevertheless indicates a willingness to try, and a progressive attitude in Ottawa might make the effort fruitful.

Cape Mudge has been suggested as a suitable centre for a pilot project. That community has been selected because, although it is a settlement dependent very largely on a single industry, fishing, it is among the more successful and progressive Indian communities of the province. If arrangements can be made there to give the Indian people a larger share of self-government, with greater jurisdiction over schools and conventional municipal services, a significant stride forward would be made.

The intent is to assist the Indians to adjust to the type of society and social organization which they can scarcely avoid in the changing world, but in such a manner that their status and character as Indians would not be eliminated. The plan is a promising one that deserves constructive consideration.

Later Proof of the Pudding

FURTHER CUTS IN THE BANK rates in Canada and the United States this week—from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent in Canada and from 4½ per cent to 4 per cent in the United States—resulted in an ambivalent reaction in the financial community.

On the one hand there were those who hailed the strong central bank signal for an increase in the money supply as just what was needed to stimulate a somewhat lagging economy. For others, though, the implication was that the move could be intended to head off an incipient recession, with no certainty it would be successful.

Hovering over the decision, as well, is always the fear of setting off another speculative boom which would rebound some months from now in another round of inflationary pressures. In all this central manipulation of the money markets, timing is everything. The difficulty is that it isn't easy to know the right time to institute measures to stimulate or retard the economy. The science, or art, of economics is notorious for its inexactitudes. There are so many factors, material and psychological, to be taken into account that this is hardly surprising.

One area where lower interest rates and a stronger money supply will provide a decided and badly-needed stimulus is in the housing industry. The backlog of demand in housing can be measured in years, not in months, and a fast start on catching up can be anticipated. In some other sectors of the economy, however, notably autos and durable consumer goods, inventories are heavy and a working-off period will be necessary. Capital spending intentions, lagging because of high cost of financing, could well pick up.

By midsummer the picture will be clearer and there are grounds for optimism regarding the outlook because of the increasing adroitness displayed in recent years by central bankers and governments—the result of experience and careful study —in fiscal and monetary management.

Civilian Target

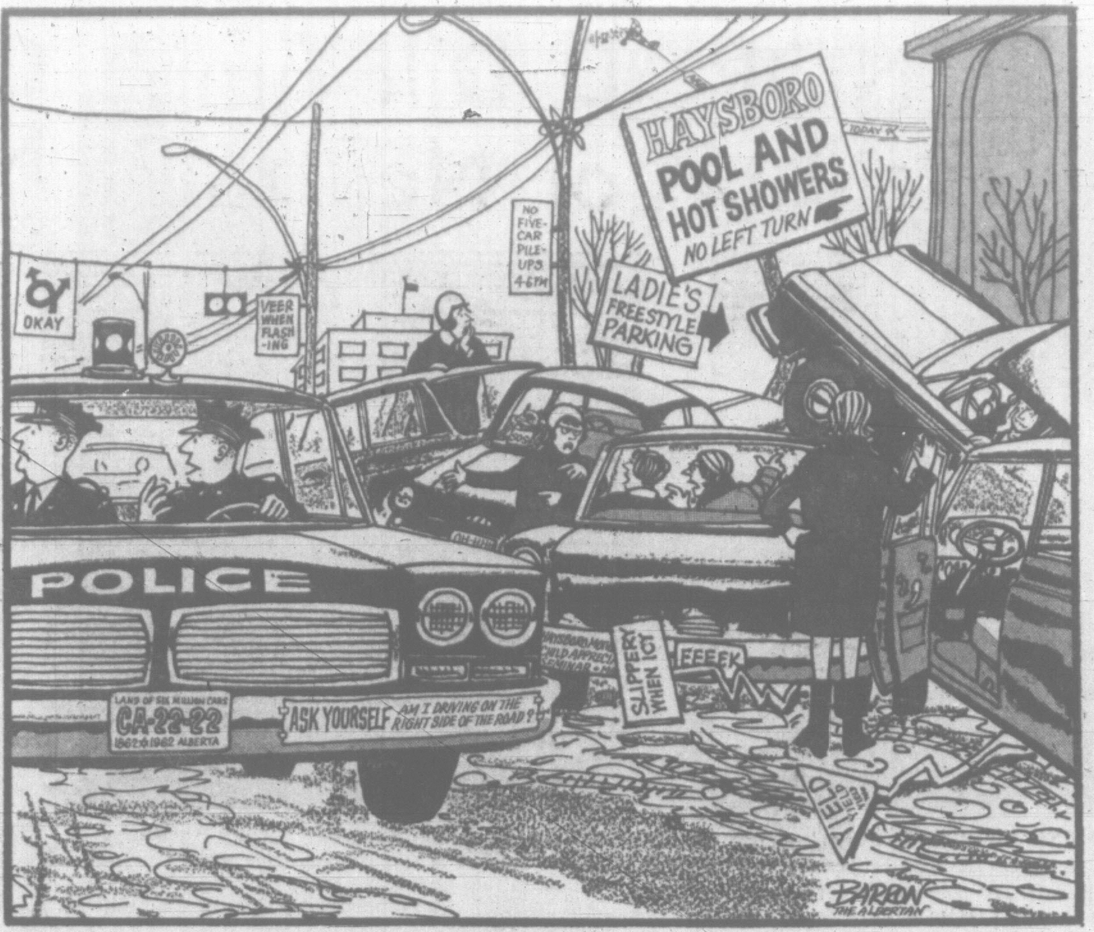
ONLY A FEW MONTHS AGO South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said that if the Chief of State, General Nguyen Van Thieu, chose to run for the presidency in the elections next September, he would step aside for his older colleague in the ruling military junta.

However, in recent days, and particularly since his spectacular performance at President Johnson's Guam conference, Marshal Ky has been behaving like a man running for office. There is no more talk about "returning to my air force" after civilian rule is installed. Instead he speaks of his "mission" to bring a popularly elected government and justice to South Vietnam. The Premier, indeed, is beginning to act like the "father of his country" with carefully arranged visits—always accompanied by his attractive and beautifully-groomed wife—to schools, hospitals, orphanages and other institutions.

Reports from Saigon also indicate that the military directorate is beginning to swing behind the Ky candidacy, but there is a fairly wide difference of opinion as to whether a military man can win the presidency against a civilian. And since agreement has already been reached between the generals and the constituent assembly that a military president would choose a civilian premier, and vice versa, loss of the election by Marshal Ky would put him out of government.

The marshal, however, in an interview this week, didn't seem concerned about this aspect of the election. Asked whether he thought a candidate put forward by the military directorate would win, he replied: "We are going to do it, so it means we think we will win." How much this optimism is based on a belief in the popularity of the military with the Vietnamese, and how much on the fact that the junta has named military officers to almost all the provincial and district chiefs' posts is an interesting conjecture.

If Ky does run for the presidency he can be expected to run hard. His personal popularity among a war-weary people may not be high, and his background as a northerner—and a man who fought for the French to maintain colonial rule—is against him. It would be an extraordinary event if Marshal Ky, or any other military candidate, were to allow ballots to oust the generals from their tight and full control of the government. But with almost all of the South Vietnamese army released from active fighting for "pacification" and "revolutionary development" duties in the villages, it seems unlikely that a determined military candidate would lose.



". . . but Sarge, we can't just drive by and IGNORE a five-car pile-up . . . even if they ARE all women drivers . . ."

South African Education

In the January 26th issue of the Daily Times, you have used an article by Colin Legum in which reference is made to the Unesco Report on Education in South Africa.

I must point out to you, however, that this report was refuted by the South African delegation to the United Nations and described as a carefully slanted and preconceived political attack. In a statement issued by the South African delegation the Report is said to cast "serious doubt on the professional integrity of the compilers". The statement by the South African delegation says, in part:

"South Africa has achieved a literacy rate in excess of 55 per cent for its Bantu population, which compares with only five per cent for the total population of Ethiopia and 10 per cent of that of Liberia.

"For the age group 7 to 20 this rate now stands at 85 per cent, a figure not even matched by some European countries.

"Six years ago there were about 2,000 non-white students enrolled at South African universities. Today the figure is over 7,000 of whom almost 3,000 are Africans.

"At present the state is spending twenty times as much on Bantu education as in 1929 (although the total Bantu population increase since that year has been twofold) and the white taxpayer is contributing about 60 per cent of this expenditure."—Hans J. Nel, Information Attache, South African Embassy, Ottawa.

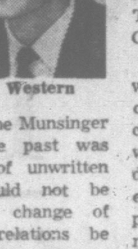
Parliament Pleased by Limited Cabinet Shuffle



Western

THE prime minister has pleased Parliament with a limited cabinet reorganization which is expected to inject new vigor into two important departments. It is usual for opposition leaders to extend congratulations to new ministers as Mr. Diefenbaker did on Wednesday. In this case, however, the amenities reflected a quite unusual satisfaction and even relief. Between Mr. Cardin and the Conservatives was the bitterness of the Munsinger case. On the surface the past was curtained off by a sort of unwritten understanding but it could not be forgotten nor without a change of personnel could normal relations be restored.

With the new ministers a new chapter opens. Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Chretien, the latest additions to the cabinet, and Mr. Turner, who now succeeds to important departmental responsibilities, are young men with friends in all quarters of the House. Mr. Walter Gordon, as president of the privy council, has drawn a consolation prize and it is not expected that his new duties will distract him very much from the studies to which he was earlier assigned by the prime minister.

Quebec Wing

The changes affect primarily the Quebec wing of the government. They should strengthen the federal Liberals, not only in the struggle of parties but also in competition with Quebec provincial Liberals whose nationalist attitudes are not always easily distinguishable from those of Mr. Daniel Johnson. The disposition of voters to turn their backs on Ottawa was doubtless encouraged by the fact that federal Liberals tended to be overshadowed by such provincial personalities as Mr. Lesage, Mr. Kierans, Mr. Levesque and Mr. Gerin Lajoie. But the prime minister has now, in effect, created a new pole of attraction with a team led by Mr. Jean Marchand and including such promising federalist contenders as Mr. Sauve, Mr. Turner, Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Pepin and Mr. Chretien.

Mr. Trudeau, as minister of justice, will be the government's chief adviser on constitutional affairs. He is a man of competence and courage, free of the woolliness which descended on his department some years ago. His influence has in fact preceded him. As parliamentary secretary to the prime minister he saw and warned against the dangers of the opting out technique which once dazzled Quebec Liberals. Indeed, his counsels are believed to have played a major part in swinging the government over to the new and stricter federalism defended by Mr. Sharp and Mr. Marchand at the October conference with the provinces.

The new minister is also known for his interest in some of the social problems (such as divorce and birth control) and others such as that of hate literature in which the government is now taking a more serious interest. One of his Conservative friends called the appointment "tremendous", another indication that Mr. Trudeau begins his cabinet career with fine assets of goodwill.

Mr. Turner, already considered a serious leadership contender, will find no lack of opportunities in his new post of registrar-general which may be expanded to cover other corporate and consumer affairs. The unhappy illness of Mr. Favreau, following his various ordeals in Parliament, has undoubtedly created something of a backlog in this department. Nothing has been accomplished, for example, in respect to combines administration although at the outset this was certainly in Mr. Favreau's mind.

Specifically, something must be done about the now inoperative merger sections and probably also about penalties for price-fixing. Jail sentences are of particular interest because, unlike fines, they cannot be passed on to the consumer.

Fortunately Mr. Turner is an extremely vigorous minister whose capacity was most recently demonstrated when he helped Mr. Pickersgill to steer the new transportation legislation through Parliament.

Province Gains

Mr. Chretien is a quiet, hard-working parliamentarian who has set himself to demonstrate to doubters in his native province that Quebec derives large financial and other advantages as a partner in Confederation.

The prime minister's announcement should, it is to be hoped, set at rest some of the rumors which enjoyed currency in Ottawa last week, as they have done at suspiciously regular intervals. One of these was that Mr. Laing would be replaced by a younger colleague of the "new wave." Mr. Laing's offence, in the eyes of some people, is that he is not pliable in matters of the public interest. Experience has shown that he is an obstacle to certain groups with their own ambitions and private ends.

Perhaps for this very reason no minister enjoys more respect in Parliament. It is fortunate that the rumors lacked substance; if there had been anything to them, there would have been reason for serious concern in the country and especially in Western Canada.

Measure It, Then Tax It

Montreal Le Devoir

It will take some little time to understand fully the exact implications of the recommendations just made by the commission of inquiry on taxation. This delay will be all the more necessary in view of the fact that the commission insists its proposals form a coherent whole whose parts may not be treated separately.

The Canadian taxation system has all the appearances of a rigorous and impeccable system. But in reality it is a colander. The treasury . . . hits especially hard the small and average taxpayers who have no revenue other than a regular salary. But it grants special status to thousands of individuals who have, you might say, several strings to their bow. While thousands of citizens pay their full tribute to Caesar, others have blowouts in luxury hotels, making use of expense accounts that escape the eye of the treasury; others specialize in various types of transactions that do not come within the present law. . . .

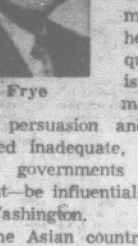
The Carter commission does not hesitate to say that the law must be revamped, starting with one clear principle: the taxation of all revenue.

Under this principle . . . the treasury's sole concern will be to measure accurately what each Canadian has earned during a year, in any way whatsoever, then tax him accordingly.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Quest for Neutralist Support of Peace Efforts



Frye

UNITED Nations Secretary-General U Thant set out for Asia this past week a lonely and, one suspects, disheartened man. His search for peace in Vietnam has met with repeated rebuffs. But driven by anguish over the mounting bloodshed and by fear of a much bigger crisis, he goes on with the quest. What he needs is additional diplomatic leverage. His own persuasion and pressure having proved inadequate, he is seeking help from governments which might—just might—be influential, both in Hanoi and in Washington.

The Asian countries he is visiting—Ceylon, India, Nepal, Afghanistan and Pakistan—have only marginal powers of persuasion, but what they have has been largely unused. The voice of neutralist Asia has been virtually silent on Vietnam in recent years.

The last time these countries spoke out forthrightly was in April, 1965, when they called for unconditional negotiations. The United States at first resisted, then gingerly accepted the idea; but North Vietnam rejected discussions in the UN or at a Geneva Conference.

Having found themselves closer to the West than to the Communists—an embarrassing position, for some—they pulled back into a shell and have scarcely dared peek out since.

Sleeping Force

Thant would like to reawaken this sleeping force. He cannot understand why it has let itself be so largely neutralized.

Help from Asia would be of great comfort, and perhaps of real value to Thant. He needs a Greek chorus for his peace appeals. His solo efforts have not been projecting much beyond the footlights.

North Vietnam and Red China have spat in his face. The United States has thrown a brotherly arm over his shoulder and said, in effect, "Nice try, old boy. Try again."

The secretary-general was for a long time a "soft"-peace man. In recent weeks he has come around to a "harder" and what the United States considers a more realistic, approach.

In order to maintain his acceptibility as a mediator, Thant has sought to disguise this fact. But the substance of his stand—reciprocal, rather than unilateral, military restraint—is closer to Washington than ever before.

At first glance, this might be a difficult position for neutralist governments to buy. But in private, many Asians are less hostile to the American cause than they admit. They have seen, and India has felt, the peril of the Chinese dragon. They would be glad to have it effectively contained.

Thus it would not be impossible at all for them to give Thant the moral and psychological backing he seeks, especially if his views were to be protected from Communist backlash by the addition of some rose-colored sweeteners.

Thant is, indeed, already attempting this.

One such sweetener is a suggestion that the whole course of action he has proposed—a "stand-still truce" and progressively broadening negotiations—be preceded by a unilateral bombing halt.

This would appear to meet a major Communist demand, though in fact the bombing would be ceasing on the understanding that not merely de-escalation but a total cease-fire would follow.

Unilateral Action

A second sweetener is the proposal, put forward originally by Senator Joseph S. Clark (D) of Pennsylvania and embraced by Thant, that the United States declare a unilateral cease-fire and await the enemy's response.

This, too, would look like the kind of thing the Reds have been demanding, but in fact would put immense pressure on them to reciprocate and thus, in effect, to accept Thant's route to the conference table.

Such proposals, even if they do no more than annoy both sides, can serve a useful purpose.

In Arthur J. Goldberg's days as an arbiter of labor disputes, there was a mediator who, when all else failed, would call labor and management together and announce he was going to summarize the respective positions as he saw them.

He would then deliberately scramble each side's position, outraging and frustrating them to the point where they would go in the next room and say to each other, "In heaven's name, let's get together by ourselves and settle this thing before he fouls up the whole business."

And they would—which, of course, was precisely what the mediator had in mind.

This is not what Thant is up to, but if he can get some other Asians to help him annoy the Communists, as he has already abundantly annoyed Washington, it could just be the net effect.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

There is a very interesting piece of country off the old logging road from the Highland Road that leads back into the high ridges.

In the power line clearing there are many interesting spring flowers now growing in profusion where once was deep forest.

There is a large pool, or perhaps a very small lake, where one can see many of the puddle ducks feeding. With them is a small flock of domestic geese. They are very timid. Perhaps they have gone wild.

In the pond there are many frogs in all stages, including eggs and tadpoles. All along the edges you can see hundreds of adults.

Entering the pool there are several little run-off streams. Here there is life in abundance—cadis fly, stone fly, and the mosquito larvae.

In the brackish water there are fairy shrimp, phanton midges, cyclops and daphnia, as well as many other microscopic animals.

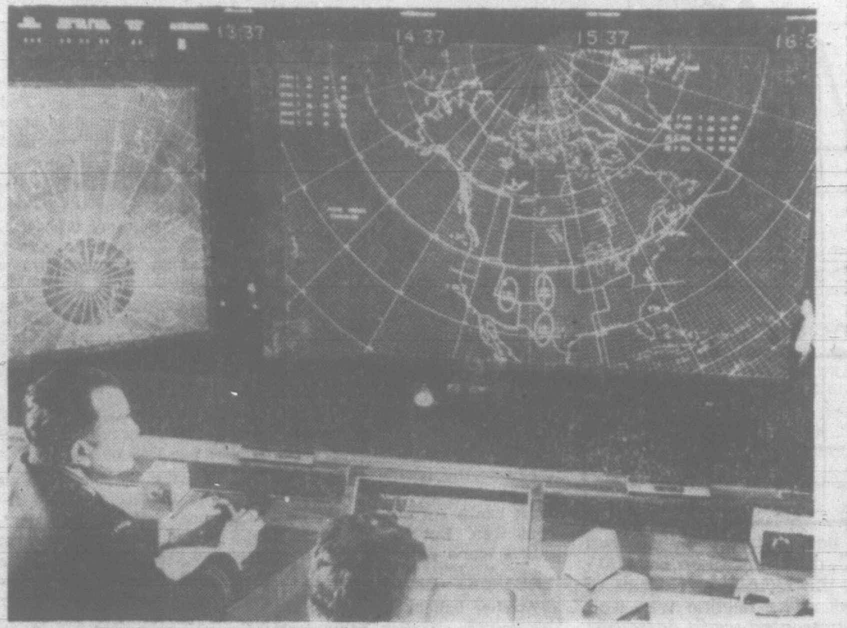
Close by, where the old logs are damp and rotting, you will find the salamanders, and high up on the sunny rocks there are many lizards basking in the sun.

This area is a fascinating place where one can see in small compass so many land folds, rock pinnacles and glacier-cut little gorges.

There are smooth crowns—of perhaps 100 feet across—that are now covered with moss. If you look where the moss has been moved, you can see how this plant has worn and penetrated into the hard rock face. There are places where you can find the deep cut scores of the ice, some are almost hidden on the under side. The little gullys run north and south, as the ice sheet drifted only in these directions.

Canada's NORAD Dilemma; Nuclear Bastion or Neutral?

By PETER C. NEWMAN



This is the NORAD command post at Colorado Springs, a deep cavern hewn in a granite mountain, where the defence of North America is concentrated. The map at centre records and plots all movement in the air space over the continent. At left is the plotter connected to the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System which scans Russia for missile launchings.

OTTAWA — Even while the debate on armed forces unification rages in the House of Commons, another infinitely more significant military problem is beginning to emerge.

It involves decisions of such import that they could, without exaggeration, change the path of Canadian history.

Newman

The forces at work in this complex defence situation could confront Canada with such a dilemma that the only way out might be to adopt a genuine posture of neutrality in any hot or cold war confrontation of the future. Alternatively, we might be driven into a series of decisions on defence which would eventually transform this country into an atomic fortress, with bristles of missiles ringing our major population centres, and citizens trained to scurry into underground shelters when satellite-mounted radar scopes trip off the alarm.

The frightening possibilities posed by our current defence situation will be the subject of this series of articles, which are based on long discussions with some of the men faced with negotiating these harsh choices. It is probably significant that they were willing to discuss them, rather than allow the battered but still powerful Canadian military establishment to pursue its hawk-like posture, without the enlightening effect of public debate.

On the surface, all that's immediately at stake is a renegotiation of Canada's North American Air Defence (NORAD) agreement, which comes up for renewal on May 12, 1968. Defence Minister Paul Hellyer spent part of the last week in Washington, opening discussions with U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara. P. A. Bissonnette of the External Affairs Department's defence liaison division has been put in charge of the parallel negotiations under way with the American State Department.

Details Wanted

An indication that the Canadian government is well aware of the vital significance of these talks lies in the fact that Prime Minister Pearson has sent a confidential memorandum to the Department of National Defence, requesting exact details of the implications for Canada of renewing its NORAD treaty for another ten-year term. It is by no means a foregone conclusion that Canada will do so.

At the moment, a renewal of the NORAD pact would involve little more than Canada's pledge to retain in service its two Bomarc installations and three interceptor squadrons, plus their supporting ganglia of radar and communications networks.

Presumably, the Americans would prefer to add some clauses to the agreement which would prevent a repetition of the events of October 22, 1962, when the Diefenbaker government refused to follow the example of other U.S. allies in mobilizing its forces against the Cuban missile threat.

But this isn't the real issue. If we were to commit ourselves unconditionally to NORAD for the next decade, we would also be subscribing to the next stage in aerospace defence. This will probably include an anti-ballistic missile (ABM) network which would drastically alter the whole balance of terror that has so far staved off a nuclear war.

Talks are currently under way between Llewellyn Thompson, the American ambassador to the U.S.S.R. and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin for a treaty that would prevent both countries from competing in the construction of ABM installations. But U.S. intelligence sources insist that Russian anti-ballistic missiles are already being placed in operation and it seems only a question of time until McNamara will yield to mounting Pentagon pressures being exerted on him to follow suit.

Part of Arsenal

Once that decision is made, NORAD will be placed in charge of the ABM network in North America, and if at that time we're part of NORAD, Canada will automatically become part of the ABM arsenal.

This would have sweeping strategic, political and economic consequences, robbing us of what little consultative sovereignty there remains to Canada in military matters. It would require the financing and construction (by Canada) of missile defences around our cities and a vast private and public shelter program.

Paradoxically, the converse isn't true—by staying out of NORAD, we will not necessarily keep out of this new and bizarre acceleration of the armaments race. If Canada did decide to opt out, could any Canadian government resist the public pressures that would inevitably build up from the fact that Buffalo, Boston, Detroit, Duluth and Seattle were protected against Communist missiles, while Toronto, Halifax, Windsor, Winnipeg and Vancouver were not? The only alternative in that kind of situation might be for Canada to declare herself neutral and hope for the best.

Just a Hint

There is, in fact, just the hint of a possibility that this is the direction we might follow. It would allow the mobile Canadian force of 15,000 men being built up under Paul Hellyer's unification program to act as a genuinely uncommitted United Nations police force.

This decision on NORAD, with all its implications, is now facing the Canadian government.

One of the considerations in making the choice of whether or not to sign a new NORAD treaty is a matter of straight economics. Under the old NORAD concept, Washington could justify to American taxpayers the fact that it was financing two-thirds of the air defence installations on this side of the border, because they were clearly part of the whole network guarding North America.

But when NORAD evolves into a city-by-city defensive operation, we would find quite a different financial climate. One Ottawa defence expert aware of the situation puts it this way:

"Suppose the U.S. government had a choice between accepting the pressure of congressmen, mayors, women's groups, etc. for an anti-missile defence for two or three more American cities, and spending the same American taxpayers' money to protect two or three Canadian cities. Their president would be impeached if he chose Canada."

But every ABM installation costs about $250,000,000. So if Canada put in the minimum network of protecting the 10 provincial capitals, plus Vancouver, Calgary, Ottawa and Montreal, total cost would start at $3.5 billions—more than twice our annual defence budget.

So far, Defence Minister Hellyer has refused to comment on the implications of the NORAD dilemma beyond saying: "I strongly endorse the attempt by the United States to put a halt to the armaments race. The consequences of proceeding to the next big round which would involve anti-missile networks could be catastrophic economically. It's most encouraging that talks have begun with the Russians on this subject, and I fervently hope they'll succeed."

In the second instalment of this series on our new defence dilemma, Mr. Newman will discuss some of the startling new military developments in both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. which are pushing Canada into the most important military decision in its history.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The turbulent power struggle under way in China entered a new phase this week as Mao's Red Guards launched an all-out propaganda attack on President Liu Shao-Chi.

Before the new outbreak, events had quieted down as the country's leaders attempted to get the disrupted economy back in gear.

Now Chairman Mao has apparently decided to make an all-out bid to drive Liu and Communist party secretary-general Teng Hsiao-ping out of office.

Millions of marchers carried placards and banners denouncing Liu as a traitor to China in his struggle with Mao and calling him the "Khrushchev of China" who wants to make a deal with the U.S.

The virulence of the campaign gave rise to belief Mao is trying to goad Liu into a public confession of his sins and perhaps suicide—a tactic that worked last year against Peking mayor Peng Chen.

Caught in the middle of this new purge is Premier Chou En-lai, who had been attempting to play the role of Mr. Fix-it.

Chou's had been a moderating voice, urging the Red Guards to soften their assaults on the party leaders. For a time he seemed to be having success but Mao's militants now have swept him aside.

The long-simmering violence in Aden erupted during the week in a series of confused clashes triggered by a general strike.

Arab nationalists hurled grenades at British troops, then fell upon each other in bitter rivalry.

Behind the violence is Britain's promise that the Federation of South Arabia, a group of 17 sheikhdoms and sultanates of which Aden is the keystone, will be given independence next year.

The rival Arab groups are the Front for the Liberation of Occupied South Yemen and the National Liberation Front. They are quarrelling over how the federation should be divided after the British pull out.

A United Nations mission studying problems of independence for the federation hasn't been able to please any of the combatants. Both Arab nationalist groups protested the mission's presence and later in the week the UN team left with the complaint that it hadn't received much co-operation from the British either.

As expected, U.S. Vice-President Hubert Humphrey met some volatile opposition to the American presence in Vietnam on his swing through Europe.

In West Berlin police arrested 10 young extremists on the night before his arrival and accused them of planning to hurl home-made bombs and chemicals at the vice-president's motorcade. There was doubt whether they really intended an attack on Humphrey's life or were just trying to disrupt his visit.

In other European capitals the demonstrators contented themselves with tossing eggs and fruit at Humphrey's car.

Dispatched by President Johnson to shore up relations between the U.S. and her European allies, Humphrey, a tireless traveller and campaigner, met the abuse head-on and didn't curtail any of his public appearances or talks with government leaders.

It Takes All Kinds— Both Causes and Cures

President Johnson says that the National Crime Commission report compiled at his request "will mean very little until its findings and its recommendations become the actual impulses for change and redirection throughout the land."

He was emphasizing the need for action, a point previously made by the country's Attorney-General Ramsey Clark. In the latter's opinion the exhaustive study, with its 200 recommendations, "can be either a blueprint of a national strategy for crime control or another ancient and forgotten tome."

The two distinguished public figures have given tongue to the sentiments of many people who have worked on committees to reduce crime and to curb, if not forestall, juvenile delinquency. Perhaps, though, they are drawing the picture in too sharp tones. Actually a report of the nature presented in the United States, and the publicity which surrounds its release and its analysis, serve to rouse public consciousness to the fact that preventive and curative work can be done. That's a first step—the creation of a favorable climate.

* * *

Discussion of the report has underlined certain generally understood causes of crime and anti-social behavior. Some crime can be traced to poverty, discrimination, family breakdown, injustice and social tensions—for which treatment is not a matter of money alone.

And the report has focused attention on the need for better trained, better paid and better educated professional help as well as the desirability of establishing community treatment programs and the sifting out of weaknesses in regular law enforcement agencies.

Above all, such reports emphasize the fact that crime or delinquency cannot be attritubed to any one cause or be corrected by any one cure. The ones who are found guilty—or adjudged delinquent if you prefer that term for the young—are individuals. No two need necessarily respond in quite the same way to a particular treatment.

I think it is important to remember that point as Mayor Stephen invites people of this community to offer suggestions to improve the situation in Greater Victoria. Certainly there are differences of kind as well as of degree in the pictures of crime here and those painted by the president's commission—just as there are differences in methods of handling the multi-faceted problem.

It seems to me that the question of differences should be made very plain. The point needs emphasis because so many of us have an idea for a cure which we frequently believe can be applied effectively to every case.

You don't give castor oil to the patient with appendicitis. You shouldn't expect beneficial results at all times from physical punishment of a criminal or a delinquent.

* * *

Neither should you assume that affection and loving care are going to convert every transgressor It is probably true that a sympathetic arm around the shoulder of an offender may condition him more effectively for rehabilitation than a club bounced off his head. But there could be a place for both forms of treatment—and dozens of others.

I listened one evening to an English gentleman, sipping his ale at a pub called the Hop Bine in North Wembley, offer an omnibus method of handling young hoodlums who were making life miserable for the good burghers of that town at the time.

"What's needed," he said, "is Wyatt Earp. Bang! Bang!"

The principle was admirably simple. The offenders Wyatt Earp sent to Boothill never returned to plague anybody. The English gentleman asked if I didn't agree. I told him I though the solution a bit drastic and to avoid an argument I bought the next round.

It wasn't the time or the place to point out that singleness of purpose was excellent insofar as it directed efforts toward the goal of combating delinquency. But singleness could not be limited to one, and one only, approach to the objective.

Ills of Latin America 'Catalogue of Troubles'

By JOHN M. GOSHKO

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay — A symbolic turning point for Latin America came in 1961 with President Kennedy's call for the massive boot-strap development effort envisioned in the Alliance for Progress.

But despite the outpouring of hope that greeted its birth, and the attention that has since been lavished on it (including a United States contribution said to exceed $1 billion a year), the Alliance, as Chilean President Eduardo Frei Montalva points out, so far has been only a "limited success."

Much of the reason is due simply to the sheer magnitude of the area's development problems. Consider, for example, the wide range covered by the formal agenda for the summit meeing: economic integration; industrial development; improvement of infrastructure; trade conditions; modernization of rural life; increased agricultural production; educational, technical and scientific development, unnecessary military expenditures.

This dry pastiche of technical language accurately pinpoints the key problem areas. But it does not begin to describe the wretched human conditions that give them form and substance. Behind the neatly itemized agenda points are such hard realities as these:

Economic Backwardness — Latin America is a collection of raw materials producers, each tied for its livelihood to one or two agricultural or mineral products that are in turn subject to wide price fluctuations on world markets. Industrialization, where it exists, is still in its infancy, is devoted almost exclusively to protected import-substitute products and is characterized by high production costs and low standard of quality.

Agriculture — Although the majority of Latins live in some way on the land, most countries do not grow enough food to feed their people. Despite all the talk in recent years about land reform (16 countries actually have such legislation on the books), the average Latin farmer remains little more than a share-cropper bound to land that will never be his. He works in primitive ways to scratch out the barest existence.

Transportation, Communications — Although greatly improved in some coastal areas, the vast backlands are still places of occasional dirt trails where transport revolves around the ox cart or the woman balancing a bundle on her head.

Housing — Whether called "ranchos" in Caracas, "barriadas" in Lima or "favelas" in Rio, the clusters of jerry-built straw and tar paper shacks sprouting on hillsides and garbage dumps are the distinguishing characteristic of every Latin city. Peopled by the rootless and homeless that flock to the cities by the thousands, they multiply far faster than the ability of financially hard pressed governments to replace them with adequate housing.

Education — In Brazil, the area's largest country, more than 50 per cent of the population is estimated to be illiterate. In Chile, one of the countries with the best education record, only 30 of every 100 first graders finish primary school In the field of higher education, Latin America's best universities are second-rate by North American and European standards and frequently centre more on political than academic interests.

Overpopulation — Bolstered by ignorance and religious considerations, Latin America's galloping birth rate often runs apace with or ahead of the economic growth gains being recorded by each Alliance country. By the year 2000, Latin America will have 625 million inhabitants. For them to live decently will require a doubling of present farm production, creation of 140 million new jobs, construction of more than one million new homes, training of more than 175,000 new doctors — all in an area that does not care adequately for its present population.

Inevitably, the list of what ails Latin America would embrace the entire cataloque of troubles that find their roots in poverty and underdevelopment. And there are other problems too — problems that go to the very heart of Latin America's ability and willingness to lift itself up.

These are the problems of the inherently feudal structure that has been carried over virtually intact from colonial times to make Latin America a social and political mastadon in the midst of 20th century life

They include the landholding and business oligarchies with their tendency to regard all change as a threat; the church hierarchies that too often have been too reactionary or too timid to exercise their great influence on behalf of social justice; the office seekers and bureaucrats wedded to old traditions of politics as an arena for irresponsible partisanship and government service as a licence for corruption and inefficiency.

Feeding upon all this, is the age-old problem of Latin militarism. Today, as in the time of the caudillos, the majority of Latin armed forces continue to be laws unto themselves, clinging to their position as the final arbiters of national power and spending millions desperately needed for development on sophisticated military hardware.

Since the founding of the Alliance, Latin America has seen no less than 10 military coups or uprisings. At present, six of its countries including the two largest, Brazil and Argentina, still live under clear-cut strong man regimes.

In short, the Alliance for Progress has barely scratched the surface of what must be done to drag Latin America into the 20th century. This is the reality underlying the effort President Johnson must make here if he is to rally the Latins behind a new drive to close the gap between the Alliance's accomplishments and its goals.

It will not be easy — especially since Mr. Johnson is a man who will be coming to this part of the world with certain "image" problems. Many Latins are openly hostile to him for sending the Marines to Santo Domingo, an action that rightly or wrongly still reverberates on Latin American public opinion as a harking back to the hated days of interventionism.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Profit-Takers Snuff Rallies

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Banks highlighted an otherwise dull performance on Canada's major stock exchanges this week as profit-takers snuffed out attempted rallies. Brokers said investors are optimistic about the profit outlook of banks under the new Bank Act.

The Toronto exchange's bank index gained 3.30 to 155.13. At Montreal, it moved up 3.43 to 133.43.

Toronto-Dominion announced plans for a five-for-one split in its stock, subject to shareholder approval. Bank of Montreal made a similar announcement in January and other major banks are expected to do the same.

At Toronto, Royal Bank climbed 2¾ to 81½, Toronto-1¼ to 67, Nova Scotia 1 to 77 Dominion 2 to 68½, Montreal and Imperial Commerce ¾ 71¾.

MARKET STILL SLOW

In the last month the market's performance has slowed down and this week was no exception.

Analysts are divided as to the immediate outlook. Some say the market will have to go through a period of correction to account for declining orders for durable goods, production cutbacks and labor settlements.

Others are more optimistic and say the market is beginning to discount a turn around in business in the latter half of the year and "soaring corporate profits throughout the late sixties."

The Bank of Canada's late-week cut in its bank rate to 4½ per cent from 5 per cent was welcomed by brokers who said the reduction can only help stimulate the market over the long run.

A similar move towards easier money was adopted by the U.S. federal reserve board.

The industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, edged up .34 to 165.43—following the New York trend.

Beaver Lumber, which recently announced a sharp increase in its 1966 earnings, climbed 3⅞ to 38⅞. Moore Corp. added 1¾ at 102¼ and CRP 1¼ at 69.

Brazilian Light and Power advanced 1 to 13¼ on about 120,000 shares. The company announced Friday it was participating in a bid with Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd. and Jonlab Investments Ltd. to buy back control of John Labatt Ltd. from Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee.

Brazilian's president, J. Grant Glassco, said Schlitz has accepted the offer, but the transaction needs approval of the U.S. courts.

Schlitz bought the 1,700,000 Labatt shares in 1964 at $23 a share. The Canadian group is offering about $21 a share. Labatt closed down 1 to 23⅜.

Brazilian also reported its 1966 net profit totalled $36,379,000 in U.S. funds compared with $19,480,000 in 1965.

ASBESTOS CORP. DOWN

Asbestos Corp. slid 1½ to 22½ after the company announced it had suspended development operations at Asbestos Hill in northeastern Quebec. B-A Oil and DuPont each fell 1 to 34 and 38½.

Golds tumbled 4.57 on index to 145.77, reflecting the general weakness in the industry. Dome was off 3½ to 41½, Campbell Red Lake ¾ 6o 19 and Giant Yellowknife 60 cents to 7.65.

Western oils had their wings clipped in profit taking as Canadian Superior declined 2 to 37, Scurry-Rainbow 1⅝ to 23¼ and Dome ⅝ to 58. Home B moved up 1c to 24.

On index, western oils were off 1.07 to 157.03 while base metals rose .73 to 91.11. Volume was 15,038,000 shares compared with 14,887,000 last week.

At Montreal, industrials were down .41 to 163.39 while utilities gained .99 to 146.29 and papers .09 to 123.53. Volume was 4,004,000 shares compared with 4,180,000 last week.

CORPORATION profits before taxes were down slightly in 1966 from 1965, declining to $5,187,000,000 from $5,199,000,000, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has announced. The decline was well under one per cent, but represented profit decreases in a wide range of fields, including manufacturing, mining, retail trade and a group combining financial, insurance and real estate institutions. Notable exceptions were in the wholesale and service industries. (CP Newsmap.)

EASE U.S. SHORTAGE

Release of Nickel From Stockpile Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government and industry officials urged Friday the sale of 60,000,000 pounds of nickel from the national stockpile to help meet a domestic shortage.

They told the House of Representatives armed services sub-committee, considering a bill to authorize the action, that this amount has been found to be in excess of defence needs.

John H. Page, vice-president of International Nickel Co., said if the government feels the stock pile is in excess of requirements, now would be an excellent time for the sale.

"This would, in our judgment, make the difference between a critical civilian shortage and an opportunity to narrow the between civilian supply and demand," he said.

Page said his firm has no plans to buy any of the nickel for resale on the market. He suggested it be released during a 12-month period.

William N. Lawrence, speaking for the U.S. office of emergency planning, said industry estimates indicate that for the balance of this year nickel demand will exceed supply by 7,000,000 to 9,000,000 pounds a month. He said the output of new mines and facilities under construction will not be able to meet demand until the first of next year.

Lawrence told the sub-committee that the percentage of Canadian nickel output coming to the U.S. has been rising slowly in recent years.

The U.S. government owned about 300,000,000 pounds of nickel in mid-1965. This total has shrunk to about 100,000,000 pounds now, of which about 40,000,000 pounds have been termed necessary for defence needs.

Production Gains

TORONTO (CP) — British American Oil Co. Ltd. showed gains in daily net production of crude oil, natural gas liquids, and natural gas in the first three months of 1967 over the same period last year, its quarterly report says.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

New Easing in Money Mart

NEW YORK (AP)—The U.S. money market eased further this week, heightening prospects of business expansion.

The federal reserve board approved a cut in its discount rate to four per cent from 4½ per cent.

This reduced the interest that member banks have to pay on borrowings from the federal reserve system.

The discount rate is the base from which other interest charges stem.

A tight money condition prevailed last year and high interest rates held down borrowing by business for expansion and modernization.

The first break came in late January when Chase Manhattan Bank of New York reduced its prime rate — the interest charged the biggest and most credit-worthy borrowers—to 5½ per cent from six per cent. Most banks cut only to 5¾ per cent then. But in late March others came down to 5½.

TREASURY BILLS SIGN

Another indication of the easing money situation came last Monday when the yield on treasury bills dropped below four per cent for the first time in 18 months.

Television stars and truck drivers and race horse owners were in the same boat this week.

All were in strife with the people who pay their salaries, wages and purses.

This made its impact on business and the public and was an indication that 1967 may live up to forecasts of the most serious labor troubles in recent years.

The public was most aware of the strike of the 18,000 members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists against the three big U.S. networks—NBC, CBS and ABC—and their affiliated stations.

SOME SHOWS DROPPED

Some shows were dropped and replaced with reruns. Networks' troubles mounted as unions representing stagehands, electricians and other non-performing television and radio employees honored AFTRA picket lines.

At stake for the networks were millions of dollars in advertising revenues.

The strike stemmed from the demand of television news personnel for a minimum salary of $325 a week, plus percentages of commercial fees.

The 450,000 - member Teamsters Union was locked in negotiations for a new contract with the trucking industry. Federal mediators worked to stave off a threatened national shutdown.

The union sought an increase of 56 cents an hour over three years. The operators offered 37 cents. Truckers now make from $3.25 to $5 an hour, plus fringe benefits.

The horses didn't run at New York's Aqueduct race track because of a demand by the stable owners for higher purses. When the New York State Legislature did not authorize a bigger share of betting proceeds for purses, the 2,000 owners and trainers refused to enter horses.

Burrard Drydock Net Income Drops

VANCOUVER (CP)—Burrard Drydock Ltd. has reported a net income for 1966 of $201,197.

Net income for the previous year was $596,366.

Clarence Wallace, president, said in the annual report that 31 new vessels, varying in size from 130-foot steel general purpose barges to the new weather and oceanographic vessel CCGS Vancouver, were delivered during the year from the company's yards in North Vancouver and Esquimalt.

TV, Radio Firm Scores Big Gain

By AB KENT
Business Editor

A Toronto-based holding company with interest in two Victoria broadcasting outlets has demonstrated sharp gains in the past year and is geared up to do even better this year.

KENT

The company is Selkirk Holdings Ltd., which has a 50 per cent interest in Island Broadcasting Co. Ltd. (operating radio station CJVI), and 26 per cent interest in British Columbia Television Broadcasting System Ltd. (operating Channels 6 and 8 here and in Vancouver).

Net cash income from operations of Selkirk Holdings in 1966 were 250 per cent ahead of 1965, according to president J. S. MacKay.

He attributed the improvement to acquisition in 1965 of All-Canada Radio and TV Ltd., a Toronto-based national sales agency, and of Castleton Investments Ltd., which holds the interest in B.C. Television Broadcasting; plus the addition of Vancouver radio station CKWX last year.

* * *

But the five television outlets in which Selkirk has an interest (six if Channels 6 and 8 are considered separately) all turned to color transmission in the past year, and that is perhaps of more significance than first meets the eye.

It means the group is in on the ground floor in an area where advertising is about to zoom.

In the U.S., color TV sales are up about 25 per cent, while black and white TV sets have dropped back about 31 per cent.

TV manufacturers are stressing color as if black and white had gone out of style. And apparently it has.

Canadian TV makers are looking for gains of about the same degree as their U.S. counterparts.

In other words, it's the evolution of radio and black and white TV all over again.

Selkirk racked up gross income last year of $887,249 compared with $332,537 in 1965; net income of $424,142 against $159,254.

Dividends were increased from 20 to 30 cents per share.

Latest development is negotiation for a 30 percent interest in Ottawa Cablevision Ltd.

Construction of Endako Mines Ltd. $7 million mill expansion 150 miles west of Prince George is due to start April 24, president T. H. McClelland said.

Commonwealth Construction Co. Ltd. and Hume and Rumble Ltd., as a consortium won the contract that is expected to boost the molybdenum mill capacity to 22,000 tons of ore daily.

Most of the financing will come from operating profit, Mr. McClelland said, a basic reason for delying payment of a dividend almost two years.

Endako's first dividend ought to make its appearance in the final quarter of 1968, he expects.

The expansion includes addition of a second tailings pond to the operation.

Mr. McClelland is confident that the expanded mill will allow Endako to put out 12 million pounds of molybdenum per year. The first quarter this year produced 3.5 million pounds of molybdenite.

An existing term bank loan is expected to be retired with a $1.6 million final payment in June.

Pacific Great Eastern car loadings during March reflected increased industrial activity in B.C. that month.

The total was 7,320 against 6,779 in March a year ago, raising the three-month figure this year to 20,026, or better than 2,000 cars more than in the first quarter last year.

Wood chips, logs, lumber and manufactured iron and steel products accounted for the improvement.

Westbank Still Lacks Chairman

WINNIPEG (CP) — Montreal financier Marc Bienvenu returned home Friday after becoming a director of the Bank of Western Canada here but the bank's chairmanship remained vacant.

Mr. Bievenu, questioned about the chairmanship following a meeting of the bank's board of directors, said only: "I think it was a great pleasure to meet such a great number of great gentlemen."

A majority shareholder in the yet-unopened bank, he said he had his eyes opened to many things concerning the bank during the three-hour board meeting and there were many things for him and his advisers to consider.

Mr. Bienvenu said it was a possibility he might sell his stock in the bank and substantially decrease his present 50.2-per-cent controlling position.

"But no man could be considered serious who came out of a meeting and this soon announced a decision," said the Montreal financier, chairman of British International Finance (Canada) Ltd., which holds controlling interest in the back.

GETS ANOTHER POSITION

He was named chairman of Fort Garry Trust, a Winnipeg-based firm, Friday and Alexander B. Crate of Toronto, president of York Trust Co., was elected president.

York Trust, a BIF subsidiary, owns more than 90 per cent of Fort Garry shares and Mr. Bievenu is chairman of York Trust.

He and Alex MacKenzie of Montreal were elected directors of the bank Friday. Mr. MacKenzie is a director of Corporation Foncier du Montreal of which Mr. Bievenu is chairman.

The chairmanship of the Bank of Western Canada has been vacant since the resignation a few weeks ago of Sinclair Stevens of Toronto, from whom Mr. Bievenu bought controlling interest in BIF.

James E. Coyne of Winnipeg, bank president, declined comment on the possibility of a westerner becoming chairman.

"I'm sorry I can't say anything about a speculative question like that."

Mr. Stevens, who remained a director of the bank, did not attend the meeting and a bank official said it was expected an announcement of Mr. Stevens's resignation would be made soon.

Stereotypers Set Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A Sunday strike of stereotypers at the Long Island Press was set Friday.

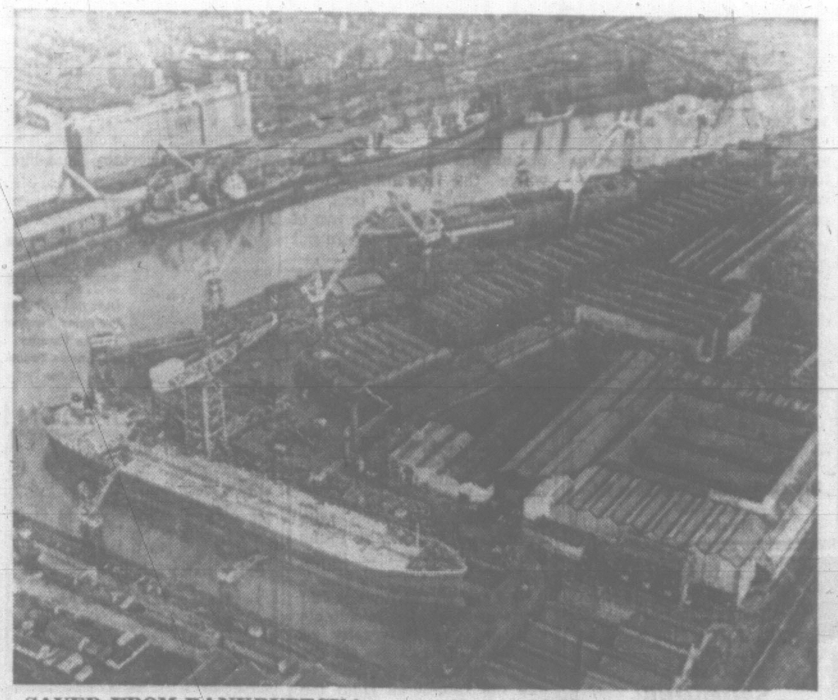
James J. McMahon, president of the stereotypers' union, voiced hope that a walkout could be averted by Theodore W. Kheel, chief mediator in newspaper contract talks between five New York City dailies and 10 unions.

McMahon said negotiators for the union broke off talks with the Publishers' Association of New York.

Union officials, he said, singled out the Long Island Press for strike action because "it's the only one being stubborn about us."

Other newspapers represented by the publishers' association in the talks are the New York Times, The Daily News, The World Journal Tribune, and the Long Island Star-Journal.

The Star-Journal and the Long Island Press are both published by Newhouse Publications but are printed at separate plants.



SAVED FROM BANKRUPTCY by a triple alliance of government, labor and private funds, Fairfield shipyards on the Clyde hopes to pioneer a whole new concept of industrial relations and planned efficiency in Britain's troubled shipbuilding industry. The giant yard is also one of several engaged intalks for a giant merger. (AP Wirephoto.)

New Banking Legislation Proclaimed in Gazette

OTTAWA (CP) — Proclamations bringing the government's new deal for the country's banking community into effect on May 1 were published Friday in the official Canada Gazette.

Legislation passed recently by Parliament setting up a deposit insurance corporation also was proclaimed to come into effect April 17.

On May 1, the present Bank Act and laws governing two Quebec savings banks will be replaced by legislation designed to inject new competitive spirit into the banking world.

Among main provisions of the new bank legislation are easing of restrictions on the interest rates the banks may charge on loans and mortgages, and the kind of securities they may issu kind of securities they may issue to the public.

The present six-per-cent ceiling on bank loans will be raised to 7¼ per cent May 1, and ultimately lifted entirely. Because of easier money conditions, some of the banks have already cut their prime lending rate to 5¾ per cent from six. Further easing of credit is expected in the months ahead.

The legislation also permits chartered banks to split the par value of their shares. Some banks have already announced plans to split shares five for one after May 1, with shareholder approval.

This will bring bank shares into the $12 to $15 range, more attractive to small investors than the present $60 to $75 range.

FOR 10 YEARS

Some banks also have announced their intention to take advantage of another provision of the new Bank Act by issuing debentures—a form of junior bond for investors wanting a good return on medium to long-term investments.

The new Bank Act will govern the operations of the 10 chartered banks for the next 10 years, when the act will come up for another review.

The banks include the newly-chartered banks of British Columbia and Western Canada, and the Mercantile Bank, now fully-owned by the First National City Bank of New York.

Among special provisions of the new act are clauses to oversee the growth of Mercantile while encouraging transfer of 75 per cent of its share ownership to Canadians.

Canadian Firms Bid For Labatt Brewing

TORONTO (CP) — Three Canadian companies have offered to buy back control of John Labatt Ltd. of London, Ont., from the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, it was announced Friday.

If the deal is approved by the United States courts, it will mean the giant U.S. brewery will lose more than $3,000,000 on its three-year-old effort to get control of the 120-year-old Canadian company.

Schlitz paid $39,100,000 to get the 1,700,000 shares of Labatt in 1964 but its bid was successfully challenged by the U.S. justice department under that country's anti-trust laws.

Schlitz was given until this weekend to reveal its plans to divest itself of its Labatt holdings.

Under the offer, announced by Brazilian Light and Power Co., the Schlitz shares in Labatt would be purchased by Brazilian, Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd. and Jonlab Investments Ltd.

They would buy the shares at about $21 each — compared with the $23 a share Schlitz paid for them in 1964.

Jonlab is a private company made up of people, some of whom have been associated with Labatt, John B. Cronyn, executive vice-president of Labatt said.

Brazilian President J. Grant Glassco said Schlitz has accepted the offer but the deal still needs approval of the U.S. courts.

At the time of the Schlitz takeover, the transaction brought questions in both Parliament and the Ontario legislature about the U.S. purchase of control of a long-established Canadian company.

Canadian Reactor Favored For New Zealand Station

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — Canada at the present stage has the inside track in plans for the first New Zealand nuclear power station.

A Canadian-type reactor is favored by top officials as the most suitable for the purpose. But by the time New Zealand is ready to order, British and German concerns, as well as Canada, are likely to be making this type.

New Zealand until how has predominantly depended on the abundant water power available for hydroelectric power generation. A secondary source has been natural super-heated steam from below the earth, for use in geothermal stations.

But a limit is approaching for natural power sources that can be economically developed to meet the exceedingly rapid increase in electricity demand.

New Zealand has estimated that it will need to begin installing nuclear stations within 10 years. It has even selected the area and supply zone for the first one — on the Kaipara Harbor, north of Auckland, the main population centre.

GIVES RECOMMENDATION

The general manager of the electricity department, E. B. MacKenzie, who made an extensive tour abroad last year to study nuclear power developments, says that a reactor using natural uranium oxide as fuel and heavy water as a moderator is best suited to New Zealand needs. So far Canada is the only country to have this type of reactor in use.

He has listed numerous advantages in this kind of reactor from New Zealand's point of view, including saving in foreign exchange funds for fuel, production of plutonium as a by-product which will be needed in second-generation nuclear plants, and ability to vary loads rapidly.

However, the British atomic energy authority, which agrees that this type of reactor is best for the first New Zealand station, is setting a design group to work on a suitable plant. A West German company is also working in this field.

The first New Zealand plant is likely to be a 1,000-megawatt station costing about $300,000,000.

The electricity department has a working group of specialists following developments in atomic power and making preliminary plans for the setting up of plants in New Zealand. It is also sending from time to time groups of engineers and others to work in research and development projects abroad to gain the necessary technical experience in operating nuclear stations.

French-Canadian News Chain Formed

MONTREAL (CP) — Creation of the newspaper publishing firm Les Journaux Trans-Canada Ltee and addition to its properties of a second important French-language daily, Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste, was announced here today.

The company, whose name in English is Trans-Canada Newspapers Ltd., becomes the publisher of Dimanche-Matin, large-circulation Montreal Sunday newspaper, the daily Sherbrooke La Tribune and Le Nouvelliste in addition to 10 weeklies of which nine are in French language sections of Greater Montreal. The 10th weekly is the English-language Leader-Mail at Granby, Que.

Announcement of the Trans-Canada company's formation as "French Canada's largest newspaper publishing chain" included word of its acquisition of Le Nouvelliste, founded in 1920. The company's principals already owned the group of weeklies and Dimanche-Matin and La Tribune.

The Sunday paper and the Sherbrooke and Trois Rivieres dailies are shareholders and distributors of Perspectives, French-language weekly color supplement sharing some news-features, illustrations and advertising with Weekend Magazine. Perspectives is produced in conjunction with Weekend's publishers, the Montreal Standard Publishing Co.

ANNOUNCE CIRCULATION

The announcement gave total circulation of the Trans-Canada company publications including its weeklies as more than 500,000. Most recent published circulation figures are 269,498 for Dimanche Matin, 44,443 for Le Nouvelliste and 38,017 for La Triune.

Trans-Canada Newspapers' president is Paul-G. Desmarais, 40, who heads the Montreal financial organization Trans-Canada Corporation Fund. Trans-Canada Corporation Fund is the majority shareholder in the new publishing company.

Jacques-G. Francoeur, 41, Dimanche-Matin's publisher, becomes vice-president and publisher of Trans-Canada Newspapers. Pierre Dansereau, president of Le Nouvelliste while it was owned by the Dansereau family, remains president of the Trois-Rivieres daily under the new ownership.

Mr. Dansereau, 43, also becomes a director of Trans-Canada Newspapers. Other directors are Montrealers Jean Parisien, Louis-R. Desmarais, Jean-Guy Faucher and C-A. Geoffrion.

Purchase of La Tribune, founded in 1910, from Senator Paul Desruisseaux of Sherbrooke was announced last Nov. 12 by officers who now head the Trans-Canada newspaper company.

Profits Increase

TORONTO (CP)—The French Petroleum Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced a net profit for the year of $855,431 or 23 cents a share compared with $805,055 or 22 cents for 1965.

The annual report said the company planned to substantially increase its program of exploratory activity in Western Canada.

A VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

Flexing of Tiny Muscles? Far From It!

By TONY EMERY

The galleries offer a mixed bag this week, with something for every taste, but for me the most exciting aesthetic experience came last Saturday morning during the Humanities and Science Symposium sponsored by the University of Victoria and the IBM Corporation.

Emery

A young man from Eric Hamber Secondary School in Vancouver, David Duke by name, put on an experimental multi-media presentation which revealed a quite astonishingly precocious talent.

He had written a series of short poems, copies of which were distributed among the audience who read them while slides of paintings (by David Duke) were projected on the screen. These, I may say, were no mere illustrations, but interesting objects in their own right. For some of the poems there was the added dimension of taped piano music composed by David Duke and played by the composer.

The poems themselves were far from the usual sedulous apery of the fledgling poet flexing tiny muscles: they were short, personal and to the point.

The music was very Les Six-ish which is not surprising in view of the reference in an essay which accompanied the poems to Erik Satie, usually associated with the French group. (Incidentally, the essay would have got him a reasonable grade in a senior university course.)

And all this from a young person 17 years old. I have been accused of overdoing the cult of youth—of something perilously close to paedophilia, indeed—but the appearance of this Grade 11 portent makes my prophecies appear morbidly cautious. Mark the name.

In Pandora's Box until the 20th of this month Jan and Helga Grove are showing pottery and ceramic sculpture.

This creative husband-and-wife team has been one of the most valuable additions to Victoria's fine crafts scene, and their last show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria produced a response from the public which is being duplicated in the present exhibition to judge from the speed at which red stickers were being applied on opening night.

I have long felt that the "public" for pottery in Victoria is by far the most discerning of all supporting bodies in the arts, since it is composed very largely of people who are actively engaged themselves in throwing and glazing.

Out of this seems to emerge a much more informed consensus than is to be found, say, in the field of painting or sculpture. This must be a happy situation for the potter, so perhaps we shall be able to keep the Osbornes and the Groves busy producing and teaching.

And talking of teaching reminds me that in the studio area of the Education-Arts Building there is a two-man show by Roger Emery and David Allan, graduates of the "art major" program in the Faculty of Education. Emery paints non-representational paintings in the calligraphic manner, some of them reminiscent of the work of Tak Tanabe.

They are bold rather than sensitive, and seem to succeed more often when he is working tonally than when he turns to color.

Most of them look from a distance as if he is aiming at making some statement about the relation of figure to ground, or of surface to space, but on closer inspection this does not seem to be the case, and the works produce a curiously null effect.

Allan's welded steel automobile parts, put together in the manner made famous by Jason Seley, show a tremendous advance both in technical handling and in the confident assemblage of meaningful forms. On the whole the chromed-bumper works stand up best to scrutiny, though one or two of the black metal forms are not without a certain lace-like delicacy.

The after-dinner conversation in IMPERIAL poolside dining room concerned the May visit here of Princess Alexandra.

"Guess they're lining up already, the elected officials, I mean," said the man from Esquimalt.

The man from Ten Mile Point said he'd like to make up the list of people to be presented.

"I'd choose the Beacon Hill Park crew and the architects who did the University of Victoria. I'd ask the six top students of our high schools and the volunteers from the Free Food Stall. I'd introduce the policeman voted best-liked by the kids and the people who give time to driving the blind—and a nurse from each hospital," he added.

"I think the Queen's cousin would like that," said his companion. "You should put that in the newspaper."

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

It is almost never too late to discover the theatre. Or to let the theatre discover you.

Suppose early youth passes without any exposure to it whatsoever and full maturity or even middle age is reached before some set of circumstances brings you and theatre face to face.

Right there a lifetime love affair can develop that will find you spending far more money than you ever thought you could afford and paying rapt homage to the siren on every possible occasion.

Or if dedication from that distance is not enough, the next thing you'll know is you're so involved with the wench that extrication is all but impossibe.

And not even desirable.

Not everyone who is exposed feels the fascination. And, fortunately, not everyone who feels it seeks closer contact than a seat in the audience.

And then again—unfortunately—there are a goodly number determined to become involved who bring nothing to the relationship except liability.

It has always been a mystery to me why persons with absolutely no theatre instinct should so avidly pursue the roles of playwright, director, actor.

Vital Factor: Theatrical Sense

An innate theatrical sense is indispensable to anyone actively engaged in any capacity—designer, lighting, costumier, props, stage management, acting, directing, writing—whether amateur or professional.

Without it all the training in the world is only going to produce a technician. And with it an untrained amateur can do more good in a community, theatrically, than a whole company of uninspired professionals.

One example of an amateur with an instinct for theatre that evolved in adulthood, and who has put it to good use, is Victoria's Ted Gaskell.

Ted, who at the moment is directing his first play for Victoria Theatre Guild, emigrated to Canada in 1947, after service in the RAF. He was in Vancouver for a few years, then went to Courtenay.

Shows he had seen while in the RAF were his exposure, and it "took."

He soon observed that there was plenty of talent around Courtenay, but no theatre club at that time—the early '50s.

So with the co-operation of his wife, Phyllis, whom he had met and married in Vancouver, he started a theatre club. At first they did one-acters and both husband and wife participated.

Then the usual shortage of directors drew Ted deeper into the coils.

Embarking on full-length plays, he directed My Three Angels, Blithe Spirit, and Teahouse of the August Moon; then, working with the Co-Val Choristers (short for Comox Valley), he staged Brigadoon, Guys and Dolls and Amahl and the Night Visitors.

He Picked Up Share of Awards

Ted won festival awards in Courtenay, both for his directing and acting. He also organized variety shows which were taken around the community.

Sometimes he has acted in the plays he has directed, such as My Three Angels, Two Dozen Red Roses, Shop at Sly Corner.

His years in Courtenay brought fresh interest and pleasure to the whole community and he and Phyllis were missed when they left.

Since coming to Victoria he has acted in one play for St. Matthias Little Theatre and directed for them the Irish classic, Playboy of the Western World.

For Bastion Theatre he has played in Life with Father and Emily Carr.

"It is a funny thing," he says, "every part I have played has been a villain or otherwise unpleasant; and every play has been a comedy."

His first Theatre Guild production is no exception. On Monday Next is an infectious comedy, a spoof on the trials and tribulations of a theatrical company settling into a theatre for a season of rep.

It opens at the Langham Court Theatre April 22 for the usual week-long run.

Phyllis, like her husband, was not an early starter but made friends with the theatre after marriage.

She has acted with and for her husband on many occasions, has produced some vivid characterizations in Victoria productions, most memorably a couple of years back in the St. Matthias DDF entry, The Importance of Being Ernest.

Ted and Phyl have two young sons, David, 10, and Brian, 8. Both are being exposed, but Ted says he does't know if it's going to take yet.

They're not being pushed. If they've got it—that certain instinct—they'll be doing it, naturaly.

'A Composer Obviously To Be Reckoned With'

GENSEY
. . . soprano

. . . tenor

A composition by one of Britain's younger composers, a musician who has consistently revealed exceptional talent and artistic intuition in his creative work, will be given its premiere performance by Victoria Symphony Orchestra Sunday and Monday.

Theme and Invention by Christopher Steel will open the program to be conducted by Harold Gene Bauer, conductor of the Lake Forest and Quincy (Ill.) Symphony Orchestras.

Mr. Steel, at 27, is the composer of a number of major works, which have been critically acclaimed, including three symphonies.

He studied composition at the Royal Academy of Music with John Gardner and at the Munich Musikhochschule in 1961-62 with Harald Ganzmer.

His first symphony was composed in 1961 when he was 21, the second, two years later. Symphony No. 3 is titled A Shakespeare Symphony and consists of settings for some of the plays for baritone, chorus and orchestra.

The Musical Times says that is it rightly catalogued a symphony as the four movements correspond to the symphonic pattern.

The article in the Musical Times of May, 1966, says further of Mr. Steel that he is "a composer . . . obviously to be reckoned with . . . he uses whatever systems and techniques which suit his invention. His music is serial, atonal, or unashamedly diatonic as occasion demands.

STEEL

"His best work is immensely convincing—it is music, not a musical style in search of a composer."

Steel says of himself: "Though I don't know which way I shall go in the future, I hope my music will always have recognizable melody, harmony and rhythm."

This program pair, the last of the 1966-67 subscription series, will also feature an outstanding Russian pianist, Dimitri Bashkirov, as soloist in the beautiful and exciting Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 2 in C minor.

Budapest Stars Here April 18

Only five Western Canadian cities — Victoria, Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary and Regina — will be visited on their first North American tour by Budapest opera stars Sari Gencsy (Shaary Ghenchy) and Josef Simandy (Shymaan-dy).

The artists will come directly from Budapest by Air Canada, arriving in Vancouver in time to meet and rehearse with their accompanist, Derek Bampton, before coming to Victoria for their April 18 concert at McPherson Playhouse.

Brevity of the tour is necessary because the Budapest Opera House cannot substitute the artists for a longer period of time.

Miss Gencsy, leading soprano of the Budapest National Opera House, toured England, France, Belgium and Sweden in 1961, Germany in 1965 and Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union in 1966.

An outstanding folksinger and regular performer on Hungarian television, she has made many recordings in the fields of opera, operetta and folk song.

Simandy, first tenor at Budapest, has received the Hungarian government's highest award for his artistry.

He is master of a wide repertoire, has made many tours through Europe and England and is considered one of the best operatic tenors on the European stage.

Pianist Derek Bampton has the distinction of being the first Canadian artist to play on Mozart's own spinet in the house of Mozart's birth.

In January, 1964, he played for an invited audience on invitation from the International Foundation of the Mozarteum, Salzburg, during commemoration of the 208th anniversary of Mozart's birth.

During the summers of 1964, 65 and 66, Mr. Bampton was on the faculty of the Mozarteum's International Summer Academy in the capacity of coach and accompanist.

He has recorded for Radios Vienna, Salzburg and Lisbon and in 1962 was awarded a Canada Council Grant.

In 1963 he was honored by William Kempff, considered by many to be the world's finest Beethoven interpreter, with an invitation to study the 32 sonatas and five piano concertos of Beethoven in Kempff's villa in South Italy.

Mr. Bampton will give his own piano recital, Sunday, at Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

Besides accompanying Miss Gencsy and Mr. Simandy in their program of operatic arias and duets, Mr. Bampton will play a group of solos including works by Kodaly, Chopin, Liszt and Bartok.

Verdi, Donizetti, Tschaikowsky and Borodin operas will be represented on the program.

Tickets are now on sale for the April 18 concert at either McPherson or Eaton's box office.

200 Take Part In Scottish Show

Around 200 performers, from tiny tots to professional dancers, pipe bands, and the Scottish Country Dance Society will take part in a special Centennial Scottish Revue at McPherson Playhouse April 17.

Presented by the Adeline Duncan Dancers, the show will feature popular John Dunbar as guest artist.

A Centennial Ball, a trip to the Emerald Isle, a nautical scene and the finale, The Road to the Isles, are a few of the featues to be presented.

In addition and by special request, the Solarium Junior League girls will present their Majestic Ride which was choreographed by Adeline Duncan for the recent show, Circus Capers.

Angus McKenzie and Gail Bamford, both present holders of Western North American and Pacific Coast championships, will perform as well as many other top aggregate winners in the various Highland gatherings held throughout Canada and the United States.

Proceeds of the show will go to the Solarium Junior League to further their work with the Queen Alexandra Solarium.

'Quality Street' Next Week At Kinsmen Hall in Sidney

The stage of the Kinsmen Hall, Sidney, will be a symphony of rainbow crinolines and Victorian decor when the Peninsula Players present the James Barrie classic, Quality Street, next Friday and Saturday. The large cast, well-drilled in 19th-century speech and manners by veteran director Nell Horth, will delight audiences with a charming picture of Victorian elegance.

Mrs. Horth has a number of newcomers in the cast, but she is skillful at making her actors feel differences in period, and her long experience in training young drama aspirants stands her in good stead.

Mrs. Horth has won many awards during her years in amateur drama, and recently conducted a series of drama classes sponsored by Peninsula Players; so she is well-qualified to direct the present production.

This gentle comedy has a charm of line and situation too seldom found in modern drama, and furnishes a welcome relief from the harsh realism of many current plays.

Choral Society Elects Officers

A financially profitable and artistically successful season, and an increased membership of 90, made the picture bright at the annual meeting of Victoria Choral Society this week.

Elected president was H. S. Holman.

Other officers elected were P. J. Sands, vice-president; Mrs. R. May, treasurer; T. Tarn, librarian, and Col. F. N. Cowley, secretary.

It was decided to appoint a membership committee to recruit new voices in the late summer and fall, particularly in the tenor and bass sections.

Rodney Webster will continue as musical director. Re-appointed as accompanist and assistant conductor was Richard Proudman.

Mrs. Vera Harvey was named assistant accompanist.

FOCUS

The Mixed Emotions, one of the newest groups in our local music scene, are now officially Victoria's best pop music group.

Placing first in a three-week city-wide Battle of the Bands, held at Club Tango, March 17, 24 and 31 the group showed Victoria's dance crowds just what a great sound this city can turn out.

The popular vote contest, organized by Russell Enterprises, put eight of our local bands on stage battling it out for the title.

Attended by well over a thousand of Victoria's younger set as well as a few from the not-so-younger set, The Mixed Emotions' Robbie Gillespie, lead singer; Lloyd Konopski, lead guitar; Ted Gillespie, rhythm guitar; Reid Hudson, bass; Martin Adams, organ; and drummer Dave Paul, put on two great shows that left little doubt in anyone's mind over who deserved the crown.

Their strong sound and show, somewhat like that of many of the right-at-the-top American groups such as Paul Revere and The Raiders and The Young Rascals, has kept them on-stage since they formed three months ago.

And now rating as Victoria's No. 1 sound, they should find it even harder to stay off stage on weekends.

Their next appearance will be Friday, April 14 when they share the spotlight with the Blues By Five at a girls-half-price light show and dance at Club Tango.

BITS AND PIECES

Is this any better than trying to cram 50 people into a telephone booth? Recently the rage in the U.S. is for rock 'n' rolling musicians, as a group, to try to outdistance competitors in performing the longest time sans interruption. The newest record holder is a Minneapolis, Minn. group, "The Last Rites." Last week they broke all records by spieling continuously for over 100 hours in the basement of their drummer's home. Rules among bands down south require two musicians to be playing at all times in 6 or 12 hour shifts with only 30 second breaks . . . Just for the record, The Bealtes have received their 22nd gold disk for their latest single, Strawberry Fields Forever and Penny Lane . . . It's the most earned by any artist or group since the Record Industry Association of America began its certification program . . . The Statesmen are coming to Victoria April 22 for a dance at Club Tango . . . The Blues By Five, Victoria's only rhythm and blues sound, finally crossed the Strait last weekend and played a Vancouver dance. The group, which should have been on a stage over there long ago, went over really well . . . Singer Jonathan King, who emerged as a disker with a way-out hit, Everyone's Gone to the Moon, has planed to the United States from London to promote Round, Round—claimed to be the first anti-drug record to be released.

King, who penned the number, claims it is a warning to young people not to take drugs. He figures that anti-drug propaganda via pop music is likely to be the best way to spread the message . . . The Raveyard opens April 28 at 1610 Oak Bay Avenue, the same location in which The Cage tried to make a go of it a few months back. At present, plans look like the club will feature two bands on hand every night . . . The Volume 1, Number 2 issue of Offbeat hit the newsstands April 5. Now, with an eight-page format this month's issue holds an "Insight" write-up on Victoria's blues specialists, Blues By Five, a new regular gossip-type "Uptight" column as well as a whole load of other groovy goodies . . .

Work on Harmony

A singing group known as the Barbershoppers will soon be belting out Sweet Adeline, My Wild Irish Rose and other old favorites at Victoria functions. ASSASSINATION OF KENNEDY

KILLER HAD LONELY LIFE

Oswald Alienated First From Mother and Then Wife

THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT, by William Manchester; New York; Harper and Row; $12.50. (In Canada: Fitzhenry and Whiteside Ltd.)

Reviewed by I. D. Pal

This much-awaited book is a significant contribution to a tragic chapter in U.S. history: the assassination of President Kennedy.

The author's sources, which are listed in the book and run into nine pages, are mainly interviews (e.g. his tapes with Mrs. Kennedy take ten hours) and unpublished documents.

Mr. Manchester thus immersed himself in material consisting of 45 volumes and portfolios, and the result is undoubtedly a powerful narrative, skilfully re-creating the mood of bitterness, anguish, disbelief and emptiness that prevailed on November 22, 1963.

Dr. I. D. Pal is associate professor of economics at the University of Victoria.

Who killed President Kennedy?

Manchester's unequivocal answer is Lee Harvey Oswald. Behind Oswald was, notwithstanding recent developments of a "conspiracy case" at New Orleans, his unhappy childhood and his unhappy marriage. His childhood with Marguerite Oswald did not have much to offer; she had her own lonely life to live.

Later, she did not know, or did not perhaps care, that her son lived less than ten miles from her at the time of Kennedy's visit to Dallas.

Her movements after Lee was accused of assassination seem to have been motivated by a remarkable interest in publicity and finance. Lee's marriage to Marina Nikolaevna, "the unwanted, illegitimate daughter of an Archangel dyevushka," did not help matters.

Lee thought he had found a beauty in Minsk who would forever be his Marinenk, his submissive darling. Instead, she turned out to be a bourgeois housewife, jeering at him because he was a poor competitor in the capitalist wage market, and ridiculing him because, as she told him in front of others, "he was 'not a man' in bed."

•

This was the man who fired at President Kennedy at 1:30 p.m. E.S.T. according to Manchester. The author believes that three shots could have, and may well have, been fired from Oswald's rifle within the crucial time-span.

Manchester gives strong emphasis to the scene of crime, the city of Dallas.

The Warren Commission had found "no evidence of any connection between the crime of Lee Harvey Oswald and the city's "general atmosphere of hate."

To Manchester, however, an enlightened speculation on the link is in order as "The mind of every assassin runs on a narrow-guage track. But there are no loners. No man lives in a void. His every act is conditioned by his time and his society."

In 1963 Dallas was a Republican stronghold with big money, almost all new money. It had the reputation of being the "Southwest hate capital of Dixie," and the Dallas Morning News under E. M. "Ted" Dealey had contributed a lot towards making the fundamentalist radical extremism reputable in the city.

•

After the assassination, however, the paper declared in an editorial that "it cannot be charged with fairness that an entire city is in national disgrace, but certainly its reputation has suffered regrettable damage."

But Dallas Times Herald thought differently: before the shots could be fired, first there had to be the seeds of hate—"and we must pray that Dallas can never supply the atmosphere for tragedy to grow again." Here is then the interplay of forces lurking in the background of the assassination of Kennedy, which Mr. Manchester has portrayed so beautifully in the book.

When Mr. Manchester turns to the immediate circumstances following the assassination, his analysis clearly brings out the human side of the tragedy, particularly in its effect on Jacqueline Kennedy, who played her role with dignity and grace. Contrary to some reports in the press, Mr. Manchester's treatment of Lyndon B. Johnson does not seem to me to be unfair or unnecessarily critical.

Obviously Johnson thought that the business of government must go on in spite of the tragedy, and perhaps he was motivated by this in his desire to take the second oath of office at Dallas airport before leaving for Washington. With the best will in the world on his part, he would have had difficulty in making those who were loyal and deeply committed to President Kennedy adjust to the sudden change.

Mr. Manchester refers to the chaos among spectators of the Kennedy procession following the shooting, and to the complete breakdown of communications system of the Federal Government that lasted not less than an hour in the afternoon of November 22, 1963. If there is any truth in these assertions, and some of the latter ones have already been denied by the spokesmen of the U.S. State Department, they show how vulnerable is the complicated fabric of modern industrial society, and how thin is the barrier to chaos.

One conclusion that follows from reading this most absorbing story told in 647 pages is that one cannot entirely guard against the actions of mad men, but should never tolerate campaigns of hate and extremism by organized groups.

The deletion of some passages from the book at the request of Mrs. Kennedy does not seem to have affected the continuity of the story. There are some points with which the present reader could take issue with Mr. Manchester, but they are minor in relation to the rest of the book, which deserves a very careful reading.

LOOKING AT BOOKS

Folder on Assassination For Mature Readers Only

By JOAN COLDWELL

COLDWELL

You may have already encountered, probably in schoolrooms, a series of publications called Jackdaws.

These are not books but folders containing maps, drawings and facsimile documents designed to illustrate major events of history.

In the Jackdaw on the Battle of Agincourt, for example, you get, among other things, a plan of the battle, explanations and illustrations of soldiers' equipment and a letter in Henry V's own handwriting. You can have a dossier on Wolfe at Quebec, or Joan of Arc, or Captain Cook — in fact, there are 35 subjects already in Jackdaws and 8 more in preparation.

All very helpful teaching aids, for home as well as school, and an original way of stimulating interest in the past.

•

But now comes a Jackdaw Special "suitable only for adults and older children". Entitled The Assassination of President Kennedy, it contains 18 separate exhibits, many of them photographic reproductions of material supplied by U.S. Government agencies and one of them a Secret Service document only recently de-classified.

Exhibit number one is a cardboard model of Dealey Plaza, complete with instructions for positioning the tiny presidential car. There is a full-scale representation of the alleged assassination rifle and a reproduction of the autopsy report. If this is not painful enough, there are medical illustrations of the President's wounds and photographs of the bullet-holes in his blood-stained shirt.

At first I found the very idea of this publication revolting, just another example of poor taste and money-making sensationalism.

But when I read through "Notes on the Exhibits" and the pamphlet "Unanswered Questions" I began to feel that here for the first time was information about the assassination clearly, briefly and unemotionally presented, facts from which one could attempt to work to one's own conclusions.

I still balk at trying some of the suggested experiments: placing the butt of the dismantled rifle in the hand, for example, the upper part tucked under the armpit, to see if Oswald could possibly have so carried the gun into the School Book Depository as the Warren Commission concluded.

But I am convinced that a thoughtful scrutiny of the Jackdaw material should go along with a reading of William Manchester's book or, indeed, with any of the numerous publications attacking or defending the Warren Report.

It is a little late in the day to claim, as the publishers do, that this Jackdaw Special presents documentary evidence "collected before the facts become blurred by commentary". But their attempt to "make the debates and arguments easier to follow" is timely; their documents also constitute a touchstone by which theories and conclusions may be tested.

•

The Jackdaw Special is published in Britain and distributed in Canada by Clarke Irwin. Official protests have blocked its entry to the United States, where it is for the time being unobtainable on the legitimate market. Now you know what you might sneak across the border in return for all those once-banned Henry Miller novels! THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY, compiled and designed by Michael Rand, Howard Loxton and Len Deighton. Toronto: Clarke, Irwin and Company Ltd. $3.00. (All other Jackdaws, $2.50 each).

ARRIVAL IN DALLAS of President Kennedy and Jacqueline was prelude to disaster. The assassination seems destined to produce more books than any other single event in modern history. See reviews this page.

All Wars Bring Blunders And Vimy No Exception

VIMY RIDGE by Alexander McKee, published by The Ryerson Press, Toronto, price $7.75. 242 pages. Illustrations and Index.

Reviewed by ERIC HENDERSON

The outstanding feature of this work is the author's achievement — where so many others have failed — in presenting a clear, over-all view of a major action in warfare while simultaneously maintaining the picture as seen from the fighting soldier's viewpoint.

Personal anecdotes and reminiscences of surviving veterans predominate in this account of the great Battle of Vimy Ridge.

In some respects the book may prove controversial. Mr. McKee's merciless condemnation of the shortcomings of Field-marshal Haig, the high-ranking generals and their hide-bound staffs, may meet with only qualified agreement in some quarters, on the grounds that all wars have produced their blunders, bunglers and dogmatic obstinacy which are easy to criticize after the event. But the supporters of "Hellyer-ism" and their "bright young brass" in Ottawa will love it.

Old soldiers may be puzzled by the author's tendency to mix 1914 terminology with that of later wars. Vimy men always spoke of "the Imperials" — never "the British", and there was no such rank then as "Brigadier". A few personal names, inevitably, are misspelled.

The tactical aspect is deftly handled in lucid, non-technical language. As the task required a larger force than the strength of a Corps, other troops were placed temporarily under Canadian command. While Vimy Ridge was essentially a "Canadian show", the author accords full credit to these other brigades, batteries and battalions and to the Royal Flying Corps. He does the same for all Canadian units with commendable impartiality (which is a refreshing change from the tendency of many writers of Canadian war books).

The gallantry and self-sacrifice of the Royal Flying Corps (many of whom were Canadians) during the operation is not forgotten. There is also an illuminating description of the situation in which the cavalry found themselves — brave, devoted men frequently mowed down in tasks made impossible by wire and machine-guns. The closing chapter, "Post Mortem", is especially thought-provoking.

New Paperback On W. B. Yeats

Now out in paperback is a revised edition of The World of W. B. Yeats, edited by Robin Skelton and Ann Saddlemyer. Originally published in 1965 as part of the Yeats Centenary Festival at the University of Victoria, the book is a collection of essays designed to place the poet's work in the context of his own time and his many and varied interests. The paperback edition is published by University of Washington Press at $2.95.

PRIVATE LESSONS AND COACHING AT ANY LEVEL

1044 BURDETT EV 2-2668

SHORT NOTICES: Fiction

GOODBYE, by William Sansom. Clarke, Irwin and Company Ltd., $4.65. 253 pp.

William Sansom's new novel manages to ring some refreshing and surprising changes on the theme "she's leaving me."

Anthony Lyle has heard threats of a break-up from his wife, Zoe, several times before and the news at first means nothing more to him than a disturbed weekend: cupboards sorted, bags packed, and uncomfortable and inconvenient meals. But Zoe means it, and once Lyle has got the point his world collapses.

As the Friday deadline for his wife's walkout approaches, he struggles to gain her sympathies and, more important, to grasp the reasons for her dramatic decision after 18 years. However, if things seem mad at home, Lyle soon discovers that his friends in their quiet, almost rural, London street have been touched by even greater madness. His marital dilemma is catching.

•

The surface of this story ripples with comedy, and in Mr. Sansom's hands the situation frequently deepens into a piercing examination of marriage and the feelings of men and women who have simply got too used to each other.

The upper middle-class world with its smart Sunday Observer intellectualism is brilliantly drawn to expose the oddities beneath its habit-bound surface. Lyle clings desperately to the "realities" of his surroundings, and one by one they turn out to be not what they seemed, until there is only the solidity of his dog, Mange, and the indispensable handyman, Jenks, and his projected bicycle shed with its concrete floor.

Eventually even these tangibles fail him and Lyle is driven to his own drastic solution as the novel explodes into the hilarious yet disturbing melodrama of its final chapters.

THE PLUM EXPLOSION, by John van der Zee. Longmans of Canada Ltd., $5.50. 216 pp.

Raymond Moss first notices the plum-orchard while he is a lonely misfit in a Californian graduate school. A green and blossomed island in an encroaching sea of widening highways, housing developments and shopping plazas, it becomes for him a symbol of what America has done and is doing to its land.

At first simply a place where he can be himself, the orchard grows into an ideal for Ray, a place of beauty that he can save from defilement: "They don't make state parks out of orchards."

His passion for it leads him out of law school and into the building trade, where he is painfully transformed into a master of the hard-sell, persuading wary and unwilling "prospects" to settle for a subdivided Utopia.

But there is still the orchard, and Ray, now established and prosperous, throws in his job and attempts to turn the plum fields into that Nirvanas of Nirvanas, the perfect housing development, set in a garden of plum trees.

These are the stuff that dreams and Ph. D. theses are made on, but the dream crumbles, the masterplan has to be adapted to conform to less imaginative state housing ordinances, to human greed and pettiness. The final irony is that nature itself deals the last blow.

This refreshing and compassionate first novel traces the oddly conflicting fortunes of an anti-hero who has "always known, deep down, that (he) was going to be left with nothing."—A.W.J.

. . . And Non-Fiction

THE HOUSE OF TOMORROW, by Jean Thompson. Harper and Row; $6.25; (Fitzhenry and Whiteside Ltd.) 178 pages.

This is the diary of an unmarried mother, recording the time she spent in a Salvation Army home awaiting the birth of her child.

Jean Thompson (a pseudonym) was an ordinary college student, twenty years old, and the character revealed in the diary remains ordinary and rather dull. But in a way this is a virtue, because there are no attempts to dramatize the situation, no moralizings, recriminations or tear-jerkings.

There is one moral crisis in the decision Jean Thompson had to make about the future of the child and in coping with this she gained a certain maturity.

The most compelling part of the book is the sympathetic evocation of the atmosphere of shelter and friendliness in the Salvation Army home, where 60 girls waited in a limbo of assumed names and respect for each other's secretiveness.

The House of Tomorrow is readable enough, but it presents a superficial view of a serious issue. Possibly it will be of most interest, as the dustjacket blurb suggests, to "thousands of girls who are or might be unmarried mothers."—J.C.

What Strike Feels Like

Three Quebec teachers describe what it feels like to be a professional worker on strike in the March issue of Monday Morning, a new magazine for Canadian teachers.

The issues in the Quebec walkout are discussed in a separate article in the Toronto-based magazine. The new periodical is published by Saturday Night Publications Ltd. Publisher is Arnold Edinborough. Saturday Night vice-president William Nobleman was in Victoria briefly this week to help promote the venture.

By DON VIPOND

The tragedy in young love is the mysterious flower explored in Point of Departure, a legend of lovers opening at the McPherson Playhouse Friday night.

Jean Anouilh's tale of youthful lovers groping to understand and clutch what they have stumbled upon is a moving story which demands much of those who would tell it.

There are enough moments which touch close to the heart of this strange sweet thing called love to make this Bastion Theatre production well worth seeing.

DISCOVERY

The story is from legend, that of Orpheus and Eurydice, their magic discovery of each other, their tragic parting and joyful reunion. The setting is now, a railway station, a point for meeting and departure.

The theme is eternal, the mortal quality of a love which cries for immortality.

All of which sounds both frustrating and gloomy. But not as Anouilh sees it. For it provides a greater discovery, he suggests — love outlasts life itself, will flourish when the prejudices and caprices of life are left behind.

An interesting thought and one we'll all be able to test some day.

SECOND ACT

The burden of the legend lies for Dan MacDonald and Markyta Mares, Orpheus and Eurydice, to breathe to life with their love.

They do this handsomely in the second act where, sprawled on their bed they relive their first union in glee and stuttering phrases, catching that rapture young lovers find as they discover each other and themselves.

Edwin Stephenson as Monsieur Henri, the vocal link with death, is impressive with his chilling impassiveness and tight control on a role nicely underplayed.

Among a solid supporting cast, Don McManus as Dulac, the entrepeneur personifying the past Eurydice so fears to reveal, deserves high marks. Bill Hosie and Jeremy Boultbee give strong support too.

Only two sets back this play and they are both outstanding, enriched by superb lighting. Credit here goes to Lawrence Eastick and Paul Smitz.

Director Peter Mannering's production continues at the Playhouse until next Saturday.

Festival Awarded $80,000

OTTAWA(CP)— The Canada Council Friday announced grants for musical and theatrical events during 1967.

The Fathers of Confederation memorial building trust will receive $80,000 for the Charlottetown Festival. This summer's festival includes Pierre Berton's new musical, Paradise Hill, and an English translation of Gratien Gelinas' play Hier les enfants dansaient.

An additional $21,000 was awarded to the Halifax symphony orchestra for performances at the Charlottetown festival.

Jeunesse Musicales du Canada will receive $25,000 to hold an international competition for young composers. New works from 24 nations will be entered. Montreal's Instant Theatre will receive $15,000.

The Globe Theatre in Regina will receive $10,000 for its current season and the University of Saskatchewan $4,600 to support six exhibition concerts of works by Canadian composers.

The Vancouver Festival Society has been awarded $50,000 and a grant of $7,000 goes to the Vancouver Symphony Society to provide accompaniment to two Vancouver Opera Association productions.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1967 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

On Thursday evenings, our favorite supermart is usually well-populated with shopping couples. This week, however, it was empty to the point of desolation.

A half dozen women browsed their buggies along the aisles. But apart from me only two men were visible, and each looked as if the loved one behind whom he mooched had just caused him to be served with divorce papers.

This curious state of affairs puzzled us no end as, as we chose without competition from among the bargain steaks, we speculated on the cause.

Had the city been smitten by a sudden and massive plague, the announcement of which we'd somehow missed?

Or could it be that a squadron of UFOs had landed in Beacon Hill Park?

Or—descending from the implausible to the possible—was some other market offering a host of super-specials on its shelves and in its bins?

Finally we decided the best way to find out was to ask, and put the question to our favorite cashier, the one who always packs the eggs on top.

"Hockey night," she told Win. "The men are all watching the first playoff game." Then, wrapping the lettuce with a flip and a twist, "Don't tell me your husband forgot about it!"

And so home, to learn Chicago had taken the Leafs in a game I wouldn't have missed for all the steak in the Cariboo country!

While nobody can deny that British Columbia's municipal affairs minister is a man of ideas, I would suggest to the Indian that he weigh Dan Campbell's latest proposal with extreme care.

It is a very fine thing to possess your own piece of property, and to share the rights and privileges enjoyed by the home-owner within the standard Canadian municipality. But there is another side to the picture, and I think the dweller on a reserve presently held in trust for his band by the federal government should be fully aware of it.

Municipalized, he will be liable for property tax, and the more valuable the property, the higher that tax rises. Such "gifts" as the home-owner grant and the home acquisition grant tend to shrivel when, with the other hand, the recipient is shelling out tax payments that can run to a good many hundred dollars.

As long range theory, Mr. Campbell's proposal may have merit. But until the B.C. Indian is convinced beyond doubt that it has been framed for his benefit rather than that of revenue-hungry provincial government, he would be wise to hasten slowly.

Among the white man's sayings are two worth heeding. "I fear the Greeks even when they come bearing gifts" is one; and the other, 'Out of the fying pan, into the fire."

I hope the native brother will consider them well.

A note to hand from Bill Wallis of Bellevue, Wash., the strayed Victorian who got to boasting about the size of our B.C. steelhead, then had the bad luck to lose the clipping on which his claims were based.

On the strength of a new supply of clips forwarded, Mr. Wallis is now out of the local Liars' Club, and his fishing cronies are speaking to him again.

By way of comparison, the expatriate sends a photo of a steelie reputed to be the biggest ever caught in Washington's Skykomish River.

It's a nice fish ... but compared to some that have come from the Skeena and the Kispiox, a youngster still.

While I'm not in the lost cat finding business, will you please oblige by keeping a lookout for a small white puss with one green and one blue eye, and a sore spot on its chest?

Its mistress is a student nurse named Jill (384-2585). Her dad, Norman Cribbens, bore up splendidly as my best man when we and the world were slightly younger.

TWO ESQUIMALT constables were honored today by the Order of St. John for their part in the rescue of children from a fire on Esquimalt Road, New Year's Day. From left are Constable Douglas Sproxton, awarded a certificate of honor; his daughter, Mrs. R. Cleemoff; Constable Stuart W. Rhodes, awarded a meritorious certificate, and his son, Stewart. BELLS RING FOR ACCOUNTANTS

They May Become Phone-Drunk But Taxpayers Happier for It

By TED GASKELL

Remember the Red Skelton character, the punchdrunk boxer who imagined he heard bells?

Some of Victoria's chartered accountants might be forgiven if they become phone-drunk and start hearing imaginary telephone buzzers after today's session with curious taxpayers.

Victoria members of the Inistitute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. set up a one-day telephone inquiry bureau and invited questions on income tax from the public.

And they got them.

The three phones started ringing about 8:45 a.m., 15 minutes before the service was due to start. They never stoped during the morning. Calls were coming in at the rate of 50 an hour. Last year there were 200 during the day.

Investment income, property rental income, Canada Pension Plan deductions, gifts and medical expenses provided popular questions.

Rarely were the accountants stumped. They answered practically all the questions without reference to the thick volumes of tax information standing in the middle of the table. Occasionally they would consult a colleague but mostly they gave answers clearly and quickly off the top of their heads.

One or two out-of-town calls came in.

DEDUCT CAR?

One man wanted to know if he gave his wife an automobile could he deduct this from his income?

One concerned caller wondered if he had to pay income tax on an inheritance he received. No, said the accountant, but he would have to pay tax on any interest the inheritance earned if he invested it. The inheritance was $70.

Another man said he hadn't filed a return for 1957, what should he do?

Only one question stumped the panel and that was a case of "wouldn't" rather than "couldn't" answer.

The question?

Can you tell me the name of a good chartered accountant?

COLDWELL AWARDED DOCTORATE

Miss Joan Coldwell, an assistant professor of English at the University of Victoria, has been awarded a Ph.D. degree by Harvard University.

Miss Coldwell, a Shakespeare scholar, wrote her degree thesis on the history plays of Shakespeare.

Born in England, she received her master's degree with distinction from the University of London, a rarely awarded honor. She has taught for five years at Uvic.

Miss Coldwell has held a Canada Council scholarship and a Harvard Fellowship. She was a contributor last year to a book of essays on the Irish poet W. B. Yeats.

Miss Coldwell is book editor of the Victoria Times. One of her articles appears today on page 10.

ASK PARENTS, TEACHERS

'Pointed' Questions On Schools Planned

PEANUTS
"HERE'S THE CHURCH AND HERE'S THE STEEPLE.."
4-8
"OPEN THE DOOR..."
"AND SEE ALL THE PEOPLE!"
SORT OF A SMALL CONGREGATION
SCHULZ

Teachers and parents will be asked some basic — and pointed — questions about the education of children in Greater Victoria public schools.

The Association of Women Electors wil; ask them.

They will be circulated in questionnaire form next week to half the teachers in the public school system and to several thousand homes in the city.

Idea behind the survey is to find out what teachers and public really think of the present educational system and the changes they think should be made in it.

Typical of questions asked teachers are:

What innovations would you like introduced into the public schools?

Are you satisfied with the training you receive?

What are the main reasons so many students are not interested in school work?

What are your main differences of opinion with parents, the school board, the district superintendent, and the department of education?

Parents will be asked, among other things:

If they think they should have a voice in the choice of studies given their children?

If taxpayers whose children attend private schools should be given a reduction in public school taxes?

If their children have ever been treated in a seriously unjust way at school and, if so, how was the matter settled?

Both groups will also be asked to mark on a multiple-choice chart the aspects of education they want to see most emphasized in the schools.

Thieves Take Empty Safe

Burglars made off with a safe from the office of Economy Steam Laundry, 607 John St., in a break-in overnight.

City detectives said today the safe was empty.

The thieves made their way into the plant through a skylight.

An electric razor and $15 in pennies was reported missing in another break-in at Speedy Auto Wash, 1011 Fort, where the robbers forced open a rear door.

Band, Choirs At McPherson

The Belmont High Band will give a concert in the McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 3 p.m.

There will also be a combined choir from Glen Lake Elementary School and Colwood Elementary conducted by Angela Newton.

Choir and band will combine to sing Bobby Gimby's centennial song Canada.

'Stay In' Weekend

Outdoorsmen can take it easy this weekend.

There's nothing worth going out for.

The sun won't be shining, the temperatures won't be soaring and there's nowhere to escape.

Most of Vancouver Island will be under a cloud blanket and showers are expected throughout the day.

Winds will be westerly 15-20 with temperatures reaching 50.

Tonight will be no better with heavy showers expected and Monday will be cloudy.

That was the weekend that was.

Ask The Times

Q. Was there ever a weather station at Mount Tolmie? — W. H. B.

A. Search of records at the Gonzales station indicates there was never a department of transport station there.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

FORMAL NOTICE GIVEN

$48,810 Street Lighting Plan Initiated by Saanich

A $48,810 street lighting plan for Saanich was announced today.

Formal notice of initiation of the plan as a local improvement said $11,743 of the total will be paid by the municipality.

The estimated annual special rate per foot frontage is 7.4 cents to be paid in 10 annual instalments.

The areas to get street lights include Douglas Street between Carey and Haynes, Carey between Tait and Marigold and an area bounded by Kent, Carey, Agnes and Douglas with a few exceptions.

Objectors have one month to petition council against the work.

Family Attending Drive-In As Fire Levels Home

A father and his five children returned from a drive-in theatre early today to find their Glen Lake home in ashes.

Fire left only one wall standing of the small one-storey frame house of Leo Toutant at 3030 Jacklin.

Langford Fire Chief Al Lequesne estimated loss in the blaze at about $9,000.

He said he will call in the fire marshal's office to help investigate the fire.

●

By the time firemen arrived the house was blazing from end to end, the chief said. Doors and windows were shut but the basement was open.

The chief said he felt sure the fire started in the basement.

Neighbors reported hearing an explosion from the house, near Jenkins Avenue, about 1 a.m. and it was thought this was the gas tank of an old truck in the basement.

Langford volunteer firemen fought the fire until about 3:30. As they prepared to head back for the station it broke out again and the battle finally ended after 5 a.m.

●

Mr. Toutant, a carpenter, lived in the house with five of his six children, Kelly, Robert, Keith, Shannon and Joey, ranging in age from four to 13.

WANTS 'ALL FACTS'

Mayor to Probe Welfare Charge

By PETE LOUDON

Charges of "punitive treatment" of welfare recipients here will be investigated by Mayor Hugh Stephen.

He said today, "I'm going to brief myself as thoroughly as I can" on the allegations contained in a letter of protest he received this week.

The letter was sent by the Low Income Co-operative of Greater Victoria, a 56-member group of persons receiving welfare benefits.

Mayor Stephen said he would withhold any reply until his investigations are complete.

He said the letter gave rise to a great many questions and added, "I will answer it when I've got all the facts."

Main charges against the city's welfare administration are:

- That names of welfare recipients have been given to the police for surveillance.
- That welfare applicants have been "verbally abused and treated punitively" by welfare staff.
- That three professional social workers have volunteered evidence of this abuse and four welfare recipients are prepared to give testimony backing the charge.
- That present welfare allowances are 30 per cent below adequate living requirements, leading to slum living and deprivation.
- That local welfare administrators being aware of the hardships, have not advised city council.

HEAR EVIDENCE

The group asked the council to investigate and hear evidence. It earlier suggested that evidence be taken in private and under protected circumstances in order that certain salaried persons would not lose their jobs through frankness.

The association is headed by Mrs. Donna Langstaff.

It was learned unofficially that the Low Income Cooperative plans a further step to draw public attention to the plight of welfare recipients.

A plan now afoot is to approach women's auxiliaries to various Victoria churches and invite them to visit homes of welfare recipients.

ADD VOICES

The churchwomen would then be asked to join in further complaints to city hall. Several clergymen already have endorsed the campaign.

One of the main points the association hopes to make is that most people requiring social assistance are in these circumstances through conditions beyond their control. Many are women with children who have been deserted by husbands, often with alcoholism the cause.

Battler Questions 'Steep' Fine

Two men arrested for fighting on a downtown sidewalk Friday night were fined $50 each today.

Peter Havas, 20, of 930 McClure, and Robert Fredrick, also 20, of 910 Empress, both pleaded guilty in central court to causing a disturbance.

"It was just a small argument," Havas told Magistrate Harold Alder of the scuffle in the 700 block Yates.

He questioned the "steep" fines, suggested about $15 was the usual penalty for such offences.

"There's no usual fine today," said the magistrate who earlier suggested the public deserved protection from this sort of incident.

Rider Suffers Cuts to Face

James Spencer, 56, of 700 Cowper suffered face cuts in a two-car crash at Gorge and Rock Bay Avenue this morning.

City police said he was a passenger in a car driven by Myrna Hunter, 1938 Trans-Canada Highway, which was turning from Rock Bay to Gorge when it was in collision with an auto eastbound on Gorge and driven by Charles Cuming, 457 Walter Avenue.

4.8 Mill Increase For Schools

School taxes in Greater Victoria will likely increase by 4.8 mills this year.

Last year the rate was 23.13 mills.

The announcement of the increase was made Friday by Education Minister Leslie Peterson.

Earlier in the day school board officials said it was not possible to estimate this year's increase until the new level of assessments became known.

The new assessments figures will not be made public until around April 15 but were available to Mr. Peterson to make his estimate.

He said the estimated mill rate will increase by an average of 3.55 mills throughout the province.

"The major cause of the increase is teachers' salaries although school districts appear to be increasing their other operating expenses proportionately," he said.

MORE TEACHERS

Increases in teachers' salaries is due not only to wage increases but also to the increased number of teachers needed to handle growing enrolment of students.

Mr. Peterson said government grants to meet education operating costs will total $102,100,000 this year, an increase of 16 per cent over last year's expenditure.

He announced that the basic levy to be raised by school boards has been raised by the government to 16.10 mills from 15.95 in 1966.

WRONG NAME GIVEN TO MISS CANADA

Attention is called to an error in identification in a picture caption in Weekend Magazine which appears in today's issue.

On Page 3 of the magazine Miss Canada is identified as Diane Coulter of Wheatley, Ont. In fact she is Miss Barbara Kelly of Vancouver.

Her photo also appears on the front cover of the magazine. The error was discovered too late for correction in the publication of the magazine.

INDIAN TRIBES AND MASKS OF CANADA

COLORED MAP, showing with the use of totem poles, masks and faces, the original location of Indian tribes in Canada, was made by 38 grade 5 students at Hillcrest elementary school in Gordon Head. The class, under direction of principal Wilfred Durrant, researched the project, discovered the distinctive masks associated with each tribe, drew the map and made the masks and totem poles. Admiring their own skill are, from left, Annabelle Burrows, Wendy Deloume, Brock Coupar and Janet Wallace. Map is on display at school but will be entered later in Centennial exhibition and likely end up in the lobby of the school board office. (Photo by Irving Strickland.)

Harmony is People ... Mixed with Music

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Maybe music is not altogether the "food of love" as Will Shakespeare romantically put it, but there is no doubt that it is a versatile means of communication of ideas and emotions, transcending the years, language barriers and ethnic backgrounds.

Part of the value of the Greater Victoria Music Festival lies in this bringing together for a shared experience of a broad cross-section of Victorians of all ages and national and racial origins.

The festival, which has been an annual highlight for thousands of local music makers and music lovers over the past 20 years, opens Monday at 9 a.m. and continues, with a Sunday pause, through April 21.

This year's first week is a meeting ground for school bands, orchestras, choirs and dance groups. Also solo and ensemble brass and woodwind and string classes.

First United Fellowship Hall, Central Junior High School, Sir James Douglas School Auditorium and First United Youth Room will be the centres.

In the second week will be concentrated, adult and junior vocal and choral, speech arts, piano, organ and accordion classes.

Additional centres will be St. John's Memorial Hall and First United Assembly Hall.

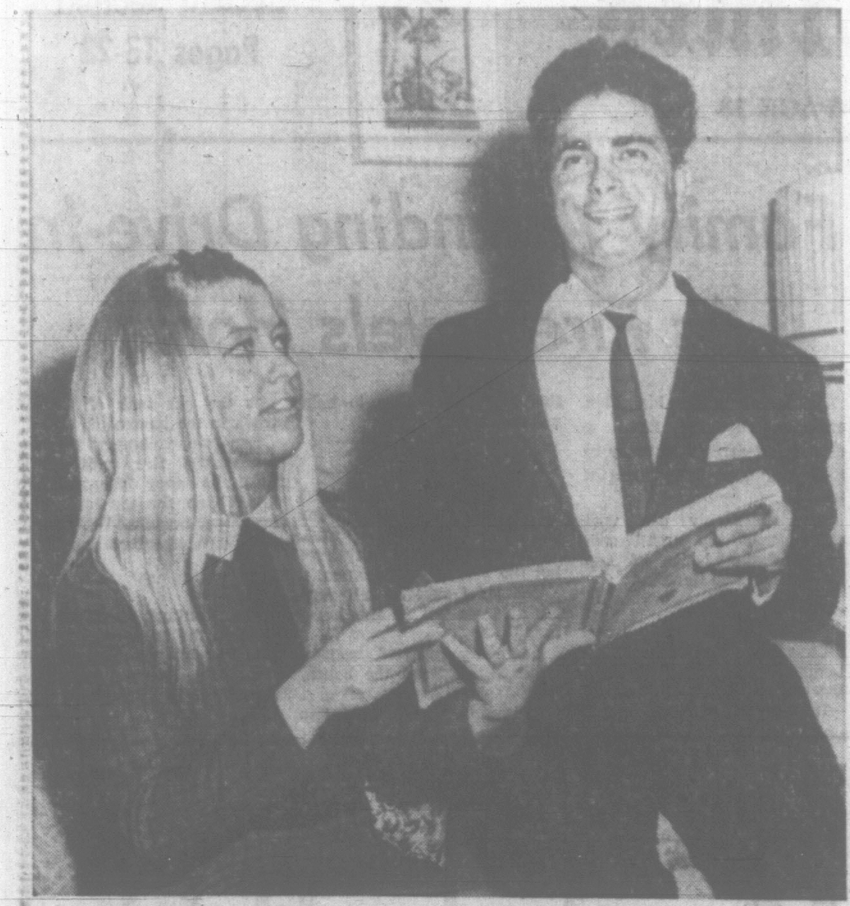
Evaluating, and commenting on the performances will be, for the schools, a team of three adjudicators from Washington State University Department of Music—Barton Frank, Robert Miller and Allen Boyer; for the dance section, Shirley Nalevykin from the University of British Columbia.

British adjudicators Nigel Coxe (piano) and Cecil Cope (singing) will arrive for the second week. Mrs. Eileen Parker of Burnaby will be here for speech classes and Crawford Clark of Nanaimo for accordion.

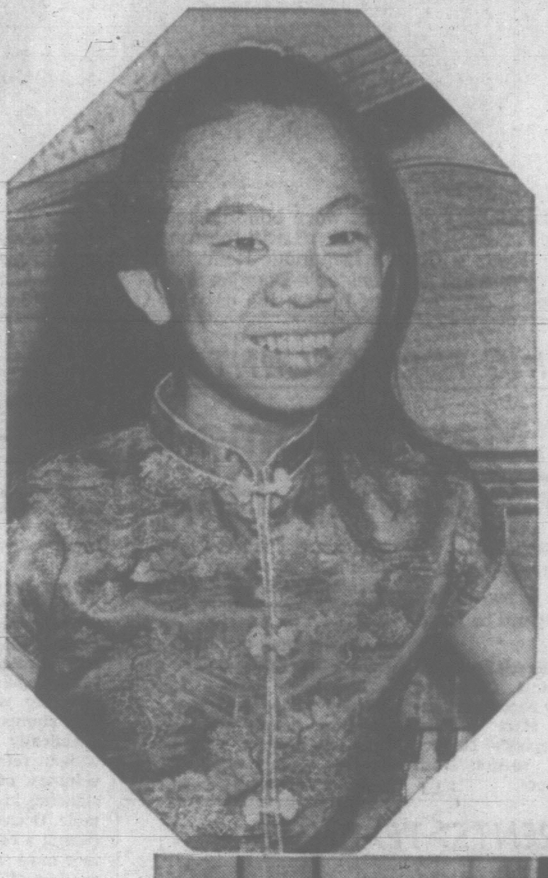
Programs giving times and places in detail can be obtained at local music stores.

Membership tickets may also be purchased which will admit the holder to all day and evening sessions and at half price to the Festival Highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse, April 21.

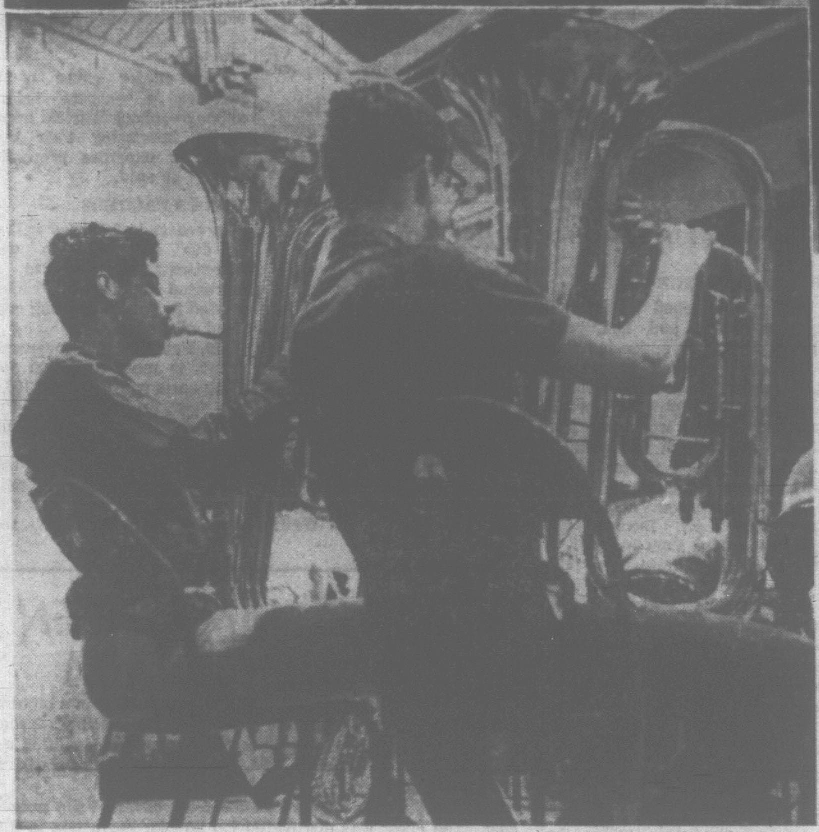
There will be two other special evening concerts: the Schools Honor Performance April 14 at Central Junior Secondary and the Speech Arts Honor Performance April 20 at Sir James Douglas School.



Pronunciation of some German words in a Schubert song floors Italian-born Guiseppe Bianco. But it helps when they are translated by his fellow student, German-Canadian Irene Boese, into the third language—English—which has now become a first language for both of them. Mr. Bianco, a tenor, and Miss Boese, contralto, are entered in vocal solo classes, find the study and making of music an ideal catalyst for life in a new land.



Young pianist, Becky Jay, 13, has proved a notable talent in recent festivals. At the age of nine, Becky won the Bach championship against all comers, this year is entered in seven classes. A large number of Chinese Canadians are also participating in the many school instrumental and dance group entries as well as solo classes.



Quality as well as quantity makes the band classes of the schools participation week one of the glories of the whole festival. Like many other secondary schools in the Greater Victoria area, Gordon Head Junior Secondary has several entries in instrumental ensemble and solo classes drawn from its band which will also perform. There is, for example, the all-girl flute quartette, above left to right, Kathie Tattrie, Linda Marshall, Jane Pearce and Mary Watson, and at left, oomping along in harmony during rehearsal, are the band's tuba players, Ronald Jasper and Arthur Underhill. Emil Michaux is the director. Sharing the fun and satisfaction of making music together at the keyboard will be a very youthful trio consisting of Benjamin Wood, Colin Mack and Daphne Feldman, in photograph at right. They are typical of young musicians who are being initiated into what could become a lifelong pleasure in ensemble performance.

We've Come of Age

The present Victoria Music Festival was introduced 21 years ago at the instigation of Dr. J. F. K. English, who brought together a founding group of teachers, musicians and other interested citizens.

He became the first president and has served on the board ever since.

For the first year or so the festival occupied only two or three days, then it began to grow steadily until it expanded into a second week and was drawing upwards of a thousand entries.

The 1967 festival, which includes special Canadian Centenary classes, has just under 1,300 entries which, on careful tabulation, reveal that nearly 7,000 persons, mostly youthful but including all ages, are participating.

The fellowship of music is no mere idealistic phrase but a genuine fact in the young lives of these five accordionists whose lands of origin spread across Europe. Left to right, they are Jo-Ann Wolownik (Poland), Tina Zellensky and Alex Karpuchin (Russia), David Van Essen (Holland) and Diane Zaschke (Germany). Sessions in which they are participating fall in the second week, form a rapidly growing section of the festival.

Vimy Ceremonies On CBC Network Sunday Afternoon

Exactly 50 years after the historic Battle of Vimy Ridge, leaders from Canada, Britain and France—plus veterans of the battle itself—will gather in Ottawa and Vimy to commemorate the Allied victory, and those who paid dearly for it.

On Sunday Channel 2 will present same-day coverage of commemorative ceremonies in Vimy and Ottawa from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. in a program entitled Vimy 50 — A Remembrance.

Among those scheduled to attend services at the Vimy Ridge Memorial in France are Prince Philip; Hon. Leo Cadieux, Canada's associate minister of national defence; and 73 survivors of the battle, representing all the units that fought. Contingents of troops will include the Duke of Edinburgh's Own Royals, the Royal 22nd Regiment, the Princess Patricias Canadian Light Infantry, and the Royal Canadian Regiment. Commentator from Vimy will be Peter Reilly.

Among those at the Cenotaph in Ottawa will be Prime Minister Pearson; Hon. Roger Teilet, minister of veterans affairs, the chaplains general of the Canadian forces; and the Centennial Choir. Stanley Burke will be commentator from Parliament Hill.

A two-record album commemorating the bravery of Canadian troops at Vimy Ridge has been produced by the CBC. The album, containing two 12-inch LP records, authoritative notes by Col. C. W. L. Nicholson, C. D., official Canadian war photos and a comprehensive map of the Vimy sector may be obtained by writing to: CBC Publications, Box 500, Terminal "A", Toronto 1, Ontario. Price is $5.00.

Thom Benson is executive producer of Vimy 50 — A Remembrance. Producer at Vimy is Pierre Normandin; at Ottawa, Brian Frappier.

Telephone Hour

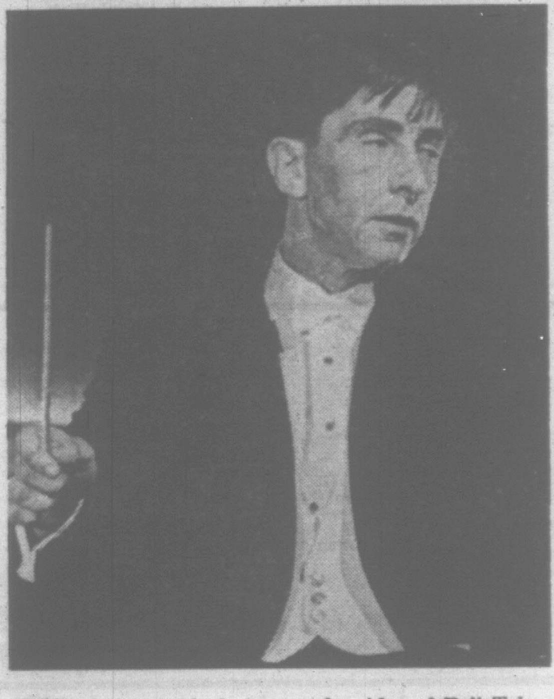
The new "Bell Telephone Hour" visits the home of jazz in a color special, "The Sounds and Sights of New Orleans," Sunday, at 6:30, on Channel 5.

Live U.S. network programming is subject to change during the current strike.

The city produced jazz and then exported it in the form of such music-makers as King Oliver, Red Allen, Sidney Bechet and Louis Armstrong. Cameras visit the site of the new trade and exhibition centre, where a construction crew has organized a jazz band called the "Hard Hats," which plays during the lunch break. They are part of the sound of New Orleans.

As if drawn by the music, the cameras move on to Bourbon Street, where two of the city's world-famous native sons, trumpet player Al Hirt and clarinetist Pete Fountain are appearing. There is a blast of sound as Hirt plays "Cotton Candy." The cameras move on to Pete Fountain's place, where the jazz clarinetist plays "Just a Closer Walk with Thee."

A few blocks away at the jazz museum are the relics of New Orleans' earlier jazz past. Here, Danny Barker, himself a living jazz legend, speaks of the city's rich and varied musical heritage. Nearby is Preservation Hall, a club where jazz is preserved in its most classic forms, and where De De Pierce sings "Eh La Bas," a creole song about food. His wife Billie plays a tinny piano and sings "Song of the Nile" the way it might have been done in the Thirties. They, too, are the sounds of this city.



ONE of the musical stars and guides of Bell Telephone Hour's visit to New Orleans will be conductor Werner Torkanowsky. The program will be seen on Channel 5, Sunday, at 6:30 p.m.

Golf Lesson

Everyone plays golf differently, which is part of the fun of the game. But if everyone selected exactly the same club, took exactly the same stance, and swung in exactly the same arc, their games would differ because of different size, weight, strength and idiosyncracies of individual players.

How each person can improve his game by making the most of his advantages and circumventing his handicaps is demonstrated in the series of 13 weekly lessons, Golf with Sam Snead, which will begin on Sunday at 5:30 on Channel 8.

Expert teacher Snead demonstrates golf for everyone, from boy to senior citizen, the undersized, the tall, lean and portly, male or female, even the left-handed player. Slow-motion cameras show detail of individual players' problems and how the master would solve them.

The lessons are given on one of the most challenging courses in the world, the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. Here "Slammin' Sam" moves his instruction from basic rules for beginners to such refinements as negotiating a dogleg hole, choice of club on the tee, intentional slices and fades, getting around trees, and overcoming the emotional and practical hazard of the waterhole. He chooses some of the most difficult holes of the course, and possible situations, to demonstrate his techniques.

Mormon Parley

The Sunday morning session of the 137th annual general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints will be telecast on Sunday at 10:30 a.m. on Channel 7.

Highlights of the LDS conference will be seen Sunday night at 12:20 a.m. on Channel 7.

David O. McKay, 93-year-old president and prophet, will preside over the sessions assisted by counsellors Hugh B. Brown, N. Eldon Tanner, Joseph Fielding Smith and Thorpe B. Isaacson.

The telecast will originate from the famed Mormon Tabernacle on historic Temple Square, home of the 375-voice Mormon Tabernacle Choir. The world-renowned choral group was organized shortly after the Mormon pioneers under Brigham Young arrived in the Salt Lake Valley in 1847.

Each year, thousands of members and friends of the LDS church crowd into the century-old Tabernacle, the meeting site since 1867, while millions more attend the conference via a network of 200 radio and television stations originating with KIRO TV's sister station KSL TV in Salt Lake City. More than 30 radio stations carry the messages of inspiration to listeners in the U.S., Canada, and by shortwave to Mexico, South America, the Caribbean, Africa and Europe.

Weekend highlights are listed as follows.

TONIGHT

8:30: Channel 7: National Geographic. A trip by boat through the rivers of Europe.

10:30: Channel 12: Frank Sinatra. A Man and His Music.

SUNDAY

6:00: Channels 2, 6: Stanley Cup Playoffs. The Black Hawks meet the third-place team in the semifinals.

6:30: Channel 5: Bell Telephone Hour. The Sounds and Sights of New Orleans is presented on tonights show.

SPACE SERIES

Star Learns To Control Emotions

HOLLYWOOD — Actor Leonard Nimoy is all choked up with emotions.

"I'm much more emotional than Mr. Spock," he said. "Spock rarely betrays what he is thinking or feeling. He's fun to portray. But I hope I won't explode one of these days."

Nimoy was talking about Spock, the science officer aboard the United Space Ship "Enterprise" on the NBC television network's "Star Trek" series.

It was fitting for Nimoy, the actor, to discuss emotions.

"When I first started as an actor my work was over-emotional," he said. "I considered acting an opportunity to express emotions— and I took advantage of every opportunity I got. It took me a long time to discover that restraint can be admirable."

Restraint, howerver, does not mean lack of emotion.

"The thing that irks me is lack of emotion trying to pass for restraint," he said. "Lack of emotion is pathological, restraint is civilized."

Nimoy indicated that a lot of people try to play it cool these days.

"Actors, for instance, want to be so cool that they become emotionless," he said. "Cool is an admirable trait under certain conditions, but there comes to a point where you have to become human and make a choice and say, 'No, I feel this is right or wrong.' "

The mind, according to Nimoy, is no substitute for the heart.

"Feelings and emotions can never and must never be replaced," he said. "We must never do away with man's humanity."

At the same time Nimoy values and respects the power of the mind.

LOGIC IMPORTANT

"We are heading into an era where calculated, cool logic is very important," Nimoy explained. "The astronauts are almost computer-like, in the good sense of the word. That's necessary, because science is so complex."

An actor, like an astronaut, must control his emotions, Nimoy feels.

"I have my emotions pretty well under control," said Nimoy. "I've been in TV and films for 17 years—the work requires a great deal of emotional control, if for no other reason than that the actor must reproduce emotions. I think of myself as an instrument that's tuned and that can evoke the proper sounds and responses."

Ballet in Folk Legend

French-Canadian Theme for Stars Of Winnipeg Troupe

MEMBERS of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet are seen during scene in French-Canadian folk legend, "Rose Latulippe", to be seen on Channels 2 and 6, Wednesday night, at 9:30.

A new full-length ballet based on an 18th-century folk legend of French Canadian origin, Rose Latulippe is the story of a simple peasant girl spellbound by an aristocratic stranger, driven to madness, and finally redeemed by love.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet production, with choreography by Brian Macdonald and an original score by Harry Freeedman, has been transferred from the stage to television for its presentation on CBC-TV's Music Canada series, Wednesday, at 9:30 p.m., on Channels 2 and 6.

In color, it is produced for telecast by Pierre Morin, Emmy Award winner a few seasons ago for his production of The Barber of Seville.

The French Canadian legend is said to precede by several years the story of a famous ballet, Giselle, with a somewhat similar theme.

Macdonald first read about Rose in 1954 and was struck by the story's possibilities as a ballet scenario, but he was unable to stir up interest in the idea. He researched the story, as well as the dances and costumes of the period, and in 1962, while studying overseas on a Canada Council grant, he discussed his idea with William Solly during a casual meeting. They completed the scenario three days later.

Harry Freedman's score ("mostly 12-tone") includes a 12-tone square dance and some electronic music. It's Freedman's first composition for ballet, and the Toronto composer reports that he wrote it for "a Mozart orchestra, plus a harp and a bit of extra percussion." The Royal Winnipeg Ballet orchestra is conducted by Carlos Rausch.

Producer Pierre Morin came to Toronto for the rehearsals and taping in January. Though he has worked with George Balanchine and the New York City Ballet for CBC-TV programs out of Montreal, Rose Latulippe is his first experience of a ballet production in color; in fact, it is CBC-TV's first use of color in a major ballet production.

Musical Night

Some of the most exciting young variety stars from Montreal team up with Toronto artists when CBC-TV's show of the week presents No Cover, No Minimum, a musical night "on the town," on Monday, at 9:00 p.m., on Channels 2, 6.

The idea of the show is an imaginary night out in a large Canadian city—a visit to cabarets, cocktail lounges, coffeehouses and folk music grottoes. Featured in the large cast are singers Pauline Julien, Renee Claude, Donald Lautrec and Cathy Chilco; satirists Barrie Baldaro and Joan Stuart; the comic impressionists Les Jerolas; folksinger Donna Louthoud; acrobatic dancers Susie and Paul; nightclub singer Paul Drake; and The Stitch in Tyme, one of the best of the new Toronto rock groups.

Entertainment ranges from a sultry ballad by Renee Claude (Have I the Right) to the rousing Bilbao Song by Kurt Weill, sung by Miss Julien. Music is under the direction of Lucio Agostini, and the choreographer is Pauline Ross. Written by David Cobb and Terry Kyne, the show is produced and directed by Kyne.

Color Cartoon

Charlie Brown's All-Stars, the animated color cartoon which was hailed by critics as "funny, pertinent, biting and shrewd" and "delightful to young and old"—will be telecast Monday, at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

The baseball season is in full swing, but Charlie Brown has a difficult time instilling much team spirit into Charlie Brown's All-Stars. Their opponents have three thousand runs to their six and Charlie Brown's All-Stars have lost nine hundred and ninety-nine straight games.

Much-needed incentive is supplied, however, by Mr. Hennessey, the local hardware merchant, who offers to sponsor the team and furnish the players with real uniforms. But Mr. Hennessey cancels the offer when he learns that three girls and one dog are members of the team. Sure that his squad will forget all about uniforms once they win a game, an overly-eager Charlie Brown tries to steal home, is called out, and Charlie Brown's All-Stars lose. But Charlie Brown's teammates forgive him when they learn he refused to kick the girls and Snoopy off the team in order to acquire uniforms, and reward him with a special uniform made out of Linus' blanket.

Oscar Awards

The 39th annual presentation of the Hollywood motion picture Academy Awards is scheduled to be carried live on Monday from 7 p.m. on Channels 2, 4, 6.

Once again, Bob Hope will be the host and master of ceremonies, and the stars presenting the 'Oscars' will include: Fred Astaire, Candice Bergen, Richard Harris, Audrey Hepburn, Rock Hudson, Dean Jones, Fred MacMurray, Mary Tyler Moore, Patricia Neal, Vanessa Redgrave, Lee Remick, Ginger Rogers, Rosalind Russell, Dick Van Dyke, Raquel Welch and Shelley Winters. Among those performing songs nominated for Awards will be Roger Williams, John Davidson and Jackie De Shannon. Musical direction will be by Johnny Green.

With Quakers

Director Dick Faun and cameraman William Heich are in North Vietnam with a group of U.S. Quakers who transported a cargo of medical supplies aboard the yacht Phoenix.

Faun and Heich are under contract to make a color film record of this mission for showing as a special one-hour documentary in May on the CBC-TV series The Public Eye.

After several weeks of negotiations with the Quaker action group of Philadelphia, Richard Nielsen, executive producer of The Public Eye, made arrangements to have the director and cameraman accompany the group aboard the Phoenix.

The two men boarded the 50-foot ketch before it left Hong Kong harbor March 21.

TV TID-BITS

Jim Backus of "Gilligan's Island" recalls that he once was chosen Best Newcomer of the Year in Radio — after he had appeared on hundreds of radio programs over a 12-year period.

Stephen Strimpell, television's "Mr. Terrific," studied law at Columbia University, was admitted to the New York Bar and spent six months in the judge advocate general's office before he began acting.

Julie Harris showed apprehension for wading into a swift-moving cold stream in Mexico, for an episode of NBC-TV's "Tarzan" recently, and director Alex Nicol walked over to reassure the actress. With gestures he explained how safe it was, lost his balance and promplty fell in.

FRANK McGEE
. . . world report

An advance report on President Johnson's trip to Punt del Este, Uruguay, for the Latin American chiefs of state meeting will be presented on "The Frank McGee Report" Sunday, at 6:00 p.m., on Channel 5.

Ron Nessen, NBC new Latin American correspondent, will report on the problems to be faced at the meeting and will interview South American officials, including President Frei of Chile. The meeting is scheduled for April 12-14.

Frank McGee will report on world and U.S. news.

STANFIELD DROPS BY FOR CHAT

CAMP BID NOT RULED OUT

Roblin Has Never Said No to Tory Leadership Challenge

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Stanfield-Roblin conference in Winnipeg this week stirred considerable speculation among the committed and uncommitted in the Conservative party on the national leadership.

One veteran observer with a high batting average on trends read it as a bid by Nova Scotia Premier Robert Stanfield for support from Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin at the Sept. 6-9 leadership convention in Toronto.

Even the prospect of a Nova Scotia provincial election before the leadership convention didn't shake this observer's evaluation of the meaning of the Stanfield-Roblin meeting.

Mr. Stanfield said in Winnipeg he has no interest in federal politics and intends to stay on in Nova Scotia.

Nevertheless political sources here say there is nothing to prevent him changing his mind if he gets a provincial election successfully out of the way before September.

Other quarters see the Stanfield visit as a plea from the Nova Scotia premier, with the support of National President Dalton Camp, either for Mr. Roblin to run or, possibly, back a move on the leadership by Mr. Camp.

Mr. Roblin is said by intimates to be angered at the latter interpretation.

Unlike Premier Stanfield or Premier John Robarts of Ontario, he has never said he's not interested in the federal leadership for himself.

Furthermore, he has frequently advanced the idea that two terms—about eight years—is long enough in office for any premier. He now is in his ninth year, having successfully carried out a provincial election last year.

ROBLIN
. . . watching, waiting

Mr. Roblin is said to have turned down chances to switch to the federal scene at least twice — four times by some counts. He is being urged by some of his advisers to accept this time.

Mr. Camp, now in Europe, has disclaimed leadership ambitions. Activity on his behalf for the leadership is not as open as for such candidates as Davie Fulton, George Hees and Michael Starr and potential candidate Alvin Hamilton, all former Diefenbaker ministers and members of Parliament.

Mr. Roblin is thought by some Conservatives to be better known nationally than Mr. Stanfield and to be sufficiently bilingual to carry some weight in Quebec. Having just been through a provincial election, he is in better shape to make a move now into federal politics.

If Messrs. Stanfield, Roblin and Camp are forming a triumvirate aiming at the leadership for one of them, their campaign is slow in getting started by comparison with the MP candidates.

Mr. Fulton has formed committees in many provinces, set up a headquarters here and has hired a staff. Lowell Murray, 30, formerly his executive assistant as justice minister, heads the campaign.

STANFIELD
. . . denies interest

Mr. Murray has Michel Cogger, a young Quebec City lawyer, as liaison between headquarters and the Fulton committees in Quebec, which has been divided for organization purposes into nine regions.

Paul Champagne, former executive assistant to the Senate opposition leader and 1965 press officer for Mr. Diefenbaker's election campaign, looks after arranging maximum exposure for Mr. Fulton in key areas between now and the convention.

Publicity is in the hands of George McLean, Toronto ad and public relations man who did similar work for the justice department when Mr. Fulton was the minister.

So far the Fulton campaign has concentrated on Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta and New Brunswick.

Mr. Hees and Mr. Hamilton, on the other hand, have displayed no visible organization with a central headquarters. But they have been travelling widely with the apparent intention of lining up commitments from voting delegates by impressing constituency organizations.

Mr. Starr has suffered under two handicaps. He first announced his intention of running only if Mr. Diefenbaker decides against contesting the convention. Later he made the full commitment to run.

As his party's House leader, Mr. Starr has had to stick much closer to the Commons than either Mr. Fulton or Mr. Hees. Thus he has had less time on the road.

COST OF QUINIDINE

Ontario Notes Slash

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Health Minister Matthew Dymond said Friday that the price of quinidine, a drug used by persons suffering from some heart conditions, had dropped as much as 50 per cent since May, 1966.

He was replying in the legislature to the New Democratic Party leader, Donald MacDonald, who said there were "widespread reports that persons suffering from heart trouble now are faced with 500-per-cent increases in prices for quinidine through price management by an "international cartel" or manufacturers' union.

Mr. Dymond said he wrote the federal health minister, Allan MacEachen, a year ago and received a reply giving an explanation for recent increases in the price of the drug.

The minister said the price generally quoted in May, 1966, was $12 for 100 tablets. A recent price check quoted by drug houses were $6.55, $7.35 and $5.30 a hundred.

Cartel Skyrockets Heart Drug Price

WASHINGTON (WP)—The secret papers of the illegal international quinine cartel that skyrocketed the price of a heart disease drug 500 per cent were spread on the public record recently by the Senate anti-trust subcommittee.

Papers of this kind have never before become public. "This is the first peek I've had inside a cartel," said subcommittee chairman Philip A. Hart (D—Mich.).

The disclosures involve:

● Millions of heart disease victims who had to pay—if they could afford it—"skyrocketing" prices for quinidine, a derivative of quinine.

● The General Services Administration, which is said to have shaped its disposal of a huge quinine stockpile in conformity to pressures originated by the cartel.

● Crucial "gentlemen's agreement" among cartelists that in the end, ironically, was abrogated by dominant Dutch and West German companies, leaving the other firms—none of them American—out in the cold.

And hanging over the whole affair is the suggestion by Hart that, rather than being unique, the quinine cartel may have counterparts in other industries.

Bulk quinidine powder, Hart brought out in the first round of hearings last May, sold for about 80 cents an ounce early in 1965; a year later it was between 4 to 6 dollars an ounce. In the first quarter of 1967, the price has fallen to close to $3, though this drop was said to be reflected in generic quinidine prices rather than in major brand names.

The cartel papers—a stack more than two inches high—include minutes of secret meetings held between Dec. 2, 1959, and Oct. 26, 1962, by English, French, Dutch and German representatives. They rendezvoused in hotels in Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris; in Hertfordshire, England, and in Braunschweig, Hamburg and Heidelberg, Germany.

The original cartel was formed about 75 years ago and apparently never has been dissolved. The papers, however, deal primarily with a special grouping. It embraced all of the world's quinine producers except for a factory owned by the Indonesian government.

EAST LATORIA ROAD WATERWORKS DISTRICT

Trustees: W. Mullen, E. Calverley, W. Simms

On Easter weekend this district completed construction of a 4-inch water main, over 6,000 feet in length in order to supply the people of East Latoria Road with fresh, pure water in accordance with the standard set by the B.C. Dept. of Health. This project, with the limited amount of capital available, was successfully completed, only because of the voluntary labor donated by the residents of East Latoria Road and Mr. Ted Botlage of Wishart Road.

The Trustees and Residents take this opportunity to thank the following for the service and co-operation which they extended—

Provincial Water Rights Branch, H. L. Bruch, M.L.A.; R. E. Behind every one of our pharmacists is an expert cosmetician.

That's the beauty of Cunninghams.

When we first started selling cosmetics we found that it was a lot like dispensing prescriptions. We couldn't treat it as a sideline with one or two brands. And we found we couldn't leave beauty counselling in the hands of a junior clerk.

That's why today we have the largest, most up-to-the-minute selection of cosmetics and toiletries in the province. And with over 60 Cunningham drug stores, each with its own highly trained cosmetician, you don't have to tramp all over town to find what you want.

For the adventurous kind of woman, who would love to try those new wild and wonderful shades, by all means come in and talk to any one of our expert cosmeticians. She'll tell you if that new fuchsia pink lipstick is 'you'. And if it isn't, too. Which is another beautiful part of dealing with Cunninghams.

At Cunninghams we care.

> "The contract 'twixt Hannah, God and me, was not for one or 20 years, but for eternity."
> —Hannah Jane (1871).
> David Ross Locke.

"Dad, what's a contract?"

"A contract, son, is an agreement between two parties, covering responsibilities and obligations over a set period of time."

"Like if I agree to wash the car and you agree to pay me?"

"Exactly. If you walk off with only half the car washed, the contract is broken. It's binding on both parties."

"Suppose I make a deal with you to wash the car and then find out that somebody else is going to give me more money for the same job?"

"If you contract to do the job and then abandon it you are guilty of breaching our agreement. What's all this buzz about a contract?"

"Oh, I was reading in the paper that the B.C. Lions lost an assistant coach, Bill Hildebrand. Says here that he had a year to go on his contract, but he walked out. Took a job with Mississippi State University."

"Not another one!"

"What do you mean?"

A Right To Improve His Position

"Well, first there was Darrell Mudra at Montreal. He signed for three years. But after the first year, without asking to be released, he walked off into the golden sunset. Signed with Arizona State."

"Really?"

"Absolutely. And one of the candidates he beat out at Arizona State was Jerry Williams, who has a contract with Calgary."

"Did Mudra give any reason for his actions?"

"He said something about man's fundamental right to improve himself."

"Was Mudra an isolated case?"

"Hardly. Bud Grant had just accepted a five-year contract with Winnipeg. But a job came open in Minnesota and over he went. Took one assistant with him. Would have taken the other, too. But the fellow didn't want to go."

"But Grant's case is different than Mudra's isn't it?"

"In what way?"

"Well, Mudra may not have liked Montreal, or the people, or his boss. Grant just wanted to . . ."

". . . Improve his position. But isn't a contract a contract? Admittedly, the Winnipeg people didn't express rancor over Grant's defection. They didn't dance in the streets, either. They had given their word and he had given his."

"And now Hildebrand."

Don't Forget That Argo Fellow . . .

"You missed one."

"I have?"

"Bob Shaw. One year to go on a three-year agreement with Toronto Argos and he walks out. Signs with New Orleans."

"Did he want to improve his position, too?"

"Yes . . . with Toronto. Said he was in an 'intolerable position' when management signed his predecessor, Nobby Wirkowski, for three years as director of personnel."

"But Dad, that sounds as if Shaw was trying a squeeze play on the Argos. New Orleans could have been just a means to an end—his living—not a step up the ladder. You couldn't say he was improving his position, could you?"

"Perhaps not. But Toronto didn't violate the contract. Shaw did."

"Well, anyway, Dad, the Lions aren't sore at Hildebrand."

"They're not?"

"No. It says here the Lions weren't angry with him—only with Mississippi State for negotiating with him without their permission."

"Is that right?"

"I don't see your point."

Contract Is Like Two-Way Avenue

"Well, let's go back to the car-wash. If I have a contract with you and somebody else offers you a better deal, doesn't your conscience tell you your first obligation is to me?"

"Yes. But it seems the accepted thing . . . if you have a chance to improve yourself you take it."

"It's the common practise. But there are people who believe in the sanctity of a contract and are prepared to fight for it."

"You don't hear much about them."

"True. Not enough. George Halas was one. Halas owns the Chicago Bears. A year ago one of his assistants jumped his contract and signed with Los Angeles.

"Halas went to court. The judge ruled that a man's word is something, that a contract is a two-way avenue along which both parties must travel."

"And Allen had to stay in Chicago?"

"No; Halas had made his point. He didn't seek damages. Let Allen go to Los Angeles."

"Dad, when those men said they wanted to improve themselves, they were really saying they wanted more money, weren't they?"

"You can't say that positively. You can only assume it."

"But is that wrong?"

"I'll answer that by asking you a question. What's more important than your word?"

Canucks, Totes Take 2-0 Leads

By The Canadian Press

Portland Buckaroos, who won the Western Hockey League pennant, appear to be carrying an overtime jinx into the playoffs that has cost the team a two-game edge in the semi-finals.

Vancouver Canucks edged Portland 3-2 in overtime Friday night to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series. Vancouver downed Portland 2-1 in over time Wednesday night in the opener.

Portland had a league record of five losses and seven ties in 12 overtime games.

TOTEMS TWO UP

In other semi-final action Friday night, Seattle Totems walloped Oakland Seals 4-0 to take a 2-0 edge.

Both series shift Sunday, Vancouver goes to Portland and Seattle to Oakland.

Rookie Bob Jones fired in the winning goal in the Vancouver game, at the 45-second mark of the overtime period before 4,030 fans. Jones' goal, from about 20 feet out, came when he took a short pass from Brian Hextall and banged it in between the pads of Portland Goalie Don Head.

Dave Duke and Gord Vejprava got the other Vancouver markers, while Connie Madigan and Cliff Schmautz were the Portland marksmen.

FIELDER STARS

In Seattle, Guyle Fielder scored two goals to lead the Totems. He opened the scoring with 8:34 gone in the first stanza when he broke down the middle on a three-one break, faked to his wingers, and ripped home a 15-footer before the 6,511 fans.

Fielder's second goal came in the second period when California goalie Jack McCartan went down on his back and the Seattle veteran poked the puck into the net.

The other Seattle scorers were Chuck Holmes, and Howie Hughes.

Great Pileup Helps Longshot Win National

(Times News Services)

AINTREE, England—Foinavon, scoring one of the biggest upsets in the history of the Grand National, today won the 130th running of the gruelling steeplechase in a race marred by a major pileup.

The winner, owned by Britisher C. P. T. Watkins, started as a 100-to-1 shot.

Honey End, a 15-to-2 favorite, was second, 15 lengths behind Foinavon, and Red Alligator, off at 30-to-1, was third, another three lengths back. Greek Scholar, 20-to-1, was fourth.

The race, as usual, was disrupted by falls and the major pile-up came at the 23rd obstacle, the one after the infamous Beecher's Brook. There horses and jockeys tumbled and fell en masse.

Foinavon, a nine - year - old brown gelding, was ridden by John Buckingham.

The win was worth £17,630 ($52,890) to Watkins. The second horse won £5,296 and the third £2,510.

The pile-up was one of the worst in recent history. Horses refused. Then jockeys and horses were all over the place. Many of the favorites fell out there.

Foinavon was way behind at Beecher's on the second time round the four-mile, 856-yard course.

DESCRIBES SCENE

Foinavon's jockey said afterwards: "I saw two of the leaders refuse at the fence. Two more balked and fell sideways and the rest piled into them.

"Until then I thought I had no chance. But I was so far behind that I was able to ride outside the fallers and just get over the fence.

"I still thought someone might be in front of me, but by the next fence I could see I was well in the clear."

Foinavon's winning margin, at first reported to be three lengths, later was established at 15 lengths, with three lengths between Honey End and Red Alligator.

OUT OF THE MONEY

Actor Gregory Peck's Different Class, one of the favorites along with Freddie The Fossa, Anglo and Kilburn at betting odds of 100-to-9, did not finish in the money.

Different Class was one of the victims of the pileup at infamous Beecher's Brook. Miraculously no riders were hurt.

The leaders at the time were Castlefalls, Rutherfords, The Fossa, Different Class and Kapeno. All came down when Castle Falls stumbled. As horses in front fell, those behind refused or turned sideways.

FIRST ROUND SUNDAY

Hungle Ruled Out of Open

The suspension of a young golfer by his own club has resulted in a default in the first round of the Times Vancouver Island Open golf championships.

Consequently, Cowichan junior Ken Barker is the initial "winner" of first-round matches scheduled to be played Sunday at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Disqualified is Ron Hungle of Nanaimo, a two handicapper.

The youthful player turned in a qualifying-round score of 77 at Victoria Golf Club last Sunday but officials of Nanaimo Golf Club revealed this week that Hungle had been suspended from the club.

Nanaimo executives were not aware of Hungle's entry in the Island Open.

As soon as they discovered Hungle was a successful qualifier, they informed the Victoria District Committee that Hungle was "not a member in good standing." The Nanaimo club reaffirmed the suspension order at a special meeting Thursday night.

The District Committee sought a ruling from the B.C. Golf Association, and the disqualification order was acknowledged Friday.

Reason for Hungle's suspension was not revealed.

CHANGE IN TIMES

Barker was scheduled to play Hungle on Sunday, but advances to the second round via the default route.

That means there will be a slight revision of starting times in the championship. All competitors are asked to check their starting times in the draw that appears elsewhere on this page.

The eyes will be on co-medallists Dr. George Bigelow, Vaughan Trapp and Bill Wakeham Sunday. They shared medal honors with one-over-par 71s last week.

Bigelow, a former finalist, is drawn against clubmate Doug Munro in the first championship match off the tee, at 10:50. Munro, who has beaten Bigelow in club events, is capable of providing the first upset of the 1967 tournament.

But Wakeham and Trapp both are heavily favored over a pair of Uplands amateurs. Wakeham, a professional playing out of Gorge Vale and a two-time winner of The Times Trophy, meets Mike Perks while Trapp is paired against Ken Nott.

All winners Sunday move into the second round, to be played at Gorge Vale April 16.

Orioles, Pirates Pennant Choices

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Major trades, a few retirements and a smattering of injuries add up to a talent shuffle of about 35 per cent from 1966's opening lineups when the big leagues start the baseball season Monday and Tuesday.

Washington Senators will jump the gun, as usual, with their special presidential opener with President Johnson invited to throw the first ball.

New York Yankees, who ousted the Senators from their traditional home in last place, will provide the opposition Monday afternoon at D.C. Stadium.

Among the non-political events at the American League game will be the unveiling of Mickey Mantle as the Yankee first baseman.

Cincinnati Reds open the National League season at home Monday. The usual sellout crowd at Crosley Field will get a first look at manager Dave Bristol's new triple shift lineup with Pete Rose in left, Deron Johnson at third and Tommy Helms at second.

The Cincinnati fans also will be the first to view the latest Los Angeles Dodger mixture, without Sandy Koufax and Maury Wills.

Baltimore and Pittsburgh have been established as the two favorites by the sports writers, the sportscasters and bookmakers at Las Vegas. Minnesota Twins and Detroit Tigers are supposed to furnish the most opposition to the Orioles. San Francisco Giants and Atlanta Braves are expected to challenge the Pirates.

After the two Monday games the 16 other clubs will swing into action Tuesday.

FORMER CHAMP DIES

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, who won the world featherweight boxing title in 1904, died Thursday in hospital. He was 86.

Denis Seems Ready to Stay In Chicago Nets for Series

CHICAGO (CP)—Denis DeJordy looks comfortable in the nets of Chicago Black Hawks—as comfortable as a man planning to stay there until the end of the Stanley Cup series.

Before the Hawks, National Hockey League champions, began their semi-final against Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday night, DeJordy had only played 1 1-3 games of Stanley Cup hockey.

When Chicago coach Billy Reay announced Thursday he would start DeJordy instead of Glenn Hall, he surprised the experts. But DeJordy quickly took care of any second guesses by performing brilliantly in the Hawks' 5-2 victory, handling all but two of the Leafs' 44 shots effortlessly.

"Glen Hall and I had a meeting, and we decided to start Denis," said Reay. "Actually, the decision was made three days ago."

FINISHED STRONGLY

In the last game of the regular season Denis shut out New York Rangers 8-0 and had played well in all of the games near the end of the season.

"There wasn't any point in switching from the hot goalie at this time," Reay said.

Reay called an early drill Friday and 11 of the 22 Hawks turned out. Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita, DeJordy, Doug Mohns, Ken Wharram and Chico Maki were among those missing.

"They earned the rest," said Reay. "Some of the boys are still hurting, but we'll all be ready for the next game."

Second game in the best-of-seven series is scheduled Sunday night. It will be televised nationally in Canada by the CBC, starting at 5:30 PST.

Hull, a doubtful starter in the first game Thursday because of a knee injury, will play, Reay said.

"His knee was sore during and after the game, but he'll be OK."

Meanwhile, Leafs returned to Toronto where they worked out Friday. Another workout is scheduled for today before they return to Chicago tonight.

Punch Imlach, Toronto coach and general manager, said the team returned to Toronto because of lack of practice ice in Chicago.

"And besides, I couldn't leave my team at loose ends for three days in Chicago. They'd never show up for Sunday's game."

SUPER-BOWL FOR HOCKEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Scheduled live televising of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoff game today from Montreal was not transmitted on the CBS television network due to the threat of union picketing.

Canadian unions refused to cover the game if the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's coverage was to be fed to the CBS network.

In place of the hockey game, CBS planned to rebroadcast the super-bowl football game of Jan. 15 between the Green Bay Packers and the Kansas City Chiefs.

Visiting Boxers Grab Majority of Decisions

Brisk action was served up by amateur punchers Friday night before a capacity crowd at Club Tango but little of it was pleasant for fighters from the sponsoring London Boxing Club.

London lads won only two of the eight bouts they entered as they ran into tough competition against rivals from the mainland, Nanaimo and Alberni.

Lenn Glanfield and Doug Andrews captured decision for the Victoria club. Glanfield, a 118-pounder, defeated Nanaimo's Alan Windecker and Andrews bested mainlander Don Fraser in a 132-pound bout.

In the featured 147-pound battle, Langley larruper Chester Douglas decisioned Victoria's Jim O'Neil.

Another amateur card is being scheduled for April 21 at Club Tango.

Friday's results:

65 pounds—Mike Crawford (SB) defeated Ron Way (LBC).
70—Glen Tubs (R) decisioned Danny Crawford (SB).
75—Neil Austin (L) decisioned Dave Way (LBC).
95—John Gamble (Van) defeated Ricky Johnson (N).

125—Leigh Gibson (A) defeated Gary Traynor (SB).
132—Doug Andrews (LBC) defeated Don Fraser (L).
145—Brian Andrews (A) defeated Bob Lewis (N).
147—Chester Douglas (L) decisioned Jim O'Neil (LBC).

YUGOSLAVS SIGNED

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Stars of the National Professional Soccer League have signed two more players, both from Yugoslavia. They are Stevan Topolovich, a 26-year-old goalie, and Bora Kostic, 24, a forward and halfback.

Aqueduct Stays Closed

NEW YORK (AP)—Aqueduct remained closed today, and its idleness is causing activity among the state's legislators.

The big track shut down Wednesday when owners refused to enter horses in protest over legislative failure to increase purses.

For a time Friday, it looked like racing activity would resume today with a unique one-race card. George D. Widener entered Ring Twice and the Jaclyn Stable of Dr. Leon Levy entered Model Fool in the $50,000-added Excelsior Handicap, and the New York Racing Association announced a one-race program would be held.

But later in the day, NYRA president Edward T. Dickinson issued the following statement:

"There will be no racing at Aqueduct Saturday due to the fact that both entries for the Excelsior Handicap were withdrawn by their owners because they felt no useful purpose would be served."

Only Two More Weeks To Earn Rolloff Spots

ELEANOR RUKIN

DON SAMUELSON

Chemainus keglers are making a big run for honors in the closing stages of the fourth annual Bowler-of-the Week competition sponsored by The Daily Times.

Two tenpinners hit winning scores on the lanes at Chemainus Bowlarena in the 23rd week of the 27-week contest and Dennis Irvine cracked out a big triple at Chemainus to take the men's tenpin award in the 24th week.

Irvine topped 200 in each of his three games, hitting games of 213, 220 and 206 for a series of 639.

In the previous week, Don Samuelson earned the men's tenpin award with a 624 triple and Eleanor Rukin set the pace for distaff trundlers with a 576 effort.

All winners of weekly awards in the event's four divisions—men's and women's tenpins, men's and women's fivepins—are eligible for Bowler-of-the Year rolloffs on Sunday, April 30.

BONUS AWARD

Championships in the rolloffs will be decided in three-game, scratch series with the winner of each division to receive a Times Trophy. Any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to The Times will also receive a bonus award of $100.

Tenpin rolloffs are scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m. Male keglers will bid for the title at May fair Lanes and the ladies will fire at pins at Aurora Lanes.

Both fivepin rolloffs are scheduled for Gibson's Recreations, starting at 1:30 p.m.

TIME IS SHORT

Only two weeks remain in which bowlers can qualify for the rolloffs. Competition in the 25th week ended Friday night and the scramble for awards in the 26th week started today on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

Many of the area's most accomplished bowlers have yet to win an award in this season's competition and earn a place in the rolloff scramble for cash, titles and trophies.

For them, time is short—just two more weeks.

Fritz Defends Empress Title

Herb Fritz, currently in the running for honors in the Vancouver Open match-play tournament, will be defending his title when the annual Empress golf tournament is played here next week.

More than 250 golfers, including almost 50 from Calgary, will start Monday in the men's and women's divisions.

Male swingers will play at the Victoria Golf Club and distaff divoters will swing at Uplands until switching to the Oak Bay layout Saturday for their final round.

Ladder Derby Event Tops Inlet Contests

Ten weeks of ladder fishing will highlight the summer season of competition for members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association.

Revived this year after an absence of several years from Saanich Inlet, the ladder derby event will be one of five salmon derbies scheduled this summer by the VSIAA.

Starting on May 20, the ladder contest will run for 10 weeks and will have one master ladder of 100 rungs. Holders of the 100 rungs when qualifying fishing ends July 29 will be eligible for a fishoff on a date yet to be announced.

WEEKLY TROPHY

Each contestant must hold a VSIAA membership card and one derby ticket must be surrendered with each fish weighed in. The angler landing the largest fish in each week of the derby will receive a trophy and may have his salmon canned free by Creed's Landing. Gilbert's Boathouse will donate hidden-weight prizes weekly.

Other derbies:

- VSIAA Membership Derby — open to members only — May 28.
- Junior Derby — open to all juniors up to 16 years—July 26.
- Coho-Chinook Derby — open to members only — Sept. 24.

Washington Quarterback Joining Lions

(Times News Services)

The British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have signed quarterback Tom Roth, formerly of Washington State University.

Roth, 22, was the All-Coast quarterback in 1965, and is described by Lions' head coach Dave Skrien as "primarily a drop-back passer who can run if he has to."

In Calgary the Stampeders signed veteran flanker Frank Budd and lineman Herb Schum. Budd will be starting his third season with the club and Schum played for Edmonton Eskimos for two seasons and was cut last season by the Stampeders when backs were needed more than linemen.

Saskatchewan Roughriders meanwhile have signed three new players, Tony MacKinnon, Grady Bolton and Pat Brosnan.

MacKinnon, six foot two and 220 pounds, has played as a defensive and offensive end in American college football and had an honorable mention as an All-American.

Brosnan, a split end or flanker, played 10 games with Toronto Argonauts.

Nicklaus Misses Cutoff But Yancey Keeps Going

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, who came into the 1967 Masters golf tournament as champion, bowed out Friday while underdog Bert Yancey says he is going to hang on to his slim one-stroke lead as a reduced field, including one Canadian, goes into today's third round.

Nicklaus, the 210-pound Columbus, Ohio, strongboy who set the Masters record with a 271 two years ago, did not make the cut at 150 for the last two rounds.

His 79 gave him 151 for two rounds over the Augusta National course and represented one of the great collapses in golfing history. It also eliminated his last chance of making the Ryder Cup team.

"Everything I did was wrong," Nicklaus said after he became the first defending champion to fail to make the cut. He was shooting for an unprecedented third straight Masters' title.

Yancey, who led by three strokes the first day, said he had some bad luck.

SHOOTS ERRATIC ROUND

"I was playing well enough to increase my lead, not decrease it," he said after an erratic round of five pars, six birdies and seven over-par holes.

That gave him a 73 for 140 and a one-stroke lead over Bobby Nichols, Gay Brewer, Julius Boros and 22-year-old English pro, Tony Jacklin.

George Archer, who had Friday's best round at 67, was alone at 142. Tommy Aaron and Doug Ford were bracketed at 143.

Gary Player, the South African who won the Masters in 1961, is at 144 along with Paul Harney, Australian Bruce Devlin and U.S. Open champ Billy Casper.

One of Canada's two entrants survived the cutoff. George Knudson, the Winnipeg native playing out of Toronto, added a two-over-par 74 to go with his opening-round 72 to stay in contention.

Knudson is in a group at 146 that includes Arnold Palmer, 73-73; Doug Sanders 74-72 and Gene Littler, 74-72.

Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., the U.S. Amateur champion, had his putting miseries again and missed the cut when he shot a 74 to add to his first-round 77.

In all, 55 players made the cut for the last two rounds.

The leaders:

Bert Yancey	67-73—140
Gay Brewer	73-68—141
Tony Jacklin	71-70—141

Young Forest Star Wrecks Cup Kings

LONDON (CP)—Ian Storey-Moore, a young 20-year-old winger, scored three second-half goals today for Nottingham Forest to put defending champion Everton out of the English Football Assciation Cup competition. Notts Forest won the game 3-2 and advanced to the cup semifinal.

Storey - Moore took charge after Everton gained a 1-0 half-time lead with a goal by Jim Husband. He scored two goals in the 69th minute to put Forest ahead.

With 10 minutes left, Husband tied it up with a crashing shot from 15 yards.

With the 47,000 spectators roaring him on, Storey-Moore got the winner with a minute to go. He shot from close range and the goalkeeper batted out the ball. Then Moore headed it against the bar. At the third try he calmly nodded in the rebound.

Forest, pressing hard on leading Manchester United, has a great chance to top the English League, too

Forest was joined in the semi-finals by Chelsea, with a 1-0 win over Sheffield Wednesday, and Leeds, 1-0 winner over Manchester City.

Tottenham Hotspur was held to a scoreless tie by Second-Division Birmingham City. The game will be replayed.

A 51st minute header by England's World Cup centre half Jackie Charlton gave Leeds its victory over Manchester City.

Chelsea's winner over Wednesday came from inside forward Tommy Baldwin with the last kick of the match.

TAMBLING INJURED

It was more like a battle than a soccer match. Chelsea's Bobby Tambling went off on a stretcher with a groin injury in the 36th minute. Earlier he had traded punches with a Sheffield defender.

Birmingham owed its draw with Tottenham to Scottish goalkeeper Jim Herriot and half-back Malcolm Beard.

Beard's job was to put the shackles on Jimmy Greaves, and Beard did it so well that Greaves seldom got a look at goal.

In the league Blackpool lost at home to Sheffield United by the only goal and is doomed to relegation to Division II. Fulham gained a 1-1 tie at Aston Villa and looks sure of First Division football next year.

Trail Coach Quits

TRAIL (CP)—Don Fletcher has resigned as coach of the Trail Smoke Eaters of the Western International Hockey League. A defenceman with the Smoke Eaters, he piloted Trail to a fourth-place finish the past season.

He said he was retiring because he was a shift worker and he wanted to live "a normal life."

Seth Martin, coach of the Rossland Warriors, and Bobby Kromm, coach of the St. Louis Blues of the Central Professional League, have been mentioned as likely successors.

Canadian Earns A Job With Mets

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—New York Mets have placed Ron Taylor, 29-year-old right-handed pitcher from Oakville, Ont., on their official roster.

Another right-hander, Chuck Estrada, also got a place on the roster while pitcher Dick Selma was dropped.

Taylor was transferred from the Mets' Jacksonville, Fla., farm team.

Mounties' Debts Anger Aldermen

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast Baseball League owe the city $26,962 in rental and insurance arrears on city-owned Capilano Stadium, it has been disclosed by city council.

An agreement calls for the Mounties to pay 5 per cent of gross revenues collected at the stadium, but the club hasn't been making any money.

Several aldermen complained that the city, by not collecting its money, is subsidizing Kansas City Athletics, the Mounties' parent club.

Stratton Repeats

DETROIT (CP)—Art Stratton, veteran forward of St. Louis Braves, has been named the most valuable player in the Central Professional Hockey League for the second successive season.

Stratton also won the league scoring championship for the second straight time.

Lions' Tackle Caged

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—A British Columbia Lions' football player was sentenced Friday to one month in prison for assault.

Mike Webster, 22, an inside tackle with the club in the Canadian football league, was also ordered to pay a $500 fine or face a further two months in jail. The assault charge originated from an incident that took place in Vancouver on March 3.

Webster, a native of Vancouver, joined the team last year. The young player was only recently married.

Club management expressed shock and disbelief over the sentence. General manager Denny Vietch described Webster as one of the quietist, most intelligent and most likeable players on the club. Webster evidently became involved in the assault offence when he tried to break up a fight between two other persons.

Veitch said it was typical of Webster to take on the role of peacemaker..

Club president Alan McEachern, who defended Webster in court, said he was shocked at the sentence. An appeal will be made.

STUDY AREA can be as efficiently organized as the kitchen with work places as close together as possible in order to have everything within reach.

U-SHAPED AREA SUITS STUDENTS

By PAULINE GRAVES

When most of us plan a room for students, we think of a desk, shelves, drawers and storage, and we fill up all the wall space with these. The bed might jut into the room, but the rest of the furniture usually lines the wall, leaving the centre of the room clear.

Here is a room, designed by Adele Faulkner in which the study area forms a "U". This intelligent use of space puts everything within the student's reach. With a swivel of the chair, he can turn from desk to reference material, from typewriter to spread-out drawings.

STEP AWAY

Perpendicular to the door, the tall storage unit, forty-four inches high, forms an entry to the room, this entry lined with bookshelves on the opposite side, a step away from the study centre.

Although this study group provides a wide desk area facing the room, with a ledge for the typewriter next to the wall, others might prefer a typewriter desk facing the room in order to gain more storage next to the wall.

Such an arrangement could be adapted to home office, tucked into the corner of a family room or master bedroom.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Your Neighbor's Lawn Is Greener?

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

At this time of year the home gardener becomes extremely lawn conscious, spending a lot of time looking for, and trying out, quick remedies, and wasting good dollars on products that will give only temporary relief.

Few of us could afford a lawn in the true sense of the word. A real lawn is expensive to make and requires continual attention, far more attention than the home gardener can provide.

For some reason that has never been explained in a satisfactory way, a lawn is considered essential by most gardeners, but few are prepared to spend the hundreds of dollars necessary for preparation before sowing and maintenance afterwards.

Since there are thousands of grass plants to every square yard of lawn, the area has to be thoroughly prepared, comparatively free of weeds, and the soil well enriched before the seed is sown. We have no way of cultivating around each plant as we do around our shrubs and perennials.

TIME, WORK

This thorough preparation requires a lot of time and work. It is at this point the home gardener usually falls down, and it is the beginning of many later troubles that can be both difficult and expensive to correct.

When a new lawn is sown the annual, or nurse grasses come up first. These protect the later germinating and slower growing perennial grasses.

It takes three years for the permanent grasses to take over and make the final turf, and constant care and good judgment are needed throughout this period if the lawn is to be satisfactory.

To build a satisfactory turf we have to eliminate all weeds until the grasses are capable of filling the area and preventing weeds from gaining a foothold.

EVERY INCH

For the first year this means hard work. Every inch of lawn should be gone over once a week to remove weed seedlings.

Since the average home gardener lacks time for this job and is not prepared to pay for outside help, he resorts to weed-killers.

Experiments show that new lawns treated with weed-killers are weakened and take longer to build a permanent turf, this giving us our second cause of lawn troubles.

After the turf is established we run into such troubles as moss, clover, and perennial weeds.

POOR SOIL

Moss is a low form of plant life which can thrive under conditions quite unsuitable for cultivated plants, therefore moss in a lawn indicates a soil so poor that grass is unable to grow.

Clover makes its own nitrogen and thrives in soils which lack this essential plant food. Clover in a lawn indicates poor soil lacking nitrogen.

When perennial weeds become established it indicates that the area was not thorougly prepared, or that weeding was not properly done in the period before the turf became weed resistant. The only cure is to dig out the weeds and re-seed.

Moss, clover and weeds prefer a neutral to slightly alkaline soil, while grasses prefer a soil that is slightly acid. Moss killers are composed of ferrous sulphate (sulphate of iron) to make the soil too acid for moss to grow, and sulphate of ammonia, the acid fertilizer which helps the grass to spread.

Gardeners can use these two chemicals separately to control moss, or combine them as in the proprietary mixtures.

LIME WEAKENS

Lime is the cause of most of our lawn troubles. It reduces the acidity of the soil, weakens (and eventually kills) the grass plants, and makes conditions ideal for moss, clover and weeds. It also releases plant foods in quantity, and these foods are washed from the soil with winter rains and summer sprinkling.

Fortunately, there is one simple remedy for these lawn troubles. That is maintaining an acid soil rich in plant food.

When the gardener puts his dollars into plant food instead of weed killers, moss eradicators and clover controls, he gets down to the basic cause of lawn troubles and starts building the lawn he has always wanted.

In this climate at least three feedings a year are needed, and two supplementals can be added for a really good job.

The first feeding is in April, the second near the end of June to strengthen the grass for the warmth of summer, and the third around Labor Day in September to fortify the lawn for the winter.

The materials to use are ammo-phos or a complete lawn fertilizer. Lawn fertilizers contain a proportion of the acid forms of plant foods and differ from the regular garden fertilizers.

In April use lawn fertilizer as directed on package, or ammo-phos at four to six pounds to 1,000 square feet.

In June apply sulphate of ammonia at six to eight pounds to 1,000 square feet. In September repeat the April dressing.

A good lawn can be ruined by improper cutting and watering. Generally speaking, we start watering too late, we sprinkle too frequently, and we allow too much time to elapse between cuts. Both watering and cutting will be subjects for daily articles during the next week.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q. My fuchsias are beginning to grow now in the garden, but they seem to have a lot of dead branches. Will these be all right if I leave them? P. D. Q., Saanich.

A. This is not enough information to advise you fully. Suggest you cut off all branches down to the lowest green shoot, which will likely be just about soil level. Then put a two-inch layer of rotted compost or old manure around the plants.

Supplement this with two liquid fertilizer feeds, one by end of May, the next at end of June, and plenty of water after the growth makes headway.

Q. Is it too late to start vegetables to catch the June vegetable shows? A. S., Gordon Head.

A. Some of the vegetables will require special attention to bring them along in time. This can be accomplished by starting them with the use of peat pots or plant bands in a coldframe as often mentioned in these columns. Look over the show schedule you have and concentrate on things which have at least a chance of success. You will learn a lot about "timing" for shows if you keep a diary of progress.

WEEK'S WORK

Dahlia tubers may be put into a box of compost to root and sprout in a sunny window. Turn daily after shoots begin and remove to cooler but still sunny location free of frost.

Among the annuals being grown from seed, pinch out growing tips of schizanthus, snapdragon and clarkia when about three inches high, to induce bushiness.

Summer blooming bulbs such as tigridia, acidanthera, canna, and crinum can be flowering by mid-summer instead of late summer if they are started now indoors in large pots. Transfer from pot to garden by early June, or use as patio plants in tubs.

NO SPLASHING

All the narcissi (these include daffodils) and tulips can be fed now either with a bulb fertilizer or an all-purpose product such as 5-10-5. Be careful not to splash the foliage or flowers.

Sow squash, marrow and cucumber seeds in small pots indoors. They will be ready to plant out by end of May. Two seeds to a four-inch pot, remove the weaker after true leaves unfold.

By end of this week, summer cabbage and cauliflower can be planted, firming the soil well around each small plant. Also put out more lettuce, and onion seedlings if you have them.

If soil well drained, sow parsnip, carrot, parsley, peas, spinach, lettuce, radish, white turnip, salsify.

Services Unity Bill Stalled at First Clause

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer and his bill to convert Canada's three services into one finished up a rough week in the Commons Friday.

After 39 speeches, five days of clause-by-clause study and references to Mr. Hellyer as a Nazi - type dictator or propaganda agent, the bill was still stalled at the first clause under study.

But there was speculation outside the House that the opposition—mainly from Conservative MPs—would not be sustained enough to back the government into a financial corner on the bill. That would require a talkfest that would keep the bill stalled until mid-May.

Only a handful of Conservatives carry the main burden for the official Opposition against the bill. Included in the group are Douglas Harkness (Calgary North) and Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre), both former defence ministers, and Michael Forrestall (Halifax) whose riding counts heavily on defence expenditures.

Others who have taken a special interest are Terry Nugent (Edmonton—Strathcona), Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek) and Heber Smith (Simcoe North).

Informants said Friday that Opposition Leader Diefenbaker was preparing to enter the debate.

TRIED LIGHT VEIN

Transport Minister Pickersgill tried to take a light approach Friday, referring to his own abortive military career as a "frightful" one that ended in 1922 when, as a member of the officer training corps at the University of Manitoba, he was unable to hit the target with a Lee-Enfield rifle.

Under regulations of the day, he added, no man who was not proficient with the rifle could lead troops and a brilliant military career may have been nipped in the bud.

Mr. Pickersgill said the idea of unification could not be referred to the military experts because unification had not been tried in modern times. It was time for younger men with modern ideas to supersede the military men who kept fighting past wars.

"I could have sheltered in a university in the First World War," Mr. Churchill fired back. He was "fed up" with criticism from people who had not seen combat about the feelings of military men.

Mr. Pickersgill quickly apologized for any ill feelings he might have aroused through his jocular approach.

But he also said that the heavy stress laid by Conservatives on testimony about unification before the Commons defence committee by retired senior officers was unfair.

USING STACKED DECK

It was the equivalent of dealing a stacked deck when retired officers could express personal opinions about unification while serving officers could not.

Mr. Forrestall said Mr. Hellyer had reneged on a pledge that consolidation of forces bases in the Halifax area would not result in economic hardship.

He said civilian technical employees of defence — related firms have been ordered out of HMCS Shearwater, the naval air arm base, by April 17. This affected about 100 employees and their families.

"Stop acting like Hitler did," Mr. Forrestall said. "Don't be afraid to admit you've been wrong once in a while."

J. A. Mongrain (Ind - Trois-Rivieres) described the debate as an exercise in futility.

He asked MPs to show a "little self-control." If the government was making a mistake on the bill, "the voters will judge it and turn it out to the next election."

Ramblings of a Happy Man

In my dream world, to every "Stop" sign, I would add, "Please."

Our thoughts go wandering when daylight fades,
To the land of long ago,
And memory paints the scenes

We seem to see in the soft,
dim light,
A face we love the best,
And think of her when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far-off west.
—From your loving husband and family

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

South's jump to four spades was a distinct overbid but the sort of overbid that wasn't likely to get him into serious trouble. When you overbid with a doubtful trump suit you may run into massed trumps and a double. When you overbid with very sound trumps you just aren't going to get doubled.

The overbid was a happy idea. It was possible for East and West to beat the contract and if West had not happened to hold such nice clubs he might have opened a trump. He might well have opened a trump in any event. It usually pays to lead trumps when your opponents have reached game on strong bidding in trumps only.

Anyway, West liked his clubs and opened the king. South ruffed and looked over dummy carefully. A lot of players would play one trump on general principles. If they did they would have done what West should have done.

South counts nine tricks in trumps and diamonds. The way to make a tenth trick is to ruff a heart in dummy and it is up to declarer to play hearts first and trumps a long time later.

South leads a heart. West gets in with the jack and leads a trump but he is one round of play too late. South wins and leads a second heart. West wins and leds a second trump.

South gets to ruff one heart for his tenth trick but the two trump leads have kept him from making an overtrick.

BRITONS LOST IN BRAZIL

Jungle Expedition Could End Mystery

LONDON (UPI) — A British scientific expedition will set out this summer into Brazil's foreboding Mato Grosso (Great Forest) where English explorer Col. Percy Fawcett disappeared 42 years ago.

The odds are overwhelmingly against the expedition coming across Fawcett, the way Stanley discovered Livingston. Fawcett would be 100 years old.

But Fawcett's family still clings to the notion that his son, who vanished with him, may yet turn up. He would be 63.

The expedition's leader, zoologist Dr. Ian Bishop of England's Leicester University, flew to Brazil to make preparations for the other members of the party, who will join him in June.

The team will include an anthropologist, biologist, sociologist and botanist.

The expedition is being undertaken jointly by Britain's Royal Geographic Society and Royal Society of Scientists in behalf of the Brazilian government's Central Brazil Foundation.

HIGHWAY ROUTE

Its main task will be to ease the way for a highway the government hopes to construct through the largely unexplored region, which is about twice the size of Texas.

Hostile Indians armed with bows and poison arrows inhabit the area, located in the heart of Brazil. Flesh-eating Piranha fish infest its rivers.

The team is expected to spend about two years in the area.

The expedition will not actively seek Fawcett or his son but much of its work will be centred in the Xingu River basin, from where the explorer was last heard.

Fawcett, then 58, disappeared with his 21-year-old son Jack and another youth, Ralei Rommel, in May 1925 while seeking the remains of what he believed was a great civilization.

No trace of the reputed jungle city has been found.

At least five persons have lost their lives trying to find Fawcett.

In 1951, bones were discovered in a shallow grave near his supposed trail. Scientists in Britain and Brazil agreed they were not Fawcett's remains, nor those of the two youths.

"WHITE GOD"

From time to time, reports have filtered out of the jungle telling of a bearded white man, presumably Jack, living among the tribes as a "white god."

A British journalist, Edmar Morel, sent to find Fawcett returned several years ago with a fair-skinned Indian boy, who claimed he was Jack's son by his marriage to an Indian girl. The Fawcett family refused to believe the story.

Fawcett's other son, Brian, now 60, led an expedition into the region shortly after the bones were found but learned nothing.

In an interview last week, Brian Fawcett said his trip convinced him the widely believed theory that all three were murdered by the Kalapalos, a hostile tribe, was false.

"I think the whole story was cooked up in hopes of collecting a reward for the information," he said.

He said he believes there is a "distinct possibility" his brother Jack is alive.

If the expedition should run across such a man, the meeting would surely prompt another historic greeting: "Jack Fawcett, I presume?"

Oak Bay council has given notice that it plans to improve part of Cedar Hill Cross Road under local improvement plan.

The road from Gordon Head Road to Cadboro Bay Road will be paved and curbed, storm drains installed and a concrete sidewalk laid on the south side.

Cost is estimated at $196,000 with the provincial government providing $90,000, the municipality $88,357 and the frontagers $17,643.

The work will be paid for over a 20-year period.

Neighbors Help Family Fix Home

Housing problem of the fire-hit Bill family has been temporarily solved.

Mr. and Mrs. David Bill lost all their belongings when a fire Tuesday burned their Patricia Bay Indian Reserve home to ground level.

Other residents of the reserve are now working to take down the few charred timbers still standing and clean the deck of the house.

Plywood will be used to patch holes in the flooring and polyethelene sheets will be laid to make the basement weatherproof so the Bill family can live there until the house can be rebuilt.

Assistance is being sought from the department of Indian affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill and their three young children have been supplied with clothing, bedding and other household articles, including a stove and fridge, through donations from private individuals and the Red Cross.

Mrs. Charles Smith, of 507 Downey Road, who started the drive, said, "The drive has been tremendously successful.

"The Hertz company has donated a truck for two days, free of charge, so that articles can be picked up from the donors in Victoria.

"I think the family has just about everything they need," she said.

Jumbo Tankers Increasing Despite Danger

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There is a simple reason why jumbo oil tankers are on the increase: They save money.

It costs $3,000,000 to build a 20,000-ton tanker, while for $15,000,000 you can have nine times that capacity. It costs $5.50 a ton to carry oil from the Persian Gulf to Britain in an old fashioned tanker while the jumbo size can get it here for less than $3.

The saving is obvious — until you mention the 38,000-ton Torrey Canyon and the 118,000 tons of oil she has been spewing off the English coast with incalculable damage.

Such ships as the Torrey Canyon are able to offer much lower carrying charges even though they have to sail all the way around Africa from the Persian Gulf. They're too big for the Suez Canal.

The Torrey Canyon, large as she is, compares modestly with some monsters already afloat and planned. The Japanese-built Idemistra Maru, nearly one-quarter of a mile long, carries more than 200,000 tons and a 300,000-tonner now is on order in Japan.

READY FOR JUMBO

One northeast England shipbuilder is reported ready to build a tanker of 1,000,000 tons if anybody wants to buy one. It would be built and launched in two sections and welded together at sea.

The Torrey Canyon disaster has brought home with a shock to Britain — and probably other countries as well — that such accidents on an even vaster scale can be expected in the future. Already there are 50 tankers larger — some of them greatly larger — than the Torrey Canyon.

Authorities say the entire east or west coasts of Canada and the United States could be polluted by the loss of one monster tanker. New international law is required to enable governments to take quick action.

In England, there is a precedent which may have caused the government to tread warily. The precedent was established in 1954 when the tanker Inverpool ran aground near Southport and discharged 400 tons of oil to get clear. A claim of damages against the owners eventually failed.

NEED TRACKING SYSTEM

Observers feel it is apparent that there should be some kind of double-check on the navigation of a ship carrying 100,000 tons of oil. The Torrey Canyon would hardly have hit the Seven Stones Reef if some outside body had been tracking her course.

One London newspaper has noted that the United States Coast Guard now operates in international service for ships in distress, with 17,000 ships from 60 nations voluntarily co-operating. They report their positions through a radio network which teletypes the message to a New York computer to produce a regular picture of the sea-lane situation.

Says the newspaper, The Daily Telegraph:

"Here is a basis for nautical guidance on the lines of air traffic control. Vessels would report at frequent intervals and be warned — as the Torrey Canyon could have been — if they were standing into danger."

UN Fails to Solve British-Aden Problem

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—Aden, in many ways an ugly blot in Britain's backyard, has suddenly turned into a microcosm of the weakness and inadequacy of the United Nations.

Few officials who had watched the brutality of terrorism in that little British colony near the edge of the Red Sea were convinced that the three-man UN mission would find some quick and acceptable solution to the ceaseless bloodshed.

But there were hopes in London that some path might be found under which Britain could gracefully withdraw in 1968 without leaving behind a murderous bloodbath that would remain on its conscience for many years.

There appears to be no doubt that Britain wants to get out of Aden. The military cost of trying to control that restless colony is mounting. The so-called liberation fronts, financed and supported by the United Arab Republic, are increasing their grenade-and-rifle pressure against the British troops. They are convinced that in the end Britain must beat a hasty retreat and leave the South Arabian Federation, headed by British-supported sheikhs, at the mercy of the "liberators."

HOPED FOR AN OUT

Possibly realizing the extreme difficulties of its position, Britain had hoped that even though the UN mission did not seem sympathetic, it might find a path Britain could accept as the lesser of two evils.

The encouraging element, as far as Britain was concerned, was that the mission was criticized and cold-shouldered by the terrorist organizations. That would be unlikely to arouse great sympathy for the grenade-throwers among mission members.

Nonetheless, the mission did try to reach the terrorist leaders and demanded use of Aden television for this purpose. But instead of asking the existing administration for this service, the mission took the view the administration was not a legal entity and that since Aden was a British colony, permission should be given by the British government.

Britain argues that it could not do this; that the properly-constituted authority is the Aden administration. Behind this rather technical view probably was the suspicion that the mission intended to use television to deliver anti-British statements that would appeal to terrorist leaders.

MISSION FAILS

The British suspicion seems to have been borne out by the furious anti-British statements made by the mission as it bolted from Aden, its objective shattered by the unyielding adversaries.

Perhaps the most unworthy statement was that by Abdul Satar Shalizi, a former deputy prime minister of Afghanistan, who maintained that "Britain is the cause of more bloodshed in the world than anyone else."

All missions are likely to contain varying views. But a UN mission, to be effective, should try to see both sides of the issue. The difficulty, in this case, is that Aden is seen as a British colony and colonists have no popularity among the bulk of the emerging UN nations.

RC Suggests All Bishops Be Elected

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest-author has called for a dramatic break in church tradition to permit laymen to elect popes and bishops.

Rev. Joseph O'Donoghue of Washington proposed Friday that popes be elected to a single 10-year term and bishops to single eight-year terms. Father O'Donoghue is a member of the priests' senate of the Washington archdiocese.

This could result, he said, in the election of younger men, adding: "The cardinals won't elect a 40-year-old pope now in the fear he may rule for 40 more years."

In an interview he said: "It was the practice in the first 12 centuries that a bishop couldn't take over without the approval of the clergy and the people."

Earlier, Father O'Donoghue told the convention of the National Council of Catholic Men that laymen and priests should be given greater freedom in charting church policy.

Father O'Donoghue, author of Elections in the Church, said Roman Catholic priests might leave the priesthood in great numbers if they and the laity are forbidden greater involvement in church policy.

Pair Sentenced To Two Years In Cheque Racket

Two men involved in stealing blank cheques, forging and cashing them each were handed two-year penitentiary terms Friday.

Roy A. Cook, 32, of Vancouver, had earlier been convicted of stealing the cheques from Stocker's Security Storage and Warehouse Ltd., 776 Topaz, in an overnight break-in at the firm March 11.

Craig Brown, 22, of 640 Speed, was given his sentence for trying to cash six of the forged cheques at a number of city stores immediately following the burglary.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said it was obvious the crimes were part of a "large-scale enterprise" and called for severe sentences to discourage others from the same sort of offence.

MR. RAS . . . ER MR. MTR YOU HAVE A PROBLEM

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Joseph Rastoraxkozicz, 77, petitioned Allegheny County Court for permission to change his name because of difficulty in its spelling and pronunciation.

JudgeAlbert Fiok granted the order Friday and Rastoraxkozicz now is: Joseph Petrovich Hitler Rastohan Mtr.

Mtr said he settled on his new name after a seven-year study of his family tree.

Petrovich was derived from Peter the Great, Hitler came from a German prince who married one of Mtr's Russian ancestors, Rastohan from an Austrian ancestor who served as an officer under Emperor Francisc Joseph, and Mtr is associated in Russia with a family which has experienced tragedy, he said.

FIRED THIS TIME

Coroner Back In Hot Spot

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Morton Shulman, fired Friday as chief coroner of Metropolitan Toronto, is a practising physician who has devoted much of his recent life to raising the blood pressures of fellow officials and doctors to unhealthy levels.

He is a loud crusader for such things as better medical procedures, automobile and highway safety measures and liberalized abortion laws; a connoisseur of fine art, amateur politician, world traveller, near-millionaire and author.

He combined the last two callings in 1966 by bringing out a book called Anyone Can Make a Million, though he said later no one should be allowed to.

SHULMAN
. . . cash acuity

His financial acuity was legendary hereabouts long before the book came out, and in a $1,000,000 court case involving stock market procedures a few years ago he was called as a witness to explain the intricacies of the "put and call" system of playing the market.

OFTEN IN UPROAR

Dr. Shulman, a slender, youthful-looking man of 42 with a ready and guileless smile, has tangled indiscriminately with political and professional friend and foe alike.

While he has had the occasional clash with Liberal federal officials, his biggest concussions have been reserved for his superiors in the Ontario Conservative government.

One of his headline-making targets since he became chief coroner four years ago has been sloppy work on the part of his medical colleagues, and he has gained unpopularity among some in a series of searching inquests into deaths that otherwise might have been passed off without publicity. Results have included the disciplining of several doctors and changes in hospital procedures.

"He pictures himself as a Sir Galahad on a white horse trying to clean up all the corruption at once," Dr. H. Beatty Cotnam, supervising coroner for Ontario, once said. It was a final tangle with Dr. Cotnam that put Dr. Shulman out Friday.

Before that, he had butted heads over a period of years with a miscellany of officials up to and including a couple of attorneys-general, each time coming out unscathed. A former deputy attorney-general tried to get his job abolished, but that didn't work. Premier John Robarts summoned the battling coroner to his office during one uproar a couple of years ago only to emerge and announce he was not being fired.

PAID COST

This incident came after the publication of Dr. Shulman's annual report, which was so explosive that civic officials would not publish it and he had to pay the printing cost himself.

All the incidents have combined to make Dr. Shulman the best-known coroner in Canada, though he contends that he has merely been doing his job the way it should have been done all along, without cover-ups for doctors' lapses. The job pays $9,000 a year, somewhat more than adequate to cover the salary of the gardener at the doctor's $70,000 home.

"If I had to live on that salary," Dr. Shulman once said, "I'd have to think a lot before I upset anyone's applecart."

Costs Will Up If Britain Enters ECM

LONDON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Fred Peart has warned that if Britain joins the European Common Market, British housewives might have to pay between 10 and 14 per cent more for their food and the annual balance-of-payments deficit could widen by as much as $750,000,000.

As for the Commonwealth from which Britain draws one-half its food supplies, this trade would suffer "greatly," and "the difficulties for our traditional suppliers would be considerable."

Peart's rather gloomy summation, delivered before a farmers' meeting in north-western England Friday night, contrasted with the more optimistic note sounded by Foreign Minister George Brown in a Labor parliamentary meeting Thursday.

PICTURE GLOWS

Brown painted a glowing picture of great benefits Britain would derive from Common Market membership. He is reported to have maintained that even French President de Gaulle, who slammed the door against Britain in 1963, no longer has the political power at home to block Britain's entry.

Prime Minister Wilson, who was at the parliamentary meeting, is reported to have virtually made up his mind to open a new move for membership, though not all of his cabinet is sold on the idea.

Peart is one known dissenter; Trade Minister Douglas Jay another. Jay has given greater emphasis to Commonwealth trade and to concentration on the Kennedy round of world tariff bargaining in Geneva.

Should a "non-swinger" visit swinging Britain?

Yes. Very definitely! Because Britain is just as lively or leisurely as you care to make it. It's simply a matter of choice. Some of our passengers fly to Britain for a swinging vacation. Others prefer the things which are uniquely British—the friendly pubs, the gentle countryside. The pomp. The pageantry.

Only BOAC with Air Canada flies direct to Britain, and this summer we offer you the choice of up to 12 jet services a day from Toronto and Montreal. And there are several flights a week from western Canada; including direct Western Arrow services to London.

This event begins at 3 p.m. A special Golfer's Steak dinner will star on Thursday's smorgasbord dinner menu at the hotel. BUNTON-BENN

Delicate Chantilly Lace Trims Bride's Ligoda Gown

Accents of Chantilly lace highlighted the front of the sheath gown of ligoda worn by Maureen Diane Benn, recently, when she became the bride of Hugh John Bunton of Semans, Sask. The bodice of her exquisite gown was styled with a portrait neckline and lily point sleeves. A detachable flowing train extended back from the waist. Clusters of flowers appliqued with lace held her tiered veil of silk illusion net and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white freesia.

Rev. R. J. D. Morris heard vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Benn, 965 Lodge Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bunton of Semans, who travelled to Victoria for the ceremony. First United Church was decorated with arrangements of mauve stocks and yellow daffodils for the wedding.

Mr. Benn gave his daughter in marriage. While the couple signed the register, David Conrad sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Ave Maria," accompanied by organist Mrs. Ursula Bunt.

Matron of honor Mrs. Wayne Hocevar was wearing an empire-line gown of peau de soie in mauve tone, styled with floating panels of chiffon in back. She carried a bouquet of mauve-tipped carnations.

Bridesmatron Mrs. Gary Rai and the groom's sister, bridesmaid Miss Louise Bunton, Semans, were in similar gowns of green shaded peau de soie. Their bouquets were of green-tipped carnations. All wore the brides' gifts of pearl earrings.

The bride's nieces, little Shelly Scott and Eleanor Benn, were in mauve dresses similar to the senior attendants' gowns. White carnations with mauve tints were in their bouquets. Jewelry was the bride's gifts of pearl necklaces.

Terry Hanford was best man, and ushering guests were Pete Erichsen and the bride's brother, Gordon Benn.

Wedding bells of mauve, green and white carnations decorated Quadra Union Centre for the reception which followed. The three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table was highlighted with silver leaves and rosebuds. Len Acres' orchestra played for dancing. The bride's uncle, J. P. Thomas, sang "More" and "Around the World". P. F. Benn proposed the toast to his niece's happiness.

The couple travelled up-Island for their honeymoon. The bride's ensemble was a velvet suit in deep rose shade, complemented with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Other out-of-town guests travelling to Victoria for the wedding included the groom's sisters, the Misses Betty and Louise Bunton, of Semens.

COFFEE, CONVERSATION, CHAOS UPSETS CONVENTION

Liberal Women Elect Officers—Amid Muddle

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. Earl MacDonald of Charlottetown was acclaimed president of the National Women's Liberal Federation at a confused and sometimes chaotic closing session of the annual convention Wednesday.

In the beginning there was a quarter-hour wait while Ontario delegates collected their ballot books. The chairman at times could not be heard as the 251 women voting talked among themselves.

One speaker from the floor suggested some delegates were voting twice, but a scrutineer explained that they had been given the extra ballots by other delegates who had stepped out for a cup of coffee, leaving instructions on how to vote.

A Nova Scotia delegate told the assembly the "donnybrook" made her wonder whether more women MPs would be a useful addition to the House of Commons.

When the three-hour session was all over, a new national executive had been elected.

The new slate includes: English-speaking vice-president, Mrs. C. H. Andrews, Prince Albert, Sask.; French-speaking vice-president, Miss Edouardina Dupont, Trois-Rivieres, P.Q.; secretaries, Mrs. Gurzon Harvey, Winnipeg, and Mrs. Guy Pelletier, Moncton, N.B.; treasurer, Mrs. Paul Blais, Ottawa; regional representatives, Mrs. Helen Gibson, Medicine Hat, Alberta; Mrs. A. E. Brown, Toronto; Mrs. Lambert Gibeault, Hull, P.Q., and Mrs. Mark Babcock, St. John's, Nfld.

At the closing luncheon, where his wife was guest of honor, Prime Minister Pearson said the situation was the same as at home—"running second to my wife."

He said he knew she had had "a pretty rough time" during their 44-year marriage, at which point Mrs. Pearson told him they had been married only 42 years.

The prime minister quoted his wife's version of the quotation "behind every great man there's a great woman."

"She says 'Behind every great man there's a surprised woman'."

He promised speedy action on formation of a government department for protection of consumers, and said Parliament probably would approve modernization of divorce, abortion and birth control laws this year.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Young, 10 Hibberson Crescent, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday with a family dinner, held in the Carey Road home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Panter. Also present was their other son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Panter; six grandchildren and several friends. The Youngs were married in Toronto, living first at Sutton West, Ont., and later at Peterborough, Ont., where Mr. Young was employed as a master boat builder for the Peterborough Canoe Company. On his retirement, the Youngs came west, living for many years at Colwood before moving to their present home.

Victorian Wed in Creston

A wedding of interest to many in Victoria took place in Glad Tiding Pentecostal Church, Creston, when Marilyn Darlene Cole exchanged marriage vows and rings with Melvyn Thomas Chesworth, Victoria. Rev. D. M. Rathjen officiated at the service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cole of the interior centre and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Chesworth, 1040 Tolmie Avenue, Victoria.

As the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, the groom sang "Because." Phillip Rathjen sang "A Wedding Prayer" as the couple signed the register.

The bride's gown was fashioned of white velvet brocade, with a full train sweeping back from twin satin bows. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Two satin roses, accented with pearl drops, held her tiered veil of illusion net. She carried red roses and rosebuds atop a white Bible.

Matching gowns of French chiffon red velvet were worn by matron of honor Mrs. S. Cole, bridesmaids, the Misses Jessie Lewis and Evelyn Rathjen, and flower girl, little Teresa Dann. Their floral headpieces were of white velvet and the senior attendants had bouquets of red and white chrysanthemums. The little girl carried similar flowers in a white basket.

Best man was Kenneth Cole and ushering guests were Clifford Johnson and David Crouse. Little Terry Dann was ringbearer.

A four-tier wedding cake centred the lace-covered refreshment table at the reception following in the church hall. Kenneth Cole was master of ceremonies and Alf Edgar proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Chesworth donned a two-piece knit suit of peacock blue, accented with black accessories and a white orchid corsage. The couple is now making their home at 83B Sims Avenue, Victoria.

Victoria guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Browne and Gary Carr.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

Give with all your heart . . . to save ailing hearts . . .

Up to now in this column we've been telling you about things which already exist in Our Town . . . Today we'll tell you about something that doesn't—yet . . . but WILL if you help make it so! . . . It has to do with electronic monitoring gear which will cut by half the number of heart patients who die each year in our two big hospitals, Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's . . . Of the roughly 200 heart patients admitted annually to each, 80 die . . . for lack of Intensive Coronary Care facilities . . . Now both hospitals are planning to install such complexes . . . to take care of women as well as men patients . . . The major costs are already pledged . . . but the actual electronic equipment needed must be met by volunteer subscription . . . and to this end, the Victoria Kiwanis Club has undertaken a drive to raise $20,000 . . . Not much really, is it? . . . If each of our readers gave just a dollar, think how fast this sum would be raised! . . . And who knows when the heart of one dear to you . . . or even your own . . . might be saved . . . returned to a happy and useful life through the care provided by this equipment . . . So be generous . . . give with all your heart because the heart you save may be your own . . . Kiwanian Wyn Sinclair, of Miss Frith's, is chairman of the campaign . . . Phone him or any Kiwanian, or give directly to the hospitals . . . We're enabled to tell you all this, courtesy of . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

A sparkling crystal jewelled collar and front tab lends excitement to a white wool after-five dress.

Liberty shirtwaist dresses . . . 1967 version . . .

We've been reading a lot lately about the renewed popularity of that timeless classic, the shirtwaist dress . . . And don't think for a moment that a shirtwaist-is-a-shirtwaist-is-a-shirtwaist! . . . The 1967 version is pared down and slim . . . crisp and tailored and subtly feminine . . . We saw it beautifully exemplified in the new Liberty silk shirtwaist dresses at Wilson's . . . with long Frenchcuffed sleeves, narrow tie belt which you can wear or not as you please . . . Patterns and color combinations are lovely . . . browns and mulberrys . . . yellows, gold and reds . . . blues corals and greens . . . Unmistakeably Liberty! . . . Another beautiful dress of Liberty silk print has short sleeves, a cuff neckline swooping lower in the back, with eye-catching detail . . . slightly A-line skirt . . . Green, beige and gold predominate in the print design . . . Still another Liberty model has a cowlish round neckline, short sleeves, and A-line skirt with two inverted pleats in front, each topped with a tiny bow . . blue and turquoise shades against a white background . . . Getting back to shirtwaists, we saw a couple of cotton and dacron dresses in an attractive print pattern . . . and there's a striking one with blue, green and navy stripes . . . all three quite inexpensive . . . If your size is among these, we advise you get it while the going's good . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Forget your pre-conceptions about mixing stripes with checks and plaids. Today they're all mixed together madly . . . with perfect chic!

A thing of beauty is a joy . . .

In our book there are just two kinds of wedding gifts . . . "useful" items the couple needs for their home . . . and would probably acquire willy-nilly anyway . . . and beautiful, unusual, mostly-for-pleasure pieces they'd never buy for themselves, but which will bring endless joy . . . We saw some of the latter at the Handloom this week . . . To hang on a wall, and act as perennial conversation pieces . . . heavy wooden masks . . . carved by an up-Island merchant seaman in his off-duty hours while sailing the high seas . . . Some of the faces are those of people he knew . . . one of a South Sea Islander is particularly wonderful . . . all have marvellous expressions . . . Each is a unique treasure . . . Then, by Japanese-Canadian pottery-maker Kakinuma . . . there are several examples of the animal and bird figures for which he is famous . . . Perfectly delightful things, whose only role in life is to look beautiful and bring pleasure to their owner . . . Equally lovely are Kakinuma's bowls and vases . . . which of course have their useful side too . . . and his hand-thrown pottery garden accessories would make any patio a delight . . . There's a matching stool, base lamp and tall vase . . . all in rich earthy brown tones . . . For truly lovely and imaginative gifts, visit . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

Prints, polka dots and jungle patterns appear on bras, girdles and other under-pinnings.

Sportswear with oomph!

Last weekend's bright sunshine and balmy temperatures brought many a pair of shorts out into gardens and patios . . . made us start thinking of the imminence of the need for smart sportwear . . . so when we walked in to the Madam and Eve Shop on Monday and saw their new line of Helanca sports co-ordinates, it was like an answer to prayer! . . . There are shorts . . . (regular and Bermuda) . . tank tops . . . short pullovers, plain or striped . . . Material is stretchy and looks like a very fine terry towelling, but unlike terry cloth, it won't pull . . . and it's completely washable and dryable . . . Fit of all these is terrific! . . . and you can mix or match 'em any way your imagination dictates . . . Another line of sportwear in Lustrethal . . . a cotton and antron stretch nylon knit fabric . . . consists of Jamaicas, short shorts, slims and skirts . . . to co-ordinate with tank tops, sleeveless cardigans, shells and long-sleeved jackets . . . They all come in snowy white, with brightly-hued Mexican stripes adorning tops and jackets . . . You could assemble a whole sports wardrobe from these co-ordinates alone . . . a mighty nice way to look under the sun this summer . . . and so easy to keep bandbox fresh, because all you do is pop them into the machine and dryer between wearings! , , , Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

A long, black knit dres with asymmetric neckline has ticker-tape streamers sewn on like stripes . . . more streaming from one shoulder.

New P & O-Orient sailing lists now at Paulin's . . .

One of the things we've noticed about this fast-moving world of ours . . . in some ways it seems to work in reverse . . . Take travel for instance . . . especially travel by ship . . . if you want to take a sea voyage somewhere . . . get bookings on a cruise . . . it's almost impossible to do so at short notice . . . you must get your bookings wrapped up not merely months, but actually years ahead! . . . Paulin's were telling us just the other day that they've now received the schedule of P & O-Orient sailings right through early spring of 1969 . . . Requests have been coming in for months for 1968 sailings, and now they're in a position to give people choices of definite sailing dates, and book the type of accommodation they want . . . if you're travelling during the peak sailing months . . . January of '68 or '69 . . . it's especially important to get your bookings in early . . . that is if you like to get what you want when you want it! . . . So if you've any thought of sailing the briny aboard one of those big, luxurious P & O-Orient liners during the months ahead . . . go talk to Paulin's at the earliest possible moment . . . Pick your date . . . then let Paulin's carry on from there . . . they'll take care of absolutely everything . . . And remember that if the sky falls and you can't make it when the sailing time draws near . . . cancelling's a lot easier than booking! . . . George Paulin's Travel Service, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

Almost every complexion responds to a natural beige color hat . . . it's the perfect summer neutral.

Solid carved oak from England . . .

If your taste runs to the type of handsome, substantial furniture that looks as if it had been lived with and cherished for years . . . do go and look at the beautiful hand-carved oak dining suite which Home Furniture has just received from England . . . now on display in The Gallery . . . There's a large refectory table . . . six chairs, covered with the best quality red leather, and a carved front buffet . . . with the bulbous legs typical of the period . . . This suite has all the earmarks of a genuine antique . . . it's what, in the furniture trade, they call "distressed" . . . "Looks as if it had been around for years," we remarked flippantly . . . and of course this is the intention . . . all the little nicks and marks furniture acquires from long use . . . put there laboriously by hand to impart the aura of time . . . Honestly, it might well have come out of one of the stately homes of England! . . . There's also a beautiful glazed-glass bookcase cabinet which is a companion piece but sold separately . . . And plain, distressed oak chairs (straight or with arms) which would be nice for dinettes . . . as well as nests of tables . . . solid enough so a man could eat a meal off one without being scared of sending the whole thing flying! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Wonder what holds on those way-out fashions with no visible means of support? Answer is Velcro, a burr-like material which is first stuck to the skin like glue.

Candy's always dandy . . .

Well, the Easter goodies should have disappeared into memory by now . . . but if you're like us and are mulling over those delectable Welch's chocolates your spouse presented you with . . . then it's easy enough to repeat the experience . . . albeit on less grand a scale . . . Go buy yourself a box of Welch's next time you're downtown! . . . Give yourself a treat and to heck with the calories! . . . We imagine, though, that the vast majority of Welch's are bought FOR someone ELSE . . . which is really as it should be, because Welch's make such a welcome and discriminating gift when something on the inexpensive side is indicated . . . We won't attempt to tell you all the occasions on which Welch's are appropriate . . . this you can figure out for yourself . . . but we WILL tell you, in case you hadn't realized it . . . that Welch's chocolates and candies are the most delicious confections you can possibly buy . . . and a tribute to your own knowledge of the good things in life! . . . Welch's make some 50 varieties of chocolates, candies and bonbons . . . they're always fresh . . . always pure . . . always delicious! . . . Next time your sweet tooth craves a treat . . . or you want to present an especially welcome offering to man, woman or child . . . get Welch's! . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St, 383-6422.

DEAR ABBY . . .

It's What You Call A 'Fair Exchange'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Wilbur and I are planning a June wedding. My mother and I went to a bridal consultant who is supposed to know all about wedding etiquette, and she told us the bride's folks give the wedding, the prenuptial dinner, pay for all the flowers, the minister, the vocalist and the organist.

Also, my folks give the wedding dinner and the reception afterwards, including all the refreshments and drinks. What do Wilbur's folks give?

SUE

DEAR SUE: Wilbur.

DEAR ABBY: Why should people who do not use the public schools have to pay taxes for them? We are taxed to death. I don't mind paying taxes for things I get some benefit from, but we haven't had any children in the public schools for 12 years, so why should we have to pay to get other people's children educated?

K.C.

DEAR K.C.: Free public education, paid for out of general taxes, is the only way to give all children an equal chance to learn. It is considered a "community service," such as parks, highways, libraries, and the police and fire departments are.

Such services and such a community are possible only if everyone pays for it. We would be in a fine fix if, for example, our fire department were financed by collecting from only those who "used" it.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think a travelling salesman should dance while he's on the road?

It's not the actual dancing I object to, but I think it could lead to more serious things. I became aware of this when my husband started bringing home shirts with lipstick on the collar, shoulders, and down the front.

Lipstick seems to get on the shirts only when he dances away from home. Never when he's in a group with his wife. I would appreciate your opinion.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Not many travelling salesmen feel like dancing on the road, but if yours does, he'd better cut it out before he gets all tripped up.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JIMMY JR. IN SANTA ANNA, Calif.: I wrote the following in my book "Dear Teen-ager" and doubt that I can improve on it now:

"A teen who digs nicotine is biting off more than he can inhale. Smokers are usually coughers, chokers, smell-up-the placers, and flat-brokers. Smoking becomes a habit. Why start? Everyone in the gang smokes, and, besides, you think it makes you look grown-up?

Who's living your life, you or the gang? And what's all this horse hockey about smoking being grown-up? Actually it looks about as grown-up as a four-year-old in long pants. An obvious, pathetic and laughable attempt at maturity.

Long pants don't make an adult. Nor will a cigarette dangling from the corner of your mouth. Ever conjure up a picture of yourself sneaking a smoke in the bathroom and blowing the smoke out the window? That's grown up?

Or can't you wait to join the growing number of adults who are trying to escape from smoke rings and halitosis halos? Of course there are many adults who don't smoke, never have and never will! (Me, for instance.)"

Troubled? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

There Are No Strings With These Reminders

By Penny Saver

There's an item in one shop that was designed for people like me. On sunny afternoons, there's practically nothing that can keep me in the house when I could be working in the garden or chatting over the fence with my neighbor. When the time comes that I should be in the kitchen preparing dinner or checking a roast, I'm usually lost in a deep discussion with my neighbor or I'm too enthused with gardening to even think of the time. When I finally come "down to earth" the rest of the family is usually on the way home.

I've thought of tying strings on my fingers so that I'd be more aware of the time, but I found an even better method, with no strings attached. It's a pocket reminder that's something like an alarm clock, except that it doesn't tell time. You can set this little wonder anywhere from five minutes to an hour. When the time is up, it buzzes for about five seconds. If you're carrying this timer in your pocket, you can feel the vibrations, so, if you happen to be mowing your lawn with a noisy power mower when the buzzer sounds, you can feel the alarm.

These pocket timers were actually made to remind people that their parking meters are about to expire, but as you can see, they can be used for scores of other things. They come with a key chain attached, and price is $3.95. If you have trouble keeping track of the time, you should get one of these precision timers.

Another gadget in this shop is imported from Europe. It's a thermometer with an adhesive backing that will stick to any surface. Place this accurate device on a window inside or outside your home or in the car.

Priced at $1.49, this thermometer has an easy-to-read dial and indicator. With summer just around the corner, this is a handy item to have.

When it comes to supplies of time-saving and practical inventions, this shop is tops. Another item that I saw is a telephone pencil that clips onto the side of a desk phone. The pencil itself is on a long chain so that it can't possibly be mislaid. The dialer on the end of the pencil glows in the dark too. Price of this is $1.95.

Don't stay "in the dark" about these items. Give me a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where to find them.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

By NONA DAMASKE

The 'Eyes Have It' in Fashion

Dorothy Parker, the well-known satirist, once said, "Men seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses." Today, attractive zingy sunglasses will have all male heads swinging your way.

Nona

Once a somewhat uninteresting item, sunglasses now have a place of importance in the fun fashion accessory field.

The new concept of relating eyewear to fashion has given glasses a place in the well-coordinated wardrobe of modern woman's accessories. Frame colors and shapes are as varied as the fashion palette of 1967.

The favorite mating of black and white finds keen competition from this season's brilliant citrus shades.

Sunglasses will be "in" this year and, with good old Sol bursting out all over Victoria, one of the most important fashion accessories you will want to complement your fun-sun wardrobe will be a stylish pair of dark glasses.

Sunglasses can be a girl's best friend, but you should choose them with care so they balance your features and flatter your appearance.

If yours is a square face, you should consider sunglasses with wide frames that have a gentle, upward curve to balance and soften the jawline.

A long face should have bold frames with large crowd-stopping lenses in circular, oval or jet-set square designs.

A face that is round calls for the narrowing effect of the slightly wider and slimmer sunglass styles provided by the sporty wrap-around models, and a heart-shaped face looks best in light and pretty oval or hexaglonal frames.

SIGHT COUNTS TOO

But it is important to remember that how you see in your sunglasses is as important as how you look, and you should give very careful consideration to the lenses.

The darkest lenses do not necessarily give your eyes the best protection because tinted lenses, regardless of the shade, cannot correct one cause of eyestrain and eye fatigue resulting from sunlight.

This is reflected glare, the annoying effect produced when sunshine "bounces" off the surface of water, sand or a roadway. The amount of light reaching your eyes under these reflected glare conditions is 10 times brighter than what you actually need for good vision.

Ordinary sunglasses will color the glare but they will not eliminate it, which is why you sometimes remove your sunglasses at the end of the day and find those unattractive lines around your eyes. You have been squinting to improve your vision in the sun.

SPECIAL LENSES

Your optician or dispensing chemist can show you sunglasses with special light-polarizing lenses which do eliminate up to 98 per cent of the reflected glare in addition to absorbing up to 70 per cent of the intense sunlight to make viewing comfortable.

The lenses in one type of sunglasses contain a row of invisible vertical bars which act like a picket fence, and when horizontal glare bounces off water, sand or other reflective surfaces and rolls like a log toward the "fence," it cannot get through.

Only the useful light reaches your eyes, so you see without strain or fatigue. Protected from both the bright sunlight and the reflected glare, your eyes stay fresh and relaxed, and you can go on looking as good to the world as the world looks to you.

Newlyweds Honeymoon In the East

St. Martin's-in-the-Field Church was the setting, Tuesday, when Rev. D. A. Hatfield heard marriage vows exchanged between Mrs. Elsa E. Johnstone and George F. Penson.

Given in marriage by D. B. Darley, the bride wore a two-piece suit of navy blue in double-breasted style. She chose a white Panama hat with navy trim, white accessories and a pink carnation bouquet to complete the ensemble.

Her only attendant was Mrs. Darley who wore a suit of red wool for the occasion. Her accessories and carnation corsage were white.

T. C. Penson was best man for his brother.

At the luncheon following in the Century Inn, Rev. Hatfield proposed the toast to the bride.

The newlyweds will be returning to Victoria to make their home, following a honeymoon trip travelling across Canada to Toronto.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

Any week now the camping fever will hit Victoria with full force and cars, like motorized tortoises, will head for beauty spots, each topped with the family's "second home". Every time I see one of these "tortoises" heading out on the highway I'm reminded of Mrs. Caroline Schubert, one of the first women in our province to be faced with the task of camping with a young family. Hers was the granddaddy of all trips, culminating in her giving birth to her fourth child in a hastily erected tent. Her "physician" was an Indian woman.

Mrs. Schubert made her history-making trip in 1862 and the little girl born on that journey was the first white girl to be born in the interior of our province.

So far, in this series on pioneer women I've restricted the heroines to those who settled on Vancouver Island. Although Mrs. Schubert's story rightly belongs to the mainland, it is so stirring that to omit it would be to deprive readers of a saga rarely surpassed.

Slogged Way Through Snow Drifts

In 1860, the Schuberts were living in St. Paul. The Indians were on the eve of a general uprising and, to avoid possible annihilation, the Schuberts set out for the safer Fort Garry, located on the Canadian side of the border 450 miles away. Travelling on horseback, they trekked across the prairies, their horses fighting a continual battle with the deep snowdrifts of mid-winter. Several times they were held up by Indians and robbed. But, they made their objective and spent two years within the safety of the fort.

Gold fever had hit the Cariboo and Mr. Schubert had one of the worst "cases." In spite of the fact that she had three children, the youngest barely two, and a fourth baby expected in less than five months, Mrs. Schubert insisted on joining her husband in his hunt for his "pot of gold." After that first trip, she was sure that this new trip would be a picnic by comparison.

There were 96 Red River carts in the caravan when it set out on June 2, 1862, after being blessed by Bishop Tache, each wagon hauled by two oxen and laden with mining tools, tents and food, mostly pemmican.

Mrs. Schubert rode a buckskin, sitting astride with two of her children, Mary Jane and August, swinging from two basket cradles, slung across the shoulders of her horse. Her husband carried the youngest child, James.

Beset with storms and often almost drowned in swollen rivers, it was August before the travellers caught their first sight of the Rocky Mountains. They had killed their oxen, then their horses, and starvation stalked behind them like a shadow. A week later they were in the foothills, but the trails were so bad that it was impossible to make more than 10 miles a day.

Boiled Lariat Ropes and Ate Them

Food was so scarce that many became weak and ill. Some of the men tried to offset the gnawing emptiness of their stomachs by boiling and eating their buffalo lariat ropes. At last, only Mrs. Schubert's faithful buckskin was left. It, too, had to be sacrificed.

They dragged their way through trackless forest to the head waters of the Thompson. The two weeks before they reached the river were the worst. The days were getting shorter and the mountain air chilled to the marrow. Dauntless, the expectant mother smiled away the party's fears for her health and worried only about the safety and welfare of her young family.

Reaching the Thompson, the men built rafts on which the party continued their seemingly endless trek. For almost a week their only food was some potatoes they had found in a deserted Indian village where smallpox had killed off nearly the whole band.

On the morning of the last day, Mrs. Schubert told her husband, "If we do not reach a village before nightfall, I shall have to stop by the way and rest."

Ill and weary as they were, the men bent their backs to try and hasten the rafts. That afternoon they came in sight of the stockades of Fort Kamloops.

The brave mother was helped ashore, a tent was whipped up and in two hours she gave birth to another daughter, an Indian woman from the fort taking charge of the nomad "maternity ward."

Who knows how many others may have stopped at the spot where this 28-year-old mother ended her trip. It may be that some of the "tortoises" that head out of our city toward the mainland may have pitched tent at that very spot, the tent pegs grabbing the ground which brought comfort to Mrs. Schubert and her baby.

One thing is certain. To none of us would that river bank look as beautiful as it did in the eyes of our exhausted heroine.

Club Begins New Season

Spring "officially" arrived at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club, Tuesday, when the ladies' division opened the season with a bridge-luncheon in the clubhouse.

The women began the day with a two-ball foursome competition with Mrs. J. H. Wilson and Mrs. G. B. B. Buffam bringing in the low score for the day.

Guest of honor for the luncheon was Mrs. R. W. Saunders, president of the Vancouver Island Division, Canadian Ladies' Golf Association.

Following the meal, bridge sessions began. Winner was Mrs. C. E. Lee, and other prizes were awarded to Mrs. Alan Spooner, Mrs. Buster Shade, Mrs. W. Helgason and Mrs. R. Stewart.

On April 15, the club will trade golf togs for party outfits for a Polynesian dinner dance.

Scores of fashions created by local women will go on parade, Monday, when the Victorian Order of Nurses' Auxiliary sponsors "Four Seasons," a show of hand-knits arranged by Boutique De Laine. The show will be held in the clubhouse of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club with two presentations, one at 2 p.m. and the other at 8.30 p.m. Here, Mrs. G. Soutar models an aqua pebble spun suit while Mrs. S. Purches looks all set for a sail, dressed in an Oran Isle sweater and slacks.

Wed In Bamfield

A wedding of wide interest in Victoria took place in Bamfield, recently, when Juanita Anne Burkholder became the bride of Bruce William Morrison, Victoria.

Spring floral arrangements of daffodils, lilies, iris and tulips were at the altar of Bamfield United Church when Rev. D. M. Hoops heard marriage vows uniting the daughter of Mrs. Zena Burkholder, Bamfield, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Morrison, 3213 Wicklow Street, Victoria. Organist was Mrs. M. Cashin.

Given in marriage by her uncle, B. Hoskins, the bride wore an exquisite empire-line gown of peau de soie, banded at the waistline with a dainty trim of re-embroidered rosebud appliques. The skirt was A-line and fashioned with a full watteau train. Her tiered veil of Chantilly lace was held by a crystal tiara and she carried yellow roses and ivy in her cascade bouquet.

A gown similar to the bride's of yellow silk chiffon over taffeta was worn by bridesmaid, Miss Judith A. Holt, Victoria. The gown was fashioned with lace appliques highlighting the train and bodice. Her headpiece, which she made herself, was a flower, edged with tulle, and she carried a crescent bouquet of white carnations, centred with a white glamelia.

Little Ruby Ann Burkholder was flower girl for her aunt in a frock of white nylon over yellow taffeta. She carried a small colonial bouquet of yellow roses.

Best man was Jerry Ridings, Victoria, and ushering the guests were the bride's brothers, Ross and Brian Burkholder.

At the reception in Bamfield Community Hall, the head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, topped with doves and decorated with yellow roses. R. Ostrom proposed the toast to the bride.

An empire-line yellow dress, fashioned with a slightly A-line skirt, was worn by the new Mrs. Morrison for travelling on honeymoon. She topped the outfit with a yellow and white checked jacket, which she made herself, and chose white accessories and an orchid corsage to complete the ensemble.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

New British stamps which will be on sale April 24 feature some of the most common of the country's wild flowers.

Four different 4d stamps depict the hawthorn and the bramble; the morning glory and the viper's bugloss; the ox eye daisy, colt's foot and buttercup; and the bluebell, red campion and wood anemone. (These four, by the way, are so printed in the sheet that it is possible to get blocks that show one of each stamp).

A 9d value illustrates the dog violet, and a 1s 9d, the primrose. The 4d stamps were designed by the Rev. Keble Martin, and the other two by Mary Grierson, official artist at the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew.

They are of course all printed in natural colors by the photographic process.

Alaska, like Canada, is celebrating its centenary this year. A special Centennial Railroad train, known locally as the Moose Gooser, made its inaugural run earlier in the year.

Three different cachet covers sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and the Anchorage Philatelic Society were available on the first day. They were franked with stamps depicting railroading in Alaska, as well as a 2c local-post stamp made for the occasion.

The only case of a newspaper inaugurating a country's postal service occurred in Fiji back in 1870.

At this time the group of islands was independent, and the natives had little need for letter writing. But sufficient Europeans had settled in the territory to make it necessary to have some sort of postal system operating between the different settlements on the islands.

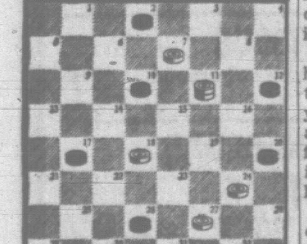
The only newspaper in Fiji had been founded at Levuka, the then capital, the previous year, and as it had established agencies throughout the islands for the distribution of the paper, it was in a favorable position to handle the mails as well.

So the Fiji Times, as it was called, decided to found its own postal service.

Stamps were manufactured on its printing press, consisting of oblong labels with a large numeral in the centre, and the words "Fiji Times Express" around the borders. They were typographed in black on rose-tinted paper in sheets of 24 arranged in four vertical rows which consisted of four different values — 1d, 3d, 6d and 1s.

This service was only in operation for about a year, after which the government took over. So the Fiji Times stamps are exceedingly rare today.

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



Sacrifice plays on the checker board are as crucial as those on the baseball diamond. In the game at right, White sacrifices in both his first and second turns at bat. White side, moving up the board, to move first and win in five moves is the challenge. Can you meet it?

Long-time checker champ Millard Hopper gives his solution below, if needed.

Solution: White 27-23, Black 20-27, White 18-15, Black 10-19, White 22-16, Black 12-19, White 11-8, Black 3-11, White 8-15-24-31-22-13.

Let us imagine the earth is at a standstill for the purposes of an experiment. If a perfectly straight tunnel could be bored straight through centre from one side to another, what would be the course of a cannonball dropped into the tunnel from one end, under the action of gravity? That is, would the cannonball fall through — or what would happen to it? This thought-provoking question can stir up a lively session of scientific discussion. It is suggested that the earth be regarded as a solid mass for the purpose of this discussion. Course of cannonball would not be affected by molten core, etc.

Answers: Many intangibles cloud the problem. However, it is maintained that a cannon ball dropped through a tunnel bored through the earth would oscillate continually from end to end. Taking the air into account, the ball would fall short of the opposite end of the first lap, and in succeeding trips its path would become shorter and shorter, until its initial energy was exhausted, when it would rest at the centre. But if earth's at a standstill, as stated, air and gravity are intangibles, too. Where that leaves cannonball (and argument) is anybody's guess.

DIG ANSWER IN 30 SECONDS?

If it takes seven men seven days to dig seven holes, how long will it take one man to dig half a hole? Answer in 30 seconds?

Answer: This is a question with which to catch your friends, too. Of course, it's impossible to dig half a hole.

QUICK PEEL?

How quickly can an orange be peeled using only a knife and fork, without touching the fruit by hand? A Spanish restaurant-owner recently offered a prize to anyone who could beat his record of 10, 12.5, 15 seconds. Which?

Answer: 12.5 seconds. He claims 15 seconds as an average.

SPY HABITS AT PARTY

One way to pep up a party is to provide guests with a miscellaneous collection of old clothes, wigs, costumes, false faces, cork, make-up, etc., and let them vie with each other in turning out unusual spy habits and disguises.

LONE NDP MEMBER

'Young Lochinvar' Short But Tough

By KORKY KOROLUK

EDMONTON (CP) — Described by a political opponent as "young Lochinvar come out of the west," Garth Turcott, only New Democratic Party member of the Alberta Legislature, does not cut a heroic figure.

But like Sir Walter Scott's hero, Mr. Turcott has proven "dauntless in war."

Mr. Turcott is a short man, and a bit overweight, and his cool, clinical approach to politics lacks the flair and dash one might expect of a Lochinvar.

The description of him was given in the legislature by the municipal affairs minister, A. J. Hooke, one of two government members he accused of impropriety. The other was the former provincial treasurer, E. W. Hinman.

The charges were not new. Alberta NDP Leader Neil Reimer has made them repeatedly and Mr. Turcott himself tried to get them debated at a special session of the legislature last fall.

He tried again early in the present session, but, as a new member not yet familiar with parliamentary procedure, often found himself handcuffed by the rules of the house.

GIVEN DEADLINE

Finally, he was given a deadline to produce evidence, and at the same time given a stinging rebuke for improper conduct in not bringing in evidence earlier to support his allegations.

Mr. Turcott rose to the occasion, produced his evidence and the house Friday considered a government motion that would establish the judicial inquiry for which Mr. Turcott has repeatedly asked.

TURCOTT
. . . presses charges

Mr. Turcott, 36, comes from a long line of socialist stock, although he does not hold with the doctrinaire socialist philosophy.

His grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Lindgren of Biggar, Sask., attended the first convention of the CCF party, the forerunner of the NDP, later saw M. J. Coldwell, elected leader. His father, a miner, long was active in the trade union movement, but not in politics.

"But politics was important to the whole family," Mr. Turcott says. "Maybe they weren't active in the sense that they went out making speeches, but they were politically conscious."

TAKES AFTER DAD

His "penchant for getting into a scrap" comes from his father, who once got into a fight about renaming the town of Wawa, Ont., where he now lives.

The town was to be renamed for an industrialist who owns most of it.

"My dad stepped in and fought to a standstill," Mr. Turcott says. The town is still in Wawa.

Mr. Turcott, a lawyer, was elected Oct. 6, 1966, in a byelection in the southwestern Alberta riding of Pincher Creek-Crowsnest, drawing much of his support from the coal miners in the area. Some were among those who died this week in the disaster that claimed 15 lives in a mine just over the border at Natal, B.C.

Mr. Turcott has been accused of several things—even being a Liberal without admitting it. But, he says, he has never subscribed to Liberal philosophy.

Besides, "every time the Liberals bring in a progressive piece of social legislation, they apologize. We're proud of it."

B.C. VETS GATHER ONBATTLEGROUND

ARRAS, France (CP) — A group of British Columbian veterans clustered around an old map of Vimy Ridge today and traced out the path they took to victory in an epic battle 50 years ago.

"I've had this map since the day of the battle of Vimy Ridge," said Fred Claydon of Pender Harbour, B.C., who was a private when the Canadian Corps took the ridge April 9, 1917.

Claydon was leader of 40 British Columbian veterans who arrived unexpectedly late Friday night, after travelling about 7,000 miles by plane, boat and bus to get here for Sunday's 50th anniversary ceremony.

"I would have done almost anything to be in this place on this day," said Claydon, adding that he spent his 17th birthday on the ridge.

The veterans, some accompanied by their wives, ranged in ages from around 67 to at least 83—the latter the age given by John Water of Prince Rupert.

ARRIVAL A SURPRISE

The anniversary organizers were surprised and delighted when the British Columbian veterans turned up in advance of the official group who came from Paris today. Other advance arrivals were Brig. Gen. J. A. Clark of Vancouver, 72nd battalion, Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, and Sgt. H. F. Hines, also of Vancouver and the same regiment.

One of the few surviving battalion commanders, Clark recalled that only 62 men were left standing in his unit—eight of 14 officers having been wounded and four killed when the Germans were routed from Vimy Ridge on Easter Monday of 1917.

The fight saw all four Canadian divisions go into action together for the first time and achieve victory where the British and French had earlier failed.

It had been described as the crucible of Canadian nationhood.

Today the veterans stood on the ramparts beneath the towering white stone pylon of the Vimy memorial, while Claydon pointed out landmarks on the plains below.

The B.C. men—including A. E. Perry and P. N. Pederson, Victoria, and A. E. Maloney, Parksville—arrived in London Friday and came here by boat and bus.

Window-Breaker Pays for Breach Of Probation

A 17-year-old boy who breached the terms of his probation was jailed for a year Thursday.

Daniel Gibson of 627 Colville had been handed a suspended sentence after he kicked out a $420 display window at The Bay last December.

Magistrate Byers said Thursday he was satisfied Gibson had no real intention of obeying the instructions of his probation officer and was continuing to associate with "persons of bad character."

The youth was sentenced to a 12-month definite and six-month indeterminate term at the Haney Young Offenders' Unit.

FAMILY MADE FORTUNE BY 100-YEAR STOPOVER

VERNON (CP) — Descendants of a cattle driver who stopped to fatten his herd and stayed to build a 15,000-acre ranch at the north end of Okanagan Lake, will celebrate their own centennial this year.

The O'Keefe family has set June 15 as the date when Premier Bennett and other dignitaries will officiate at the restoration of the ranch.

Cornelius O'Keefe stopped to fatten 180 steers he was driving from Oregon to the Barkerville gold fields. He never moved on, but pre-empted 180 acres on the lake shore and kept adding to the original homestead.

He had 14 children by two wives and the youngest, Tierney, now runs the ranch.

Tierney and his wife Betty started a restoration project two years ago, and last year alone entertained an estimated 10,000 persons.

Key to the resoration is the family home. It is set in a formal garden with a 19th century fountain and its furnishings include a hand-blown glass chandelier from Venice, an old Flemish oil painting and overstuffed chairs with their original leather.

There is also a music box that plays perforated discs and a 12-piece oak dining room suite laid out for a formal dinner with Meissen dinner service and New Queen silver service.

St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church, oldest in the B.C. Interior, has the original vestments, candlesticks, missal and organ on display. Missing stained glass windows were replaced.

Other restored buildings include a post office, blacksmith shop with bellow, anvil and branding irons, and a general store stocked with coffee grinders, spittoons, bustles and high-button shoes.

Tools Stolen

Tools worth $100 were stolen from a garage at Queens and McBride Thursday, city police reported Friday.

Norman King, 750 Queens, who is building a stock car in the rented garage, told officers the locked door was forced.

New Church Next For Gold River

Gold River is the latest addition to the Anglican diocese of British Columbia.

It is situated at the junction of the Heber and Gold Rivers and is reached by a scenic route west from Campbell River around the shores of Campbell Lake.

"At the moment church services and Sunday school are being held in the basement of the new rectory," writes Rev. J. D. McKay.

"We are bursting at the seams as there are nearly 50 children coming to Sunday School each week. At times we are short on space for church as well.

NEW CHURCH

"Roman Catholics, United and Anglican Church people are very concerned that there is not a church building, and this concern is beginning to bear fruit. We hope shortly to find suitable plans for the church and then proceed with its construction."

Mr. McKay says the instant town of Gold River will have all the conveniences of a modern city — paved roads, underground wiring, modern schools and shopping centre, treed boulevards and recreational facilities.

"When the pulp mill opens, at the mouth of the Gold River, we expect to have about 2,000 residents.

Forgive All Sins

"Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies." This verse from Psalms is the Golden Text of this week's Christian Science lesson-sermon, "Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?"

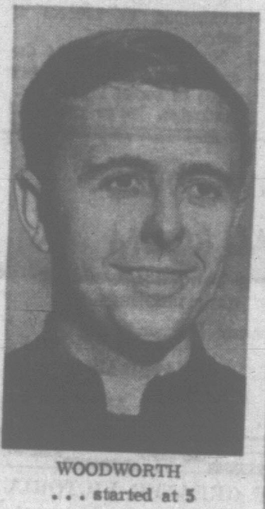
Young Organist Trains Choirs, Teaches Music, Directs Plays



WOODWORTH
. . . started at 5

One of Victoria's youngest professional musicians is 24-year-old Doald Woodworth, organist and choirmaster at St. John's Anglican Church.

Born in Calgary, he had his first piano lesson at the age of five and, at 13, began organ study with Gerald Bales, now cathedral organist at Minneapolis.

When only 15, Mr. Woodworth began two years of commuting from Calgary to play the organ and direct the choir at a church at Drumheller where he also gave music lessons.

At 18, after high school graduation, he was appointed organist at Central United Church, Calgary.

He continued organ studies there under Phyllis Chapman and George Benbow, and for one summer studied at the University of Michigan.

Under Stanley Finn, a pupil of the composer Hindemith, Mr. Woodworth studied composition and has since composed a number of motets, anthems and vocal solos.

At the University of Alberta, he was for four years accompanist, and for two years president of the University Choral Society.

He also conducted the university's Capella Singers and was violist and leading horn player with the university string ensemble and concert band.

At Central United Church he directed a hand-bell ringers group, using 10 ringers for the 37 tuned bells.

Mr. Woodworth is interested in religious drama and directed liturgical plays at Calgary and at the University of Saskatchewan.

At St. John's, Victoria, he trains three choirs — senior, boys' and girls', and presides over the large four-manual Casavant organ built to replace the instrument destroyed by fire in 1960.

The new organ was designed in consultation with the late Frederick Chubb, then organist and choirmaster at St. John's.

Mr. Woodworth received his Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Alberta, graduating with the highest mark in his class. He is also an Associate of Music and silver medallist of the Western Board, and associate of the Royal Canadian College of Organists.

In addition to his church work, Mr. Woodworth teaches music at Glenlyon School and at Victoria School of Music.

Medical Centre To Open June 5

Members of the Victoria Seventh-Day Adventist Church have completed a job they started four years ago when they first contributed toward a multi-million-dollar medical centre at the Loma Linda University, California.

The centre will open June 5.

Including a 510-bed hospital, classrooms, laboratories, and research and clinical facilities, the structure is designed as a "campus within a campus."

More than 2,000 rooms will serve the needs of hospital patients and of teachers and students of medicine, dentistry, dietetics, occupational and physical therapy, nursing and other health professions.

United Church Women To Meet

General meeting of Centennial United Church Women will be held in the Howard Harris Building, David Street and Gorge Road, Wednesday at 2 p.m.

ROAD TO SALVATION

By Rev. JOHN A. WATSON
Minister, First Baptist Church

The fundamental question put to religion is "What must a man do to be saved?"

It is the quest of all serious-minded folk. Therefore, our worship Sunday morning at First Baptist Church will focus on the theme Salvation.

This is one of those Christian words which cannot be replaced without impoverishing the reality it expresses. There is a way of discovering its true meaning, and it can bring new life by the Word of God.

This comprehensive Word can best be understood by seeing it in the three tenses — past, present and future. The lessons will be read from Genesis 3: 1-7 and Romans 1: 16.

WATSON
. . . they come in agony

One could scarcely think of a greater promise than the Scripture "If you ask anything in My Name, I will do it."

How many times have sincere people come in agonizing moments with requests, only to find things do not get better; they get worse. Therefore, it is exceedingly important that we open our minds to the meaning of such a tremendous promise.

The lesson will be read from the Gospel of John 14: 13.

Visitor for 'Army'

Col. E. G. Fitch, men's social service secretary for the Salvation Army in Canada and Bermuda, with headquarters in Toronto, will visit the men's social service centre on Johnson Street this weekend.

The Big Change In Christianity

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The church today is accused of negative thinking, of being behind the times, unable to reach the younger generation, of being out of step. It is sometimes described as a social club to which it is fashionable to belong. The No. 1 question: Is God dead?

Blunt, down to earth, Rev. Rex Dolan outlines the problems, poses the big question and gives some answers—not by any means all the answers—in The Big Change. This provocative 104-page, how-to-do-it manual for Christian renewal was issued three months ago by the United Church of Canada and now is put out for general distribution by Ryerson Press.

Dr. Dolan, associate professor of homiletics and worship at United Church Theological College in Montreal, does not pretend to give a definitive reply to death-of-God theologians who first raised the question more than 100 years ago. He points out that the existence of God has become a live issue for laymen—and for churchmen—and that advocates of the theory present gropings, clues, suggestions, not finished theologies. His own faith is clear: There is God.

In a preface, Dr. Dolan notes that it might seem presumptuous that anyone "might choose to add to the current flood of literature critical of the church." He insists that his book is positive—an attempt to sway individuals and congregations to take part in the "big change" under way in the church.

He says that there is a need for change but "this doesn't mean that we lose our heads or lose touch with the old." The church was commissioned by Jesus to take the gospel into the world and "we must face the fact that we have failed to get it there."

Anthology's Lord's Prayer In Eskimo, Cree, Esperanto

By GERALD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Centennial Anthology of Prayer, a milestone in religious literature, might have been high and mighty.

Instead it is as humble as The Prayer for Elevator Operators, one of its 185 invocations.

"Lord, you understand my position," begins the prayer of the elevator operators.

It goes on to an acceptance of the inevitable ups and downs of the job and of life.

Publisher of the anthology is the Canadian Interfaith Conference, which has 34 member faiths. The editorial committee included Roman Catholics, Jews, Anglican and United Church clergymen.

The conference is so broad that the word ecumenicism, which refers to a Christian movement of unity, is avoided in deference to Buddhist, Muslim, Jewish and other non-Christian members.

Even the cross can't be used as a general symbol by the conference. Instead, the imaginative cover of the anthology carries the white swirl of a galaxy in the blue-black depths of space.

SOME IN FRENCH

Editor Ramsay Armitage, an Anglican who is principal emeritus of Toronto's Wycliffe College, was swamped with material by enthusiastic members.

The foreword contains a candid admission that not all the psalms, graces, benedictions, litanies and even playlets "are on the same level of creativity."

"The sense of unity of all Canadians praying together was what we hoped to achieve," writes Montreal businessman Lavy M. Becker, the conference chairman and a former rabbi.

Though more than one-third of the contents is in French, the anthology generally avoids translation.

"Everything suffers in translation," says Mr. Becker. "Protestant prayers written in the Elizabethan era didn't make any sense translated into French."

An exception is The Lord's Prayer, rendered not only in English and French but in Eskimo syllabics, Mohawk, Cree, Gaelic and Esperanto.

The editors dug deep to come up with prayers appropriate to Canada's 1967 celebrations of 100 years of Confederation.

LINES FROM SHAKESPEARE

Even Shakespeare contributes something, with the following lines from Henry VI:

"Bless this food, O Lord, we pray
"On this glad centennial day.
"May this land be strong and free
"As we live, O Lord, for Thee. Amen."

The anthology bounds unevenly at times from beauty to pathos, from Paul Teilhard de Chardin's majestic Hymn to the the Universe to the anonymous Prayer for the Era of Aluminum and Steel.

Mennonites, Doukhobors, Seventh-Day Adventists, Quakers tread through the pages in company with the Metaphysical Society of Canada, Albert Schweitzer, Mary Baker Eddy, Karl Barth, Reinhold Niebuhr and "possibly Cardinal Newman," as one entry is signed.

The Interfaith Conference headquarters here mailed more than 20,000 copies to clergymen across Canada during the winter, with order forms through which more can be obtained at $1 a copy.

The anthology may become the definitive work for interfaith services. Besides prayers for Expo and the Centennial, there are more for Parliament, the provinces, industrial workers, scientists, travellers, writers and broadcasters.

Midway through the anthology is a page bearing a series of dotted blank lines and the heading Priere pour tout Canadien—A Prayer for every Canadian. The idea is that the reader write his own.

New Expo Prayer Combined Effort

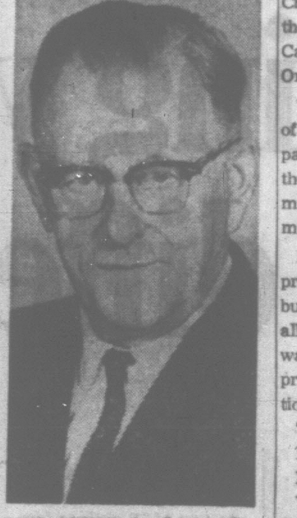
MONTREAL (CP) — A new prayer has been written for the Christian Pavilion at Expo 67, the combined effort of Roman Catholic, Protestant and Greek Orthodox clergymen.

The prayer invokes the spirit of Christ upon visitors to the pavilion and asks divine help for the pavilion in proclaiming the message of Christ and guiding men in their search for God.

Plans for distributing the prayer haven't been made yet but it will be circulated through all participating churches, as was done with a previous prayer written when construction of the pavilion began.

The Prayer:

Lord Jesus Christ,
Light shining in the darkness,
You have shared the life of man in his world.
Faithful to Your prayer for unity,
We, Your disciples and Your brothers,
By the grace of Your spirit,
Wish to give to the world
Your message of hope.
By Your coming and Your presence
You have created a new world
Into which You have called us to live.
May our pavilion proclaim this good news
And guide men in their search for God.
By Your birth and Your living among us,
By Your death and Your resurrection,
You have given direction to our life.
Send Your spirit upon the visitors to our pavilion,
That they may be led to discover,
Through the grandeur and the misery of this world,
The mystery of Your coming among men and of their salvation.
You have told Your disciples,
To love the Father, to love one another,
To love all men and to serve them all.
May this pavilion recall Your message of love,
May it make You known, You who have said:
I am the way, the truth and the life.
May Your love for men
Illuminate our faith and be our hope;
Grant that we share our faith and hope
With those who are looking for You.



PREACHING in James Bay Church Sunday at 11 a.m., Rev. H. T. Allen will speak on The Great Defection and How It Affects Human Beings. "There are military, political defections," he says. "There are also ethical, philosophical and religious defections which create problems for many."

Mission Work Theme Of Rallies

Work of the Anglican World Mission will be described at four conferences on Vancouver Island next week.

All church people are welcome.

The meetings will be held from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. for Saanich deanery in All Saints, View Royal, Tuesday; for Victoria deanery in St. Luke's, Cedar Hill, Wednesday; for Comox Deanery in St. Edmund's, Parksville, Thursday; for Cowichan Deanery in St. John, Duncan, Friday.

Rev. H. J. McSherry of Vancouver will address the Victoria conferences.

CHOIR MAKES LONG-PLAY RECORD

Centennial project for 50-voice choir at Victoria's First United Church is a long-play record of music sung at the church services since Jan. 1.

It will be made from sound tapes recorded by choirmaster William H. Gregory, who has directed the choir since 1962. Origins of the choir go back to 1862 when First United was established as the First Presbyterian Church.

The present choir has a distinctive uniform — red gowns with gold lapels and a Canterbury-style cap for the women choristers.

HORSES NEED GREEN

Los Angeles horse owners spend about $30,000,000 a year to feed and care for their mounts.

CANADA'S CHIEF MALADY

Bishops Urge National Unity

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's Roman Catholic bishops capped a week of precedent-smashing actions Friday with an eloquent plea to politicians to rise above passion and seek fair solutions to ethnic conflicts.

The bishops called on Canadians in a 4,000-word centennial message to banish hatred, injustice and prejudice.

"The chief malady of Canadian society" was described as deep and growing discontent among French-Canadians and resulting "uneasiness" among English-speaking Canadians. This called for enlightened politics.

". . . Men must take account of the truth that political regimes and legal structures are means, not ends and therefore susceptible, as history shows, of constant reform."

The 85 bishops urged Canadians to "find a political setup" by fair compromise that would protect the autonomy of Quebec and the rights of minorities.

CITE RIGHT

No peace could come to Canada until the existence of the French-Canadian people was recognized as a social fact. Quebec had a right to provincial autonomy, so long as the province respected "the greater common good" and the inviolable rights of the English-speaking minority.

The bishops appealed for fair treatment of all ethinic minorities, including Indians, Eskimos and French-Canadians outside Quebec.

"Indians and Eskimos have often had to endure, and sometimes still endure, the effect of prejudice, ignorance, indifference and even injustice.

A new political structure was needed to "allow the French community of Quebec, more and more aware of its own identity, to obtain the conditions necessary for its own development, while respecting the well-being and the rights of other Canadians."

The bishops called for more exchanges of visits and information between the two language groups to dispel ignorance.

ANNOUNCE DECISIONS

The bishops announced at a press conference Friday evening that the Canadian Catholic Conference will:

—Join the five largest Protestant churches of Canada in sponsoring a conference in Montreal in May, 1968, to urge the government to step up foreign aid and the domestic war on poverty.

—Set up a national relief fund for medical and educational aid to developing countries everywhere, regardless of the religious beliefs of the recipients.

—Drop the traditional Roman Catholic boycott of the Young Men's Christian Associations, provided YMCA religious programs are prepared by interfaith committees.

—Request the Vatican to permit detailed news coverage of the world synod of bishops, to open in Rome Sept. 29.

The Bishops also discussed relaxed rules on marriages involving a non-Catholic partner, but time ran out and the topic will be the subject of correspondence among the bishops. Thursday, the bishops made divorce reform virtually certain when they dropped their objections to divorce for non-Catholics.

Church May Re-Establish Diaconate

OTTAWA (CP) — Re-establishment of a third level of church hierarchy—lay deacons to assist priests—is being studied by the Roman Catholic Church.

Bishop Remi de Roo of Victoria told a news conference at the Canadian Catholic Conference here this week that the deacons would not be "mini-priests."

The diaconate would be permitted to confer baptism, give communion, assist at weddings, officiate at funerals and preach.

Unlike the two higher levels, priests and bishops, the deacons would not be permitted to preside at mass or hear confessions.

Bishop de Roo said the deacon's particular office would be characterized by a "sense of service."

BEGAN IN 1965

Plans to study the possibility of recreating the diaconate began at the Vatican council in 1965. A permanent order in the early Latin Church, the diaconate was once considered a step toward the priesthood but slowly disappeared from the hierarchy.

Bishop Albert Sanschagrin of Amos, Que., was recently named to the 20-member international committee of bishops studying the question. He and Bishop de Roo are members of a Canadian committee studying national possibilities.

The Vatican Council said the need for a diaconate and when it would be set up was a matter to be decided by the bishops in each country.

The diaconate could be composed of both celibate and married men who would perform a "broad and flexible role."

U.K. Baptists Can't Accept Unity Target

LONDON (Reuters) — British Baptists said this week they feel unable to accept a 1980 target date for a national union of Christian churches already agreed upon by most of Britain.s other denominations.

The union would include Roman Catholics.

A report, Baptists and Unity, by the official council of the Baptist Union also said Baptists are not all agreed on how far they coud go to meet the views of other churches for the sake of unity.

The 1980 date was set at a conference of representatives of the main British Christian denominations, excluding Roman Catholics, held in Nottingham in 1964.

Although stressing that Baptists should not weaken their links with the churches' unifying movement, the report said: "There is no other major denomination in which there is such widespread doubt concerning the present desire and movement to recover the unity of the church."

Procession To Feature Outdoor Rites

Mass is to be said outdoors at Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church, Lakehill.

Mrs. Margaret Caron said May 7 is being set aside for Mary's Day—A Day to Celebrate. The day will begin with the celebration of mass outside in the church courtyard.

IT'S A PIECE OF CAKE really. Or rather it's no peace for the cake eaters. Radio announcer Lyle Feltham was one of several Nanaimo people who weighed in this week for the centennial weight reduction program. Entrants must lose 100 ounces in 100 days to win a centennial medal. Nanaimo druggists, including Earle Bamford here, have agreed to act as official weigh stations. In Lyle's case a shave could make all the difference between 99 and 100 ounces.

ASKS COUNCIL HELP

Owner Losing Land to River

NORTH COWICHAN—John Hicks has a soil erosion problem.

The Chemainus River is eating away chunks of his Westholme property near the bridge on the old Chemainus highway.

Mr. Hicks has an offer from a firm to put the river back in its old channel at a cost of $1,440.

He told council he is prepared to pay one-quarter of the cost and suggested "some department—particularly the Indian department which is losing great strips of adjoining land every year—should also share the cost."

Mr. Hicks has lost a two-foot strip of his waterfront land since members of council made on on-the-spot inspection of his property in March.

He said in a letter to council: "The survey crew, even on a March weekend, found that many of their stakes had floated away."

Council was asked to help clear the project with the fisheries department, E and E Railroad Company and the Indian department.

Mr. Hicks said: "One of the unknown factors will be the property owners on the other (west) bank of the river who for years have been getting gravel not located on their property."

Coun. George Whittaker, public works chairman, said he could not see council's responsibility in the matter unless it was tied in with the safety of the new provincial bridge to be built across the river at the point.

Reeve Donald Morton said council intervention might speed co-operation from the various departments and individuals concerned.

Municipal engineer Howard Sturrock is to prepare a report for council.

Mr. Whittaker said: "Mr. Hicks better go ahead with the work now or he might not have a house in the fall."

Dock Gangs Honor Harmac Picket Line

NANAIMO — Six gangs of longshoremen refused to cross a one-man picket line today at the Macmillan-Bloedel Ltd. pulp mill at Harmac.

The picket, a member of Local 695 of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, was at the mill gates when day shift men reported for work.

Members of his own union and the rival Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada went to work as usual, but 64 longshoremen refused to cross the picket line.

The International Union Friday requested that 13 men who had not paid union dues be dismissed by the company.

The company said later in a statement that no men had been dismissed. The statement said the company has been notified that the international union is suspending the 13 employees from the union.

NONE DISMISSED

"The implication of this for Macmillan-Bloedel rests on the interpretation of the union agreement which the company now is attempting to have clarified," the statement said.

Asked today if the company would seek an injunction to halt the picketing, mill manager Don Blacke said:

"We are going to take the necessary steps."

Towing Firm May Reduce Slag Pile

CROFTON — The slag pile on Crofton shoreline, a leftover from the days of the local smelter, will disappear gradually.

That is if Island Tug and Barge Ltd is granted the foreshore lease for which application has been made to the provincial lands department.

The application has been referred to North Cowichan council.

Reeve Donald Morton said the lease is apparently for a long strip leading into the slag pile allowing boat access.

Coun. Margaret Robertson reminded council an action committee of Crofton ratepayers is working on plans for a boat basin and has requested that foreshore leases not be released without them being consulted.

It was agreed to ask the action committee for its views before deciding whether to object to the lease application.

Father, Sons Face Charge

A father and his two sons appeared in court at Camrose, Alta., Friday charged with forcibly seizing Raymond Barons of Nanaimo.

The trio was remanded to May 1 for preliminary hearing after pleading not guilty.

Barons, 30, complained to police that three men broke into his motel room last Saturday, drove him two miles outside town and forced him to sign a personal document before releasing him.

Charged are James Francis Donovan, 49, and his sons Duane, 18, and Arnold, 22.

Fire Protection Studied

SALTAIR — Three alternatives are to be studied to try to find a way of offering fire protection to the unorganized area of Saltair.

The alternatives were put to North Cowichan council this week by the department of municipal affairs.

First is that if Saltair became an incorporated district an agreement could be made between it and North Cowichan.

Secondly, North Cowichan could enter agreements with individual property owners.

And thirdly, the problem could be solved by the formation of a regional district to include Saltair.

The department letter said: "Further discussions are anticipated in the light of legislation incorporating regional hospital districts."

Coun. John Cannon, chairman of the municipal fire prevention committee, said, "We should give fire protection to the Saltair district."

A number of unsuccessful attempts have been made in the past three years to being about fire protection, and Chemainus volunteer fire department has signified its willingness to serve the Saltair area.

The department's alternatives are to be studied by the North Cowichan council's general purposes committee.

'Highway in Sky' Good for Planes Too

Duncan pilot Vern Jennings made a forced landing on the highway near Creston Thursday after his plane was caught in a downdraft.

Friday he took off again, using the same stretch of highway as a runway.

RCMP said Jennings experienced a close shave as the wheels of his single-engine plane struck a cement guard rail before gaining speed and altitude.

Neither Jennings nor his passenger, Lyle Beaudoin, were injured and damage to the plane was light.

Jennings was flying from Calgary to Nanaimo when the downdraft caught him over the 5,800-foot summit of the Salmo-Crescent section of the Kootenay Skyway.

After making a successful landing, he taxied the plane to a parking lot and the two men hitched a ride to Creston to spend the night.

'THIS IS DISCONCERTING'

Nightie-Clad Ghost Checks Her Skipper

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife Pat are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 21st in a series on their adventures.

"Sunday: Four days at sea now. Seems an eternity. Being Sunday, Pat has the day off, which means I do the cooking. Superb breakfast: soaked some salted bacon, fried this with potatoes, eggs and tomatoes.

Had three eggs (one over the ration allotted by the Mate). After this feast Patricia fell asleep for three hours, her first deep sleep of the voyage. She looks happier. Powindah self-steered all day. One sea came in over the cockpit. Pat thought this highly amusing as I was up there at the time. Had to bucket the water out; self-draining holes backed up. Too much ballast in stern. Supper: instant potatoes, carrots, sausages, and cream of chicken soup (it shot out of the locker first)."

Too Cautious?

"This is the last time we go to sea with only oil lamps. Took me three-quarters of an hour to fill the four of them. Spilt kerosene all over the chart table. Most boats put up one light—perhaps I'm being too cautious. Great feeling to be away from land. The boat is in her element running down these seas. Wind dropped a bit after supper. We made up the double bunk in the saloon and both of us lay down and were almost asleep when the starboard running sail came adrift. Sounded like cannon fire. In spite of the four lights burning on deck it seemed pitch black out. Went forward, dropped the sail and found a shackle had come undone."

Ghost Aboard!

"Pat called out twice to me while I was up there, asking if I was still on board. This is disconcerting. Pat looked like a ghost—her nightie flying out with the wind. We went back to bed but I couldn't relax. Kept thinking the wind was getting stronger. Finally Pat insisted on going up so that I would sleep. She stayed there forty minutes then came back to bed. No sooner had she lain down than the sails started luffing, so started keeping watch."

"Monday: One hell of a day. Wind stronger than ever. Boat looks like a dog's breakfast. Heaved-to for half an hour at supper time; then stood three hour watches throughout the night but both of us slept when below."

"Tuesday: The sunrise looked like gunfire on the horizon. Pat in tears at breakfast: eggs all over the floor. By noon today we had logged 663 miles. At sunset the wind started to ease and we made up the double bunk again. For the FIRST TIME we were able to stay there the entire night. Both of us slept as though poleaxed. Alarm woke me once an hour to check sails."

"Wednesday: This is paradise! Boat snorting along at steady six knots, stearing herself, while we drink tea in bed. Pat cooked pancakes this morning. Angry clouds have vanished; sun very warm; wind only moderately strong. Shook out reef points in the two 'twins' at noon, then checked the log and found we had done 147 miles in 24 hours. Powindah's record!"

"Thursday: Superb day! Gobbling up the sleep. Discovered three fat flying fish on deck this morning. Pat fried them for breakfast. They hit the sails at night. So far have caught nothing on fishing line. Pat did the washing and hung out the bedding to air. Generator on the blink. Tore out all the gear in the quarter berth to get at it. After supper we played cards. This is the time which bothers Patricia the most—dusk—the coming of night. Sometimes I don't feel so good about it either. Another good sleep."

"Saturday: The Mate was full of energy this morning Cooked two loaves of bread and a tray of scones. The kerosene stove was misbehaving. It doesn't like her. By the time the bread was done she was in a bad mood. Put her up in the sun to raise morale. Wrong move. A whale surfaced 30 yards away. Scared the wits out of her.

"Don't worry darling," I told her. "It thought Powindah was another whale. You'll never see it again." Ten minutes later the whale came up on the other side, this time closer and both of us thought it was going to have a shot at ramming us. He dove. I yelled at Pat to hang on but we never saw him again.

We read omniverously. There is a great peace in being out here. You want to get the voyage over with but still there are moments when you wouldn't change places with the King of Siam. No longer feel we are in a contest with the ocean. The sea, boat, and crew are at one with another."

THERE AND BACK

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP)—A Canadian ocean voyager who sailed his 20-foot yacht from Vancouver to New Zealand plans to leave again this month on a long voyage home.

Ken. E. Weis, 40, a draughtsman from Vancouver, sailed his tiny gaff-rigged cutter Thumbelina into Auckland harbor in December after a six-month voyage.

Weis built the yacht himself at a cost of $3,000. It took him three years. The trip to New Zealand was his first ocean voyage.

He took 35 days to reach Honolulu from Vancouver and then made a 42-day leg to Papeete. There his wife Ethel joined him and accompanied him on the next leg to Raratonga, in the Cook Islands. She continued to Auckland by liner and was there to greet her husband after a 35-day trip during which he was becalmed for 12 days.

Since reaching New Zealand, Weis has been working in Auckland as custodian of the Outboard Boat Club, with headquarters in a central site in Auckland harbor. It has enabled him to give his craft a thorough overhaul in preparation for new adventures.

The journey home will be by a longer route than the outward voyage, and will take longer. Weis plans to sail by way of New Caledonia, the Great Barrier Reef off the northeast Australian coast and the Orient. Allowing time to dodge the typhoon seas and other seasonal hazards, his schedule gets him back to Vancouver in about 18 months.

You Can Ride Into Crater On Enchanted 'Valley Isle'

MAUI, Hawaii — It's a safe bet that you haven't been inside a two-mile high volcano or a tropical Grand Canyon recently. But then that's probably because you haven't been to the enchanted islands of Maui and Kauai.

Most visitors get to them by way of Honolulu and Waikiki Beach on the island of Oahu, but they're fanning out to the other islands these days, and not confining themselves to one area. There is just too much to be seen on other islands.

FAMILY HOUSING

Just recently these little-travelled islands have become exciting places to stay for the whole family. The Sherton Maui Hotel on Kaanapali Beach and the new Hilton Hale Kaanapali on this island offer kitchenettes with a gourmet delicatessen nearby from which to store up. Over on Kauai, the Poipu Beach Hotel has reasonable rates from $12 to $18 with the same family housing feature and the same idyllic lagoon setting.

Maui, "the valley isle", is the site of Haleakala, which is most appropriately named the "House of the Sun" after a legend about a Hawaiian Paul Bunyan. The impudent demi-god imprisoned the sun in the crater which rises 10,000 feet above sea level and released it only after it promised to give his people more hours of daylight for their crops and fishing.

The extinct volcano which formed the island has an understandable legendary atmosphere for it is the site of ancient altars and unusual plants. The most famous of these is the silversword from the cactus family. The rare plant sends out thin silver leaves in a spray at the base, and up from the centre a huge spire rises, often reaching twelve feet in height and blossoming with hundreds of purple and yellow flowers.

Trade Concerns Summit Meeting

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—Foreign ministers begin work today on a final draft of inter-American social and economic development plans, in preparation for next week's summit meeting of 19 American countries.

State Secretary Dean Rusk, who arrived Friday, said the three-day meeting starting Wednesday will help set the course of inter-American development for decades.

The draft declaration—which calls for a Latin American common market by 1985, curbing of military expenditures and development of health and educational programs — will be the basis of discussion among President Johnson and the other chief executives.

Biggest question before the conference, an official U.S. source said, will be how Latin Americans can sell their products in U.S. markets. The source noted a fairly sudden and surprising switch by Latin American nations from preoccupation with aid to concern about trade.

It was thought Johnson might make fresh concessions in opening American markets to Latin exports.

The meeting in Punta del Este, a seaside resort 90 miles from Montevideo, will mark the first appearance at an inter-American meeting by the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, Sir Eric Williams. His island nation became a member of the Organization of American States in February.

Not represented will be Haiti, Cuba and Bolivia.

Cuba's Communist government has been expelled from the OAS, and Bolivia is angry because its claim for access to the Pacific has not been put on the president's agenda.

The United States already has announced it is prepared to increase aid by $300,000,000 a year to Latin nations struggling to improve education and health programs.

Argentina's Foreign Minister, Nicanor Costa Mendez said today he will not bring up a proposal to create an inter-American peace force as had been speculated.

Communists in Uruguay have attacked the conference for nearly two weeks. Police fired guns into the air Friday to disperse a group of students shouting anti-conference slogans.

LIFTING chrysanthemums donated to the 22nd annual Cadboro Bay Flower Show are Debbi Crabbe and Kathy Maddock, supervised by Mrs. W. D. Dickinson. The roots, donated by Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. W. J. Roper, will be sold at show, April 29, in St. George's Parish Hall, St. George's Lane.

FIRST TV DELIVERY CANCELLED

CBC Makes Tory Soften Speech

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—The CBC permitted Conservative Leader J. C. Van Horne to televise a speech Friday night after the fiery provincial Opposition chief toned down remarks he had intended to make in a broadcast originally scheduled for Wednesday.

The CBC cancelled the earlier speech on grounds that some statements "could subject the corporation to legal liability."

The Friday night version eliminated certain insulting references to Liberal Premier Louis Robichaud, deleted the name of a politician Mr. Van Horne said was receiving kickbacks and softened a reference to the premier making "irresponsible lies."

The CBC said Mr. Van Horne agreed to make changes in his 15-minute free-time provincial affairs talk on stations CHSJ-TV, Saint John, and CKCW-TV, Moncton. The address was taped Friday morning.

Many of his comments were repetitions of previous attacks on provincial Liberal government policies and attitudes. He called a proposed new provincial Elections Act "another measure of creeping dictatorship."

He said it falls far short of recommendations in an election legislation report by former chief justice J. E. Michaud. He reiterated a charge that the government rejected single-member ridings "because they insist on gerrymandering ridings around to lop off pockets of our strength."

The government had "refused the non-partisan committee we want to set boundaries fairly. Its all typical of a government in its last dying days, committing one staggering blunder after another, killing democracy by chipping it away at its roots wherever they can and trying last-ditch ridicule to fool the people."

He said the premier was careful to hide the fact that such projects as the Chignecto Canal, proposed by the Opposition, would be paid for almost entirely by the federal government.

WRECKAGE of South Korean Air Force plane is inspected by police in Seoul. Plane crashed into a slum, killing all 14 persons aboard and 41 others on the ground. Explosion spread flames to wooden buildings and to nearby school, burning and injuring many youngsters.

Korean Plane Crash Kills 55, Hurts 30

SEOUL (AP) — A twin-engine South Korean Air Force transport plane smashed into a Seoul slum area today. Officials said 55 persons died—including all 14 aboard the plane and 41 on the ground.

They added that six persons were missing and 30 were injured.

The crash set off a huge fire that trapped many victims inside their wooden houses. The injured included 13 high school students who jumped from second-floor classrooms after the plane exploded 50 yards from their school.

Among the dead were the pilot, Capt. Suh Keun-joo, two crew members and 11 passengers on the plane. Besides the students, 17 persons were severely burned or injured.

Authorities said the C-46 transport belonging to the 5th Air Transport Squadron fell shortly before noon, five minutes after taking off in a drizzle from Yoido air base on a flight to Taegu, 130 miles to the southeast.

Eyewitnesses reported that the plane appeared to have engine trouble. They said it circled at low altitude three times, struck the dome of a Christian church on a hill and crashed in flames.

A series of explosions followed as gasoline spilled from the plane and spread the fire over an area 225 yards wide. About 30 wooden buildings housing about 70 families were burned.

Narrow alleys kept fire engines from reaching the area but the blaze was brought under control in 1½ hours.

Rescue workers recovered 15 bodies, including those of crew members and children, within two hours of the crash. More than 10 persons were in hospital with serious burns.

CANADIAN OPTIONS OUTLINED ON DEFENCE

Simmering beneath the surface of Canada's defence policy—and far more vital than the current uproar over armed forces unification—is the question of Canada's future in the North American Air Defence Alliance with the United States.

If the Canadian decision is to renew the alliance which expires next spring, we could find ourselves involved in a multi-billion-dollar anti-ballistics missile defence system which would transform this country into an atomic fortress. Discussions are now being carried on between Canada and the U.S. about the future of NORAD, but this future hinges directly on other talks between Washington and Moscow over the possibility of a moratorium on the building of anti-ballistics missile defences.

In a four-part series starting today on Page 5, Ottawa commentator Peter C. Newman outlines Canada's involvement in NORAD and the options for the future.

HANGOVERS HIKE HIGHWAY SLAUGHTER

That Morning After Is Murder

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—A sober man with a hang-over may be a bigger menace behind the wheel of a car than a man who has just had a few cracks at the bottle, says Dr. C. B. Gibbs of the National Research Council.

Moreover, other forms of stress such as lack of sleep and, in particular, frustration, are major causes of car accidents.

In a paper prepared for the Commons justice committee after four years of research, Dr. Gibbs says the driving problem seems to stem from a small minority of drivers with marginal driving ability and low tolerance to stress.

Even if liquor were prohibited entirely "these drivers would probably still cause accidents because of the effects of the many other forms of stress."

He found that some drivers with low readings in breath-analysis tests performed a set of skill tests worse than others with higher readings.

Consequently, when it comes to alcoholic impairment, "the use of the breathalyzer alone could condemn the relatively innocent and exonerate the more guilty."

He has developed an instrument which he calls a "stress-alyzer." It detects individual differences in speed, precision and accuracy and in the preference for speed or accuracy.

Reactions of teen-aged drivers are usually more rapid and precise than those of adults. But youths had less experience of improbable events and thus often reacted too quickly on the mistaken assumption that the more familiar event would occur.

Moderate intoxication did not appreciably impair the ability to deal with familiar driving situations. But it increased markedly the time needed to reach a proper decision in unfamiliar ones.

U.S. Trucking Halted In Face of Walkouts

Lockout By Major Owners

WASHINGTON—Trucking industry negotiators announced today a United States-wide shutdown of 1,500 major firms will begin at midnight tonight in retaliation for continuing Teamsters Union strikes.

M M. Gordon, president of Trucking Employers, Inc., announced the lockout action that would affect some 250,000 of the 450,000 Teamsters Union members involved in national contract negotiations with the industry.

The scheduled shutdown would affect the biggest U.S trucking firms — they carry about 65 per cent of all truck freight—and bring the worst trucking shutdown in U.S. history.

Earlier in the week, when the threat of a lockout arose during contract negotiations between the union and Trucking Employers Inc., acting Teamsters' president Frank E. Fitzsimmons said: "If we strike and they lock us out, you'll have the damndest strike this country has ever seen."

Gordon said he had no indication from federal officials as to whether an 80-day federal injunction might be issued to halt the strikes and lockout.

Gordon said the industry meanwhile will continue negotiating with the teamsters at the request of federal mediators.

Gordon said at least a dozen teamsters strikes are still going on.

CONTRACT EXPIRED

He said these were among 38 hit-and-run teamsters strikes that had occurred since the old national contract expired eight days ago.

Gordon said the only conditions under which the U.S.-wide shutdown would be called off—would be a halt to all strikes and a promise by teamsters' officials that there would be no more walkouts while negotiations continue.

TEI, which said more than 30 strikes had occurred in major cities, stuck with its wage offer of 44 cents an hour over a three-year contract, including an 11-cent cost-of-living adjustment, plus what it said was another 12 cents in fringe benefits and six cents in additional cost-of-living payments.

An industry spokesman said this 62-cent package offer compared with teamsters' demands totalling 90 cents an hour.

New Protests In Belgium Face Humphrey

BRUSSELS (AP)—U.S. Vice-President Hubert Humphrey flew from Paris to Belgium today on the final visit of his European tour and what was expected to be a relaxed weekend of conferences and ceremony.

But as he lunched with King Baudouin and later conferred with Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel, anti-war demonstrations erupted downtown. They were less violent than the egg-throwing, flag-burning demonstrations in Paris.

Pro-Chinese Communists paraded briefly but were dispersed by police. In another part of the city, the Union for the Defence of Peace paraded with posters assailing U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.

Six persons were seized by police.

HAD PAINT CANS

Earlier, three men with cans of powdered paint were taken into custody and ordered held until Humphrey's departure.

Premier Paul van den Boeynants greeted Humphrey and his wife at Melsbroeck air force base near Brussels.

"We welcome and value the efforts which you and your country and the people of Europe are making to build a new and vital community within Europe," Humphrey said.

As Humphrey left Orly airfield in Paris, about 250 youths waved banners, scattered leaflets and shouted for peace in Vietnam in a renewal of anti-American demonstrations called by the French Communist party.

Police cleared traffic from the highway from Paris for Humphrey's ride to Orly and kept pedestrians from standing along the road. Overpasses were guarded. Two policemen with machine-guns had stayed in Humphrey's plane during the night.

OCEAN LANDING PADS DESIGNED FOR 'COPTERS

LONDON (AP)—A project that calls for establishment of a chain of floating islands across the Atlantic to provide aircraft radar control and landing areas for helicopters has been developed by the British Vickers group.

Vickers, which has been working on the project in association with Standard Telephones, announced details of the project Friday.

Prime purpose of the islands would be to extend the control of civil aircraft movements by radar over the sea.

Leonard Redshaw, managing director of the Vickers shipbuilding group, said the key to the design of the islands is an anchoring system capable of holding them in a precise position in 2,000 fathoms.

The platforms, which would resemble oil rigs, would be about 100 feet in diameter.

UN Mission Considers British Talk Offer

ROME (AP)—The three-man UN mission on Aden flew toward Geneva today despite the British government's invitation to go to London to talk over the mission's charge that the British had not co-operated with it. (See also page 33.)

The mission's chairman, Manuel Perezguerrero of Venezuela, said 'We have not yet decided whether to accept the invitation to go to London."

With Perez were the other two mission members, Abdussattar Shalizi of Afghanistan and Moussa Leo Keita of Mali.

The three flew out of the British South Arabian protectorate of Aden Friday, cutting short their fact-finding trip after five days. Their visit was marked by violence by Arab nationalists trying to discredit the South Arabian federal government.

Perez and his aides consulted briefly at the Rome airport with UN Secretary-General U Thant, who arrived a few minutes later for talks with Pope Paul and Italian officials as he headed for the Far East.

QUEBEC MINISTER BLASTS SEPARATISM

'Simple Demagogery'

QUEBEC (CP) — Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, clenching his fists during a 35-minute defence of Confederation, Friday night slapped aside separatism for Quebec as "pure and simple demagogery."

Mr. Marchand spoke before a Liberal audience of more than 1,000 at a $10-a-plate banquet honoring him as new leader of the Quebéc Liberals in the federal government at Ottawa.

He was flanked by at least eight federal cabinet ministers, including External Affairs Minister Martin. Also attending was former prime minister Louis St. Laurent, who applauded the Marchand remarks vigorously.

"I am celebrating the centennial of Confederation," said Mr. Marchand, a former leader of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, to prolonged applause.

Mr. Marchand said that with the British North America Act of 1867 "for the first time in our history we had an act which accords formal rights to French-Canadians in Canada."

French-Canadians were given rights to education, resources in Quebec and the right to use their language. They in fact had "all the fundamental liberties."

He said there are "injustices, false tensions and false differences."

Among these was the tendency of some to oversimplify the problems of Quebec and blame Confederation as the source of everything that went

On Thursday evenings, our favorite supermart is usually well-populated with shopping couples. This week, however, it was empty to the point of desolation.

A half dozen women browsed their buggies along the aisles. But apart from me only two men were visible, and each looked as if the loved onebehind whom he mooched had just caused him to be served with divorce papers.

This curious state of affairs puzzled us no end as, as we chose without competition from among the bargain steaks, we speculated on the cause.

Had the city been smitten by a sudden and massive plague, the announcement of which we'd somehow missed?

Or could it be that a squadron of UFOs had landed in Beacon Hill Park?

Or—descending from the implausible to the possible—was some other market offering a host of super-specials on its shelves and in its bins?

Finally we decided the best way to find out was to ask, and put the question to our favorite cashier, the one who always packs the eggs on top.

"Hockey night," she told Win. "The men are all watching the first playoff game." Then, wrapping the lettuce with a flip and a twist, "Don't tell me your husband forgot about it!"

And so home, to learn Chicago had taken the Leafs in a game I wouldn't have missed for all the steak in the Cariboo country!

While nobody can deny that British Columbia's municipal affairs minister is a man of ideas, I would suggest to the Indian that he weigh Dan Campbell's latest proposal with extreme care.

It is a very fine thing to possess your own piece of property, and to share the rights and privileges enjoyed by the home-owner within the standard Canadian municipality. But there is another side to the picture, and I think the dweller on a reserve presently held in trust for his band by the federal government should be fully aware of it.

Municipalized, he will be liable for property tax, and the more valuable the property, the higher that tax rises. Such "gifts" as the home-owner grant and the home acquisition grant tend to shrivel when, with the other hand, the recipient is shelling out tax payments that can run to a good many hundred dollars.

As long range theory, Mr. Campbell's proposal may have merit. But until the B.C. Indian is convinced beyond doubt that it has been framed for his benefit rather than that of revenue-hungry provincial government, he would be wise to hasten slowly.

Among the white man's sayings are two worth heeding. "I fear the Greeks even when they come bearing gifts" is one; and the other, 'Out of the frying pan, into the fire."

I hope the native brother will consider them well.

A note to hand from Bill Wallis of Bellevue, Wash., the strayed Victorian who got to boasting about the size of our B.C. steelhead, then had the bad luck to lose the clipping on which his claims were based.

On the strength of a new supply of clips forwarded, Mr. Wallis is now out of the local Liars' Club, and his fishing cronies are speaking to him again.

By way of comparison, the expatriate sends a photo of a steelie reputed to be the biggest ever caught in Washington's Skykomish River.

It's a nice fish ... but compared to some that have come from the Skeena and the Kispiox, a youngster still.

BELLS RING FOR ACCOUNTANTS

They May Become Phone-Drunk But Taxpayers Happier for It

By TED GASKELL

Remember the Red Skelton character, the punchdrunk boxer who imagined he heard bells?

Some of Victoria's chartered accountants might be forgiven if they become phone-drunk and start hearing imaginary telephone buzzers after today's session with curious taxpayers.

Victoria members of the Inisitute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. set up a one-day telephone inquiry bureau and invited questions on income tax from the public.

And they got them.

The three phones started ringing about 8:45 a.m., 15 minutes before the service was due to start. They never seemed to stop during the morning. Calls were coming in at the rate of 50 an hour. Last year there were 200 during the day.

Investment income, property rental income, Canada Pension Plan deductions, gifts and medical expenses provided popular questions.

Rarely were the accountants stumped. They answered practically all the questions without reference to the thick volumes of tax information standing in the middle of the table. Occasionally they would consult a colleague but mostly they gave answers clearly and quickly off the top of their heads.

One or two out-of-town calls came in.

DEDUCT CAR?

One man wanted to know if he gave his wife an automobile could he deduct this from his income?

One concerned caller wondered if he had to pay income tax on an inheritance he received. No, said the accountant, but he would have to pay tax on any interest the inheritance earned if he invested it. The inheritance was $70.

Another man said he hadn't filed a return for 1957, what should he do?

Only one question stumped the panel and that was a case of "wouldn't" rather than "couldn't" answer.

The question?

Can you tell me the name of a good chartered accountant?

Teachers and parents will be asked some basic — and pointed — questions about the education of children in Greater Victoria public schools.

The Association of Women Electors will ask them.

They will be circulated in questionnaire form next week to half the teachers in the public school system and to several thousand homes in the city.

Idea behind the survey is to find out what teachers and public really think of the present educational system and the changes they think should be made in it.

Typical of questions asked teachers are:

What innovations would you like introduced into the public schools?

Are you satisfied with the training you receive?

What are the main reasons so many students are not interested in school work?

What are your main differences of opinion with parents, the school board, the district superintendent, and the department of education?

Parents will be asked, among other things:

If they think they should have a voice in the choice of studies given their children?

If taxpayers whose children attend private schools should be given a reduction in public school taxes?

If their children have ever been treated in a seriously unjust way at school and, if so, how was the matter settled?

Both groups will also be asked to mark on a multiple-choice chart the aspects of education they want to see most emphasized in the schools.

'Stay In' Weekend

Outdoorsmen can take it easy this weekend.

There's nothing worth going out for.

The sun won't be shining, the temperatures won't be soaring and there's nowhere to escape.

Most of Vancouver Island will be under a cloud blanket and showers are expected throughout the day.

Winds will be westerly 15-20 with temperatures reaching 50.

Tonight will be no better with heavy showers expected and Monday will be cloudy.

That was the weekend that was.

COLDWELL AWARDED DOCTORATE

Miss Joan Coldwell, an assistant professor of English at the University of Victoria, has been awarded a Ph.D. degree by Harvard University.

Miss Coldwell, a Shakespeare school, wrote her degree thesis on the history plays of Shakespeare.

Born in England, she received her master's degree with distinction from the University of London, a rarely awarded honor. She has taught for five years at Uvic.

Miss Coldwell has held a Canada Council scholarship and a Harvard Fellowship. She was a contributor last year to a book of essays on the Irish poet W. B. Yeats.

Miss Coldwell is book editor of the Victoria Times. One of her articles appears today on page 10.

Thieves Take Empty Safe

Burglars made off with a safe from the office of Economy Steam Laundry, 607 John St., in a break-in overnight.

City detectives said today the safe was empty.

The thieves made their way into the plant through a skylight.

An electric razor and $15 in pennies was reported missing in another break-in at Speedy Auto Wash, 1011 Fort, where the robbers forced open a rear door.

Band, Choirs At McPherson

The Belmont High Band will give a concert in the McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 3 p.m.

There will also be a combined choir from Glen Lake elementary school and Colwood elementary conducted by Angela Newton.

Choir and band will combine to sing Bobby Gimby's centennial song Canada.

Family Attending Drive-In As Fire Levels Home

A father and his five children returned from a drive-in theatre early today to find their Glen Lake home in ashes.

Fire left only one wall standing of the small one-storey frame house of Leo Toutant at 3030 Jacklin.

Langford Fire Chief Al Lequesne estimated loss in the blaze at about $9,000.

He said he will call in the fire marshal's office to help investigate the fire.

●

By the time firemen arrived the house was blazing from end to end, the chief said. Doors and windows were shut but the basement was open.

The chief said he felt sure the fire started in the basement.

Neighbors reported hearing an explosion from the house, near Jenkins Avenue, about 1 a.m. and it was thought this was the gas tank of an old truck in the basement.

Langford volunteer firemen fought the fire until about 3:30. As they prepared to head back for the station it broke out again and the battle finally ended after 5 a.m.

●

Mr. Toutant, a carpenter, lived in the house with five of his six children, Kelly, Robert, Keith, Shannon and Joey, ranging in age from four to 13.

WANTS 'ALL FACTS'

Mayor to Probe Welfare Charge

By PETE LOUDON

Charges of "punitive treatment" of welfare recipients here will be investigated by Mayor Hugh Stephen.

He said today, "I'm going to brief myself as thoroughly as I can" on the allegations contained in a letter of protest he received this week.

The letter was sent by the Low Income Co-operative of Greater Victoria, a 56-member group of persons receiving welfare benefits.

Mayor Stephen said he would withhold any reply until his investigations are complete.

He said the letter gave rise to a great many questions and added, "I will answer it when I've got all the facts."

Main charges against the city's welfare administration are:

● That names of welfare recipients have been given to the police for surveillance.

● That welfare applicants have been "verbally abused and treated punitively" by welfare staff.

● That three professional social workers have volunteered evidence of this abuse and four welfare recipients are prepared to give testimony backing the charge.

● That present welfare allowances are 30 per cent below adequate living requirements, leading to slum living and deprivation.

● That local welfare administrators being aware of the hardships, have not advised city council.

HEAR EVIDENCE

The group asked the council to investigate and hear evidence. It earlier suggested that evidence be taken in private and under protected circumstances in order that certain salaried persons would not lose their jobs through frankness.

The association is headed by Mrs. Donna Langstaff.

It was learned unofficially that the Low Income Co-operative plans a further step to draw public attention to the plight of welfare recipients.

A plan now afoot is to approach women's auxiliaries to various Victoria churches and invite them to visit homes of welfare recipients.

ADD VOICES

The churchwomen would then be asked to join in further complaints to city hall. Several clergymen already have endorsed the campaign.

One of the main points the association hopes to make is that most people requiring social assistance are in these circumstances through conditions beyond their control. Many are women with children who have been deserted by husbands, often with alcoholism the cause.

Battler Questions 'Steep' Fine

Two men arrested for fighting on a downtown sidewalk Friday night were fined $50 each today.

Peter Havas, 20, of 930 McClure, and Robert Fredrick, also 20, of 910 Empress, both pleaded guilty in central court to causing a disturbance.

"It was just a small argument," Havas told Magistrate Harold Alder of the scuffle in the 700 block Yates.

He questioned the "steep" fines, suggested about $15 was the usual penalty for such offences.

"There's no usual fine today," said the magistrate who earlier suggested the public deserved protection from this sort of incident.

Rider Suffers Cuts to Face

James Spencer, 56, of 700 Cowper suffered face cuts in a two-car crash at Gorge and Rock Bay Avenue this morning.

City police said he was a passenger in a car driven by Myrna Hunter, 1938 Trans-Canada Highway, which was turning from Rock Bay to Gorge when it was in collision with an auto eastbound on Gorge and driven by Charles Cuming, 457 Walter Avenue.

4.8 Mill Increase For Schools

School taxes in Greater Victoria will likely increase by 4.8 mills this year.

Last year the rate was 23.13 mills.

The announcement of the increase was made Friday by Education Minister Leslie Peterson.

Earlier in the day school board officials said it was not possible to estimate this year's increase until the new level of assessments became known.

The new assessments figures will not be made public until around April 15 but were available to Mr. Peterson to make his estimate.

He said the estimated mill rate will increase by an average of 3.55 mills throughout the province.

"The major cause of the increase is teachers' salaries although school districts appear to be increasing their other operating expenses proportionately," he said.

MORE TEACHERS

Increases in teachers' salaries is due not only to wage increases but also to the increased number of teachers needed to handle growing enrolment of students.

Mr. Peterson said government grants to meet education operating costs will total $102,100,000 this year, an increase of 16 per cent over last year's expenditure.

He announced that the basic levy to be raised by school boards has been raised by the government to 16.10 mills from 15.95 in 1966.

Arthur Mayse

On Thursday evenings, our favorite supermart is usually well-populated with shopping couples. This week, however, it was empty to the point of desolation.

A half dozen women browsed their buggies along the aisles. But apart from me only two men were visible, and each looked as if the loved one behind whom he mooched had just caused him to be served with divorce papers.

This curious state of affairs puzzled us no end as, as we chose without competition from among the bargain steaks, we speculated on the cause.

Had the city been smitten by a sudden and massive plague, the announcement of which we'd somehow missed? Or could it be that a squadron of UFOs had landed in Beacon Hill Park?

Or—descending from the implausible to the possible—was some other market offering a host of super-specials on its shelves and in its bins?

Finally we decided the best way to find out was to ask, and put the question to our favorite cashier, the one who always packs the eggs on top.

"Hockey night," she told Win. "The men are all watching the first playoff game." Then, wrapping the lettuce with a flip and a twist, "Don't tell me your husband forgot about it!"

And so home, to learn Chicago had taken the Leafs in a game I wouldn't have missed for all the steak in the Cariboo country!

While nobody can deny that British Columbia's municipal affairs minister is a man of ideas, I would suggest to the Indian that he weigh Dan Campbell's latest proposal with extreme care.

It is a very fine thing to possess your own piece of property, and to share the rights and privileges enjoyed by the home-owner within the standard Canadian municipality. But there is another side to the picture, and I think the dweller on a reserve presently held in trust for his band by the federal government should be fully aware of it.

Municipalized, he will be liable for property tax, and the more valuable the property, the higher that tax rises. Such "gifts" as the home-owner grant and the home acquisition grant tend to shrivel when, with the other hand, the recipient is shelling out tax payments that can run to a good many hundred dollars.

As long range theory, Mr. Campbell's proposal may have merit. But until the B.C. Indian is convinced beyond doubt that it has been framed for his benefit rather than that of revenue-hungry provincial government, he would be wise to hasten slowly.

Among the white man's sayings are two worth heeding. "I fear the Greeks even when they come bearing gifts" is one; and the other, 'Out of the fying pan, into the fire."

I hope the native brother will consider them well.

A note to hand from Bill Wallis of Bellevue, Wash., the strayed Victorian who got to boasting about the size of our B.C. steelhead, then had the bad luck to lose the clipping on which his claims were based.

On the strength of a new supply of clips forwarded, Mr. Wallis is now out of the local Liars' Club, and his fishing cronies are speaking to him again.

By way of comparison, the expatriate sends a photo of a steelie reputed to be the biggest ever caught in Washington's Skykomish River.

It's a nice fish ... but compared to some that have come from the Skeena and the Kispiox, a youngster still.

BELLS RING FOR ACCOUNTANTS

They May Become Phone-Drunk But Taxpayers Happier for It

By TED GASKELL

Remember the Red Skelton character, the punchdrunk boxer who imagined he heard bells?

Some of Victoria's chartered accountants might be forgiven if they become phone-drunk and start hearing imaginary telephone buzzers after today's session with curious taxpayers.

Victoria members of the Inistitute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. set up a one-day telephone inquiry bureau and invited questions on income tax from the public.

And they got them.

The three phones started ringing about 8:45 a.m., 15 minutes before the service was due to start. They never stoped during the morning. Calls were coming in at the rate of 50 an hour. Last year there were 200 during the day.

Investment income, property rental income, Canada Pension Plan deductions, gifts and medical expenses provided popular questions.

Rarely were the accountants stumped. They answered practically all the questions without reference to the thick volumes of tax information standing in the middle of the table. Occasionally they would consult a colleague but mostly they gave answers clearly and quickly off the top of their heads.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Miraculous Ben Hogan turned back the pages of golf today to an almost forgotten era by shooting an amazing six-under-par 66 that gave him the early third-round lead in the Masters tournament.

Arnold Palmer, after suffering a birdie famine in the first two rounds, moved back into contention by shooting a 3-under-par on the first nine.

Kidnap Suspect Described

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI)—A massive manhunt for the suspected kidnapper of 11-year-old Kenneth Young today centred on a young man with olive complexion and dark wavy hair that may have been a wig. The description was supplied to authorities by Kenneth's father, Herbert J. Young, 35, wealthy president of Gibraltar Savings and Loan Association, who handed the one-quarter million dollar ransom to the kidnapper.

Mikita Warns Toronto Player

CHICAGO (CP)—All-star centre Stan Mikita has issued a word of warning to Brian Conacher, Toronto Maple Leafs' six-foot three-inch forward.

"He had better watch out or I'll punch him in the ankle," the 165-pound Mikita said today on the eve of Sunday's second game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinals between the Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks.

Conacher had rattled the shifty Chicago centre during the Leafs' 5-2 loss to the Hawks in the first game Thursday night, when he sent him to the ice with a hard body check.

Empty Train Burns in Station

MONTREAL (CP)—Firemen were fighting a two-alarm blaze today that began in an empty train in the CNR's downtown Central Station. No injuries were reported. The fire began in the undercarriage of the locomotive. It spread quickly to several attached coaches and railway ties before the locomotive was detached and towed away from the platform.

U.S. Backs Truce for Buddha

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States said today it would fully observe a May 23 Vietnam ceasefire provided the Communists also agree to a standstill. The U.S. pledge included a halt in bombing North Vietnam. The bombing lull was promised on the condition that Hanoi did not try to use the 24-hour observance of the birthday anniversary of Buddha to resupply their troops in South Vietnam.

SOUTH KOREA

55 Die, 30 Hurt In Plane Crash

SEOUL (AP) — A twin-engine South Korean Air Force transport plane smashed into a Seoul slum area today. Officials said 55 persons died—including all 14 aboard the plane and 41 on the ground.

They added that six persons were missing and 30 were injured.

The crash set off a huge fire that trapped many victims inside their wooden houses. The injured included 13 high school students who jumped from second-floor classrooms after the plane exploded 50 yards from their school.

Among the dead were the pilot, Capt. Suh Keun-joo, two crew members and 11 passengers on the plane. Besides the students, 17 persons were severely burned or injured.

Authorities said the C-46 transport belonging to the 5th Air Transport Squadron fell shortly before noon, five minutes after taking off in a drizzle from Yoido air base on a flight to Taegu, 130 miles to the southeast.

Eyewitnesses reported that the plane appeared to have engine trouble. They said it circled at low altitude three times, struck the dome of a Christian church on a hill and crashed in flames.

A series of explosions followed as gasoline spilled from the plane and spread the fire over an area 225 yards wide. About 30 wooden buildings housing about 70 families were burned.

Narrow alleys kept fire engines from reaching the area but the blaze was brought under control in 1½ hours.

Rescue workers recovered 15 bodies, including those of crew members and children, within two hours of the crash. More than 10 persons were in hospital with serious burns.

OWNERS' LOCKOUT

Trucking To Halt In U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—Trucking industry negotiators announced today a United States-wide shutdown of 1,500 major firms will begin at midnight tonight in retaliation for continuing Teamsters Union strikes.

M. M. Gordon, prescident of Trucking Employers, Inc., announced the lockout action that would affect some 250,000 of the 450,000 Teamsters Union members involved in national contract negotiations with the industry.

The scheduled shutdown would affect the biggest U.S. trucking firms — they carry about 65 per cent of all truck freight—and bring the worst trucking shutdown in U.S. history.

Earlier in the week, when the threat of a lockout arose during contract negotiations between the union and Trucking Employers Inc., acting Teamsters' president Frank E. Fitzsimmons said: "If we strike and they lock us out, you'll have the damndest strike this country has ever seen."

Gordon said he had no indication from federal officials as to whether an 80-day federal injunction might be issued to halt the strikes and lockout.

Gordon said the industry meanwhile will continue negotiating with the teamsters at the request of federal mediators.

Gordon said at least a dozen teamsters strikes are still going on.

CONTRACT EXPIRED

He said these were among 38 hit-and-run teamsters strikes that had occurred since the old national contract expired eight days ago.

Gordon said the only conditions under which the U.S.-wide shutdown would be called off—would be a halt to all strikes and a promise by teamsters' officials that there would be no more walkouts while negotiations continue.

TEI, which said more than 30 strikes had occurred in major cities, stuck with its wage offer of 44 cents an hour over a three-year contract, including an 11-cent cost-of-living adjustment, plus what it said was another 12 cents in fringe benefits and six cents in additional cost-of-living payments.

OCEAN LANDING PADS DESIGNED FOR 'COPTERS

LONDON (AP)—A project that calls for establishment of a chain of floating islands across the Atlantic to provide aircraft radar control and landing areas for helicopters has been developed by the British Vickers group.

Vickers, which has been working on the project in association with Standard Telephones, announced details of the project Friday.

Prime purpose of the islands would be to extend the control of civil aircraft movements by radar over the sea.

Leonard Redshaw, managing director of the Vickers shipbuilding group, said the key to the design of the islands is an anchoring system capable of holding them in a precise position in 2,000 fathoms.

The platforms, which would resemble oil rigs, would be about 100 feet in diameter.

UN Mission Considers British Talk Offer

ROME (AP)—The three-man UN mission on Aden flew toward Geneva today despite the British government's invitation to go to London to talk over the mission's charge that the British had not co-operated with it. (See also page 33.)

The mission's chairman, Manuel Perezguerrero of Venezuela, said 'We have not yet decided whether to accept the invitation to go to London."

With Perez were the other two mission members, Abdussattar Shalizi of Afghanistan and Moussa Leo Keita of Mali.

The three flew out of the British South Arabian protectorate of Aden Friday, cutting short their fact-finding trip after five days. Their visit was marked by violence by Arab nationalists trying to discredit the South Arabian federal government.

Perez and his aides consulted briefly at the Rome airport with UN Secretary-General U Thant, who arrived a few minutes later for talks with Pope Paul and Italian officials as he headed for the Far East.

Peace Move By South

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam proposed today a one-day ceasefire despite the threat of expanded warfare in the demilitarized zone, and offered to discuss with North Vietnam the possibility of a longer truce.

With concurrence of the United States and her other allies, South Vietnam proposed a 24-hour truce for May 23, the birthday of Buddha. It proposed meeting representatives of North Vietnam in the demilitarized zone at the Ben Hai bridge to consider a possible extension.

Ferguson Stars In 3-1 Victory

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens came t life again in the third period with two goals and bea New York Rangers 3-1 today to take a 2-0 lead in thei best-of-seven Stanley Cup hockey semifinal round.

The teams had been tied 1-1 at the end of two periods, before John Ferguson, with his second goal of the series and Ralph Backstrom with his third, clinched the victory for the Canadiens.

Dick Duff counted for the Montrealers in the opening period on a power-play goal and Bernie Geoffrion got that one back in the second with Jean Beliveau of the Canadiens in the penalty box.

Ferguson's third period goal came just 51 seconds after Al MacNeil, Ranger defenceman, had been penalized for holding Leon Rochefort on what could have been a breakaway for the Montreal right winger.

OUTSHOOT NEW YORKERS

The Rangers fired 11 shots at Rogatien Vachon in the Montreal nets in the opening period, while Canadiens sent 10 at Ed Giacomin, the New York netminder.

Canadiens outshot the Rangers by 9-8 and 12-8 margins in the second and third periods to hold a 31-27 edge for the afternoon.

The rookie Vachon kept Canadiens in the game during the first two periods with the key stops.

The Montreal defence, with rookie Carol Vadnais filling in for an injured Jacques Lapierriere, appeared shaky during the first 40 minutes of play, while the forward lines were unable to get untracked until the final 20 minutes.

Vachon held out an early thrust by Orland Kurtenbach in the early minutes of the first period and slid out for a big save on Marshall.

HOWELL PENALIZED

Howell was sent off at 7:17 of the period for dumping Canadiens' Dave Balon in front of the New York net.

Giacomin foiled a close-in threat from Beliveau just after the penalty, but at 8:55 Duff put Montreal ahead 1-0.

Beliveau made the play as he carried in close and then passed out to Bobby Rousseau. Giacomin stopped Rousseau's drive, but the rebound moved out to Duff who was unguarded 12 feet in front.

Duff lifted the puck beyond the reach of the New York netminder with a hard wrist shot.

The Rangers withstood penalties to Vic Hadfield at 11:37 and defenceman Jim Neilson at 12:24 as Giacomin moved quickly to stifle bids by J. C. Tremblay from the blue line and Yvon

Beliveau Called The Shot

MONTREAL (CP) — It isn't often a player can call his shots in a playoff game, but Montreal Canadiens' Jean Beliveau called the turn on the winning goal in Montreal's 3-1 win over New York Rangers this afternoon.

Beliveau told winger John Ferguson where to position himself to receive a pass that Ferguson converted into the game-winner.

"We were taking a faceoff in the circle to the left of the Ranger net," said Beliveau, "and Ferguson came out to replace Gilles Tremblay on left wing on our power play.

"Ferguson asked me where he should stand in order to pick up a pass that I would try to get to him. I suggested he stay a bit in front of the net roughly between the two faceoff circles. He did, and I was lucky enough to win the draw and get the puck onto his stick."

PRAISES STRATEGY

Ferguson praised Beliveau's strategy in setting up the game winner.

"I asked him where the puck was going and he told me," said Ferguson. "Sure enough the puck landed right on my stick and I just let it go."

HANGOVERS HIKE HIGHWAY SLAUGHTER

That Morning After Is Murder

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—A sober man with a hangover may be a bigger menace behind the wheel of a car than a man who has just had a few cracks at the bottle, says Dr. C. B. Gibbs of the National Research Council.

Moreover, other forms of stress such as lack of sleep and, in particular, frustration, are major causes of car accidents.

In a paper prepared for the Commons justice committee after four years of research, Dr. Gibbs says the driving problem seems to stem from a small minority of drivers with marginal driving ability and low tolerance to stress.

Even if liquor were prohibited entirely "these drivers would probably still cause accidents because of the effects of the many other forms of stress."

He found that some drivers with low readings in breath-analysis tests performed a set of skill tests worse than others with higher readings.

Consequently, when it comes to alcoholic impairment, "the use of the breathalyzer alone could condemn the relatively innocent and exonerate the more guilty."

He has developed an instrument which he calls a "stressalyzer." It detects individual differences in speed, precision and accuracy and in the preference for speed or accuracy.

Reactions of teen-aged drivers are usually more rapid and precise than those of adults. But youths had less experience of improbable events and thus often reacted too quickly on the mistaken assumption that the more familiar event would occur.

Moderate intoxication did not appreciably impair the ability to deal with familiar driving situations. But it increased markedly the time needed to reach a proper decision in unfamiliar ones.

CANADIAN OPTIONS OUTLINED ON DEFENCE

Simmering beneath the surface of Canada's defence policy—and far more vital than the current uproar over armed forces unification—is the question of Canada's future in the North American Air Defence Alliance with the United States.

In a four-part series starting today on Page 5, Ottawa commentator Peter C. Newman outlines Canada's involvement in NORAD and the options for the future.

QUEBEC MINISTER BLASTS SEPARATISM

'Simple Demagogery'

QUEBEC (CP) — Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, clenching his fists during a 35-minute defence of Confederation, Friday night slapped aside separatism for Quebec as "pure and simple demagogery."

Mr. Marchand spoke before a Liberal audience of more than 1,000 at a $10-a-plate banquet honoring him as new leader of the Quebec Liberals in the federal government at Ottawa.

He was flanked by at least eight federal cabinet ministers, including External Affairs Minister Martin. Also attending was former prime minister Louis St. Laurent, who applauded the Marchand remarks vigorously.

"I am celebrating the centennial of Confederation," said Mr. Marchand, a forme leader of the Confederation o National Trade Unions, t prolonged applause.

Mr. Marchand said tha with the British North America Act of 1867 "for the first time in our history we had a act which accords forma rights to French-Canadians i Canada."

French-Canadians were given rights to education, resources in Quebec and the right to use their language. They in fact had "all the fundamental liberties."

He said there are "injustices, false tensions and false differences."

Among these was the tendency of some to oversimplify the problems of Quebec and blame Confederation as the source of everything that wen

BRITONS LOST IN BRAZIL

Jungle Expedition Could End Mystery

LONDON (UPI) — A British scientific expedition will set out this summer into Brazil's foreboding Mato Grosso (Great Forest) where English explorer Col. Percy Fawcett disappeared 42 years ago.

The odds are overwhelmingly against the expedition coming across Fawcett, the way Stanley discovered Livingston. Fawcett would be 100 years old.

But Fawcett's family still clings to the notion that his son, who vanished with him, may yet turn up. He would be 63.

The expedition's leader, zoologist Dr. Ian Bishop of England's Leicester University, flew to Brazil to make preparations for the other members of the party, who will join him in June.

The team will include an anthropologist, biologist, sociologist and botanist.

The expedition is being undertaken jointly by Britain's Royal Geographic Society and Royal Society of Scientists in behalf of the Brazilian government's Central Brazil Foundation.

HIGHWAY ROUTE

Its main task will be to ease the way for a highway the government hopes to construct through the largely unexplored region, which is about twice the size of Texas.

Hostile Indians armed with bows and poison arrows inhabit the area, located in the heart of Brazil. Flesh-eating Piranha fish infest its rivers.

The team is expected to spend about two years in the area.

The expedition will not actively seek Fawcett or his son but much of its work will be centred in the Xingu River basin, from where the explorer was last heard.

Fawcett, then 58, disappeared with his 21-year-old son Jack and another youth, Ralei Rommel, in May 1925 while seeking the remains of what he believed was a great civilization.

No trace of the reputed jungle city has been found.

At least five persons have lost their lives trying to find Fawcett.

In 1951, bones were discovered in a shallow grave near his supposed trail. Scientists in Britain and Brazil agreed they were not Fawcett's remains, nor those of the two youths.

"WHITE GOD"

From time to time, reports have filtered out of the jungle telling of a bearded white man, presumably Jack, living among the tribes as a "white god."

A British journalist, Edmar Morel, sent to find Fawcett returned several years ago with a fair-skinned Indian boy, who claimed he was Jack's son by his marriage to an Indian girl. The Fawcett family refused to believe the story.

Fawcett's other son, Brian, now 60, led an expedition into the region shortly after the bones were found but learned nothing.

In an interview last week, Brian Fawcett said his trip convinced him the widely believed theory that all three were murdered by the Kalapalos, a hostile tribe, was false.

"I think the whole story was cooked up in hopes of collecting a reward for the information," he said.

He said he believes there is a "distinct possibility" his brother Jack is alive.

If the expedition should run across such a man, the meeting would surely prompt another historic greeting: "Jack Fawcett, I presume?"

WIRE BRIEFS

Bandits Hunted

HANEY (CP) — RCMP were searching for two or possibly three men who robbed the Maple Ridge Hotel of $1,100 Friday. One of the bandits, believed armed with a pistol, took the money from the manager of the hotel in his office while a second man waited in the lobby, police said.

Move Permitted

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Allegheny County Bar Association Friday urged voters to support a proposal for a state constitutional convention and eight amendments, including one that would permit residents to move from Pennsylvania. "Apparently there was this old law on the books a long time ago making it illegal for people to emigrate from the state," an association spokesman said.

Cable Breaks

MONTREAL (CP) — A break in the Canada-Britain transatlantic cable in the Gulf of St. Lawrence off the coast of Newfoundland disrupted communications between Britain, the Western Hemisphere and the Far East for three hours today.

Lecturer Cleared In Drug Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—A charge of possession of marijuana against Helen Geisler, 27, a lecturer at Simon Fraser University, was dropped Friday in county court.

Her husband, Jerry Geisler, 37, pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded in custody until April 27 for sentencing.

Geisler, a construction worker, was remanded for sentencing to April 24.

The Geislers were charged last October after police searched their apartment.

RESTING in a Fernie hospital is Robert (Limey Bob) Clegg, 37, who survived the mine explosion Monday at Natal. Mr. Clegg, of Fernie, lost his step-father and several relatives in an English mining disaster in 1950. He came to Canada last July.

RENOWNED physicist Sir Charles Wright, 80, has retired from the Pacific Naval Laboratory at Esquimalt. Sir Charles explored the Arctic six times and discovered the camp of Lieutenant Robert Falcon Scott.

Improve Cedar Hill Cross Road

Oak Bay council has given notice that it plans to improve part of Cedar Hill Cross Road under local improvement plan.

The road from Gordon Head Road to Cadboro Bay Road will be paved and curbed, storm drains installed and a concrete sidewalk laid on the south side.

Cost is estimated at $196,000 with the provincial government providing $90,000, the municipality $88,357 and the frontagers $17,643.

The work will be paid for over a 20-year period.

Neighbors Help Family Fix Home

Housing problem of the fire-hit Bill family has been temporarily solved.

Mr. and Mrs. David Bill lost all their belongings when a fire Tuesday burned their Patricia Bay Indian Reserve home to ground level.

Other residents of the reserve are now working to take down the few charred timbers still standing and clean the deck of the house.

Plywood will be used to patch holes in the flooring and polyethelene sheets will be laid to make the basement weatherproof so the Bill family can live there until the house can be rebuilt.

Assistance is being sought from the department of Indian affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill and their three young children have been supplied with clothing, bedding and other household articles, including a stove and fridge, through donations from private individuals and the Red Cross.

Mrs. Charles Smith, of 507 Downey Road, who started the drive, said, "The drive has been tremendously successful.

"The Hertz company has donated a truck for two days, free of charge, so that articles can be picked up from the donors in Victoria.

"I think the family has just about everything they need," she said.

Cournoyer from the corner of the net.

Vachon had his trouble late in the period as his defence refused to clear the puck and Phil Goyette, playing with a groin injury, and Bob Nevin kept popping the puck at him.

Nevin picked up four stitches behind his ear after stopping a Terry Harper shot with his head.

Jean Beliveau picked up a minor penalty at 10:24 of the middle period for holding Rangers' Earl Ingarfield, and referee Bill Friday added a 10-minuted misconduct when the big Montreal centre argued the call too strenuously.

With 21 seconds remaining in Beliveau's penalty, Geoffrion pulled New York to even terms with a blazing shot from awkward angle as he cruised down the right side inside the Montreal blue line. The shot completely eluded Vachon.

The New Yorkers were caught with too many men on the ice during a line change at 2:50 of the final period and drew a bench minor, which was served by Jean Ratelle.

MACNEIL SENT OFF

At the 6:55 mark MacNeil was penalized for grabbing Leon Rochefort as the Montreal forward had an open path to the New York goal.

While MacNeil was off, Ferguson, playing with Beliveau and Cournoyer, put Montreal ahead 2-1 as he took the puck off the stick of defenceman Arnie Brown and beat Giacomin with a 12-foot backhander.

Backstrom clinched the win at 13:25 when he took a passout from Claude Larose and had the puck behind Giacomin before the New York goalie could move on the play.

With one minute remaining in the game New York coach Emile Francis pulled Giacomin from the nets in favor of an extra forward.

The move almost backfired as Beliveau took a long shot from his own blue line with 15 seconds left to play, but the puck hit the post.

Referee Bill Friday called 13 minor penalties and Beliveau's misconduct. Montreal picked up seven of them.

SUMMARY

First period — 1. Montreal, Duff (1) (Rousseau, Beliveau) 8:55. Penalties—Harris 1:23, Hadfield 3:20, Cournoyer 4:50, Howell 7:17, Hadfield 11:37, Ferguson 13:40.

New Protests In Belgium Face Humphrey

BRUSSELS (AP)—U.S. Vice-President Hubert Humphrey flew from Paris to Belgium today on the final visit of his European tour and what was expected to be a relaxed weekend of conferences and ceremony.

But as he lunched with King Baudouin and later conferred with Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel, anti-war demonstrations erupted downtown. They were less violent than the egg-throwing, flag-burning demonstrations in Paris.

Pro-Chinese Communists paraded briefly but were dispersed by police. In another part of the city, the Union for the Defence of Peace paraded with posters assailing U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.

Six persons were seized by police.

HAD PAINT CANS

Earlier, three men with cans of powdered paint were taken into custody and ordered held until Humphrey's departure.

Premier Paul van den Boeynants greeted Humphrey and his wife at Melsbroeck air force base near Brussels.

"We welcome and value the efforts which you and your country and the people of Europe are making to build a new and vital community within Europe," Humphrey said.

As Humphrey left Orly airfield in Paris, about 250 youths waved banners, scattered leaflets and shouted for peace in Vietnam in a renewal of anti-American demonstrations called by the French Communist party.

Police cleared traffic from the highway from Paris for Humphrey's ride to Orly and kept pedestrians from standing along the road.

said that the Rangers played a much tigher checking game than they had in the first game of the semifinal series last Thursday.

"They were checking very well and it made it more difficult for our players to get good shots on the net," said Blake. "For that reason, we weren't nearly as sharp around the net as we were in the first game."

Blake said that the Canadiens had missed some good opportunities, notably when Jean-Guy Talbot got a breakaway on the Ranger net while Montreal was playing shorthanded early in the second period.

"Talbot tried to deke the goalie and went too far to his left," Blake said. "But, when you're going straight in on a goalie like Talbot was, and the goalie is stationed right in the middle of the net, it's very hard to deke him one way or another.

"Our team played well," manager-coach Emile Francis said.

"I've got no squawks," Francis added. "We got a penalty in the third period, and they capitalized on it."

He was referring to a two-minute sentence against New York defenceman Al MacNeil. While MacNeil was off, John Ferguson scored for Montreal to break a 1-1 tie.

PHILOSOPHICAL

"The defenceman is out there to get a piece of the guy," Francis said. "If you get a penalty on the play, you get a penalty."

MacNeil played a regular shift on the Rangers' defence in place of Jim Neilson, who saw little action.

"MacNeil did a real good job from the time he went out, so I left him there."

UN Fails to Solve British-Aden Problem

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—Aden, in many ways an ugly blot in Britain's backyard, has suddenly turned into a microcosm of the weakness and inadequacy of the United Nations.

Few officials who had watched the brutality of terrorism in that little British colony near the edge of the Red Sea were convinced that the three-man UN mission would find some quick and acceptable solution to the ceaseless bloodshed.

But there were hopes in London that some path might be found under which Britain could gracefully withdraw in 1968 without leaving behind a murderous bloodbath that would remain on its conscience for many years.

There appears to be no doubt that Britain wants to get out of Aden. The military cost of trying to control that restless colony is mounting. The so-called liberation fronts, financed and supported by the United Arab Republic, are increasing their grenade-and-rifle pressure against the British troops. They are convinced that in the end Britain must beat a hasty retreat and leave the South Arabian Federation, headed by British-supported sheikhs, at the mercy of the "liberators."

HOPED FOR AN OUT

Possibly realizing the extreme difficulties of its position, Britain had hoped that even though the UN mission did not seem sympathetic, it might find a path Britain could accept as the lesser of two evils.

The encouraging element, as far as Britain was concerned, was that the mission was criticized and cold-shouldered by the terrorist organizations. That would be unlikely to arouse great sympathy for the grenade-throwers among mission members.

Nonetheless, the mission did try to reach the terrorist leaders and demanded use of Aden television for this purpose. But instead of asking the existing administration for this service, the mission took the view the administration was not a legal entity and that since Aden was a British colony, permission should be given by the British government.

Britain argues that it could not do this; that the properly-constituted authority is the Aden administration. Behind this rather technical view probably was the suspicion that the mission intended to use television to deliver anti-British statements that would appeal to terrorist leaders.

MISSION FAILS

The British suspicion seems to have been borne out by the furious anti-British statements made by the mission as it bolted from Aden, its objective shattered by the unyielding adversaries.

Perhaps the most unworthy statement was that by Abdul Satar Shalizi, a former deputy prime minister of Afghanistan, who maintained that "Britain is the cause of more bloodshed in the world than anyone else."

All missions are likely to contain varying views. But a UN mission, to be effective, should try to see both sides of the issue. The difficulty, in this case, is that Aden is seen as a British colony and colonists have no popularity among the bulk of the emerging UN nations.

RC Suggests All Bishops Be Elected

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest-author has called for a dramatic break in church tradition to permit laymen to elect popes and bishops.

Rev. Joseph O'Donoghue of Washington proposed Friday that popes be elected to a single 10-year term and bishops to single eight-year terms. Father O'Donoghue is a member of the priests' senate of the Washington archdiocese.

This could result, he said, in the election of younger men, adding: "The cardinals won't elect a 40-year-old pope now in the fear he may rule for 40 more years."

In an interview he said: "It was the practice in the first 12 centuries that a bishop couldn't take over without the approval of the clergy and the people."

Earlier, Father O'Donoghue told the convention of the National Council of Catholic Men that laymen and priests should be given greater freedom in charting church policy.

Father O'Donoghue, author of Elections in the Church, said Roman Catholic priests might leave the priesthood in great numbers if they and the laity are forbidden greater involvement in church policy.

Pair Sentenced To Two Years In Cheque Racket

Two men involved in stealing blank cheques, forging and cashing them each were handed two-year penitentiary terms Friday.

Roy A. Cook, 32, of Vancouver, had earlier been convicted of stealing the cheques from Stocker's Security Storage and Warehouse Ltd., 776 Topaz, in an overnight break-in at the firm March 11.

Craig Brown, 22, of 640 Speed, was given his sentence for trying to cash six of the forged cheques at a number of city stores immediately following the burglary.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said it was obvious the crimes were part of a "large-scale enterprise" and called for severe sentences to discourage others from the same sort of offence. ANY—
